No trace has yet been found of the young boy who suddenly disappeared from his home near Madoc, after the death of his sister from a gunshot wound. He has been missing since Sept. 20th.

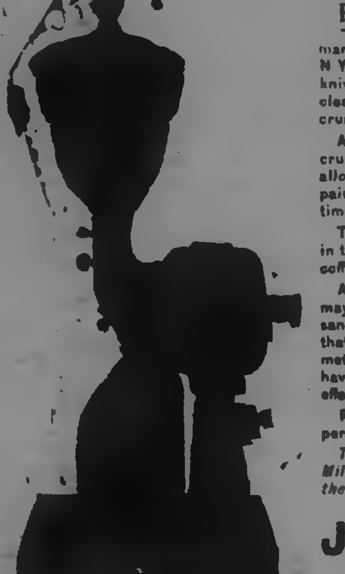
Mr. J. J. Fair, for eleven years municipal clerk of the Township of Cavan, has tendered his resignation to the Council on account of impaired eyesight.

The first meeting for the Literary Society of St. Peter's T.A.S. will be held on Friday, Oct. 17, when Rev. Dean McColl will be the speaker.

St. John's choir will meet for practice in the church to-night at 8 p.m. The boys are asked to assemble at 7.30 prompt, so that they may leave at 8.30. Every chorister is asked to be present.

All Saints' choir will practice in the church to-night at 8 p.m. prompt. In view of the standard music now in practice, it is important that no member of the choir should be absent.

The annual thank offering of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of St. Paul's Church will be held to-morrow afternoon in the Sunday school room. The different papers will be read and the reports will also be presented. A good program has been prepared by the ladies in charge.



To the Lover of Good Coffee

We wish to advise you that we have installed in our store a new

manufactured by the A. J. Deer Co., of Hornell, N.Y. This machine is equipped with steel knives which cut the berry into fairly uniform, clean cut particles, instead of grinding and crushing it, as by the old method.

All Coffee Mills heretofore used will only crush the berry mutilating the minute oil cells, allowing the Coffee Oil to evaporate, thus impairing the strength and flavor, and in a short time the coffee becomes rancid, sour.

This is one reason why a pound of coffee cut in this Mill will make more cups of full strength coffee than will any coffee ground the old way.

Another feature about this Mill is that you may have your coffee cut as fine as the finest sand and it will still be practically free from that fine dust which is produced by the old method of grinding. You will, therefore, always have a clear cup of coffee instead of a muddy effect—a result of using the old style mills.

ROYAL CUT COFFEE is also adaptable for percolators or French Drip Coffee Pots.

Try a pound of our Coffee cut on a Royal Mill and we know you will be pleased with the results.

Yours truly,

J. JOHN 336 WATER ST. PETERBORO

The St. George's Choral Society held their fourth practice of this season in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute on Tuesday last when the register showed a gratifying attendance of over eighty voices. There are sixty-eight numbers in Handel's oratorio "Judas Maccabaeus," but about forty are generally used. Of the twenty choruses to be sung by the chorus at the "Grand Annual Concert" next April, the following have already been put in practice:

No. 2 Mourn, Ye Afflicted Children.
No. 8 O Father, Whose Almighty Power.
No. 11 We Come, in Bright Array.
No. 27 Fallen is the Foe.
No. 46 We Hear, We Hear.
No. 58 See the Conquering Hero
No. 60 Sing Unto God.
No. 68 Hallelujah, Amen.

The Village Blacksmith, part song. The Gipsy Chorus, Balfe, ladies. Admiral Tom, part song, gentlemen. Nautical Airs, Fantasia, the chorus. The Merry Old Maid, glee, the chorus. It will at once be seen that swift use is made of the two hours a week on such a list, and the committee have arranged for more copies of music. The committee heartily thank the citizens for many expressions of appreciation of the work of the society, especially the Board of Education and the press.

There is always a member of committee at the door on practice nights to welcome new singers or visitors.

PETERBORO PRESBYTERY IN SESSION AT ST. PAUL'S

SOLVING A DIFFICULT PROBLEM

The Presbytery of Peterboro is in session to-day at St. Paul's Church, with a representative attendance. The important business before Presbytery is to endeavor to bring about a satisfactory solution of the problem brought about by the dissatisfaction of congregations, which include Springville, Omemee, Lakevale, Mount Pleasant and several others.

The problem has been before the Presbytery for some time.

At the session, this afternoon, a resolution was moved that the petition of Springville, Pontypool and Lakevale to be joined, be granted and that the Presbytery provide service for Bethany either in conjunction with Omemee or independently.

STEEL BRACKET FOR TOP OF BUILDING

Mr. Jas Murty, Hunter street, has just received an attractive steel bracket which will be used on the building at the north-east corner of Simcoe street and George street, which is owned by the Toronto Loan and Savings Company. The bracket, is about three feet long and about the same in heigth and not only will serve as an attractive ornament, but will keep any bricks that become loose, from falling to the sidewalk.

STILL COMING TO THIS CITY

Immigration Agent Finds Employment for New-comers

Despite the fact that the immigration season is over, Mr. Finch Miller is still kept busy looking after people from the old country. During the last few days Mr. Miller has secured positions for five or six people, who came out from the old country this season, but stayed in Toronto. Owing to the scarcity of labor in the Queen City they came to this city.

Mr. Miller is very much in favor of a suggestion of License Inspector Frank Kerr, of Winnipeg, whose opinion is that there should be a chain of free employment bureaus across Canada in all the principal cities working under some central authority, such as provided by the Dominion Government.

DR. T.W.H. YOUNG AT SASKATOON

Has Opened a Suite of Offices in Canada Building

The Saskatoon Star says:—Saskatoon's medical fraternity has received during the past week, a valuable addition by the arrival from Peterborough, Ont., of Dr. T. W. H. Young.

Dr. Young left Peterborough on September 17, and arrived in the city on Sept. 23. He is staying with his brother Capt. E. V. Young, in Nutana. Capt. Young is a well known accountant of Saskatoon. In an interview with a representative of the Star to-day Dr. Young expressed a very high opinion of Saskatoon.

"Three years ago," he said, "Mrs. Young and I travelled west, visiting Calgary, Medicine Hat and other cities, but not Saskatoon. We returned home fully determined to settle out west. This last summer, however, we took another holiday trip and this time called at Saskatoon. We were so struck with Saskatoon's greater advantages, that we decided that we would make our home here."

Dr. Young has opened a suite of offices in the Canada building specializing in diseases of women and children, in which work he has been notably engaged for 18 years in Peterborough. He is a graduate of Edinburgh and Glasgow and came to Canada twenty years ago. He was chairman of the Peterborough Board of Health, and attending surgeon of the C.P.R., and was also a coroner in Ontario.

Mrs. Young and family are still in Peterborough, and will arrive as soon as the doctor has taken up full residence here.

A paste made of equal parts of turpentine and myrrh applied to the white spots on finger nails will prevent them from developing.

The Great Lakes.

We all know in a general way that Lake Superior is the largest and Lake Ontario the smallest of the Great Lakes, but the relative facts are scarcely known to the average person. While Lake Michigan ranks second in size, being forty-five miles shorter than Lake Superior, it is twice as deep at its greatest depth, the figures being 900 feet for Lake Superior and 1,800 feet for Lake Michigan, so that in cubical contents the latter far outreaches Superior. Lake Huron's greatest depth also is a hundred feet more than that of Lake Superior, so that the greatest is not superior in everything, after all.

Lake Erie and Lake Ontario are comparatively shallow, with maximum depth of 204 feet and 412 feet, and yet we should not like to fall overboard in either of them. In width—maximum figures — Lake Superior comes first with 160 miles, Huron second with 105, Michigan third with eighty-four, Erie fourth with sixty, and Ontario last with only fifty-two miles of greatest breadth.

In comparison with its area, Ontario leads with a drainage of 29,769 square miles for its area of 6,700, the others being Erie, drainage 39,680, area 10,000 square miles; Huron, drainage 74,000, area 23,000 square miles; Michigan, drainage, 70,000, area 22,400 square miles; and Superior, drainage 85,000, area 32,000 square miles. Drop in elevation is very gradual, Lake Superior being 600 feet above sea level, Michigan 578 feet, Huron 574 feet, Erie 564 feet, and then comes a big drop to 234 feet for Lake Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. Felix Caron, of Grand Junction are taking a motorcycle journey of several hundreds of miles as part of their honeymoon.

SPANIARDS AND GERMANS ARE KILLED BY REBELS

Reports Received at Mexican Capital Tell of Slaughter of Foreigners in Capture of City by Insurectos—Minster of the Interior Denies Stories.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 10.—Reports were received by an insurance company and also by the German Bank yesterday that Spaniards and Germans were killed at Torreon. The number of the victims was not reported. The Deutsche-sud-American Riche Bank notified the Bank of Montreal yesterday afternoon of the killing of the Germans.

Bernardo J. De Cologan, Spanish Minister, and Rear Admiral Paul Von Heintz, the German Minister called on the Department of War yesterday afternoon to confer with Gen Blanquet, but the result of the conference was not made public.

Manuel Garza Aldape, Minister of the Interior, yesterday afternoon confirmed the news of the fall of Torreon. He said the city probably passed into the hands of the rebels on Oct. 2, the Federals having evacuated it on the preceding day. The Minister denied emphatically the report of the massacre of foreigners, but indicated that his denial was based on his belief that Panfiele and Nateras, the rebel leaders who captured Zacatecas and treated the foreigners there well, were in command of the insurgents at Torreon.

Generals Ignacio Bravo, Munguia and Escurado are to be court martialed, as there was no reason for their evacuation of Torreon, according to the War Department.

Minister Aldape stated that he was not informed regarding the reported defeat of Gen. Alvirez at La Loma although, owing to the persistent reports, it is feared that something has happened to his troops.

General Manager Clarke of the national lines reports that last week the railroad division from Tampico to San Luis Potosi suffered damage of more than 2,000,000 pesos through rebel activity.

GIRL ATTACKED BY MAD BULL

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 10.—Glenna, the ten-year-old daughter of Leslie Booth, was attacked by an infuriated bull opposite her home on Perth street and before being rescued received a terrible gash on the leg, besides, other body injuries, none of which are considered serious. The girl attempted to climb a fence in an effort to escape the animal and was driven clear through the barricade by the force of the charge of the infuriated beast. The bull was shot on the spot by the child's father.

Toronto Mason Honored.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Oct. 10.—Alexander Patterson of Toronto was elevated last night from the office of second to first vice-president of the Masonic Relief Association of the United States and Canada, which closed its tenth biennial sessions here in the Masonic temple. Andrew J. O'Reill, of St. Louis was chosen president. It was decided to hold the next biennial convention in Indianapolis, Ind., although about ten cities were contesting for it.

Episcopal Church Offering.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—Chief interest in the general convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church now in session here centered to-day in the united offering, the amount of which was to be made public at Carnegie Hall. Three years ago, at Cincinnati, the total reached $243,000. Estimates of the probable amount of this year's offering ran as high as $600 000.

MUST PAY PAMAGES.

MONTREAL, Oct. 10—Newspapers in this province that publish reports of public meetings in the course of which utterances of a libellous nature are made, do so at their own risk and on their own responsibility. Such is the decision of Justice Panneton in a judgment wherein his lordship yesterday condemned La Patrie to pay Armand Lavergne the sum of $250.

Mr. Lavergne sued on account of certain accusations made by Albert Sevigny, M.P., in the course of a speech during the Hochelaga bye election campaign a year ago. La Patrie reported the meeting, gave a faithful resume of Mr. Sevigny's speech and maintained in its plea that the utterances made at the meeting in question, being a matter of public interest, formed a fair subject for a newspaper article.

Mr. Sevigny himself admitted that the report published was a good summary of his speech, but where the newspaper principally erred, according to Justice Panneton, was by drafting a heading, wherein the accusation of Mr. Sevigny was made a sort of positive assertion.

Official Opening of Canal.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—President Wilson at two o'clock to-day will press a button and flash to the works on the Isthmus of Panama the signal to blow up the last barrier between the two oceans. Arrangement for this, the final act in the construction of the canal, were announced yesterday. The temporary dam which is to be destroyed will let water into the Culebra cut.

FEDERATION OF LABOR URGES MANY CHANGES

Would Prevent the Organization of the Industrial Workers of the World in Canada—They Also Want Lord's Day Act Strictly Enforced in Bakeries.

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 10.—The two sessions of the second day of the convention of the Canadian Federation of Labor were taken up largely with a consideration of the report of the committee on resolutions which resulted in the adoption of the many recommendations, including the following:

That the Ontario Government be requested to insist upon a more rigid enforcement of the Lord's Day Act regarding bakeries. That the Provincial Government of Quebec be requested to open a class of applied science in the Quebec technical school for the benefit of the different trades in which such knowledge is necessary. That the Dominion Government be requested to take all classes of employes of the Government into consideration when dealing with the question of superannuations, allowances, etc. That the Federal and Provincial Governments be urged as far as they can to prevent the establishment of the Industrial Workers of the World and such illegal bodies whose lawless methods of agitating and conducting strikes are a standing menace to the progress of all well-regulated labor unions and also to the best interests of the industrial life of Canada. That the Quebec Government be requested to take the necessary steps to arrive at the adoption of a system by which engineers' certificates of boiler inspecting issued in one province shall be recognized in all the others. That the Quebec Government be requested to amend the factories' act so that the present regulated hours of labor in cotton mills shall be applied to all other factories employing women, girls or boys. That the Quebec Government be requested to establish a bureau of inspection the same to issue engineers' and boiler inspectors' certificates and formulate modernized regulations concerning the construction and inspection of steam boilers.

LAURIER'S TOUR ENDS.

Liberal Leader Concludes Stumping In Chateauguay.

ST MARTINE, Que., Oct. 10.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier delivered his concluding address in the Chateauguay campaign here yesterday afternoon.

Sir Wilfrid, in his address, while expressing confidence in the issue quoted a remark of the late Sir John Macdonald with regard to the uncertainty of elections. "But whatever comes," he added, "whether Hon Mr Fisher is elected or beaten, we will continue the fight which we have commenced against those whose campaign of duplicity in the election of 1911 deceived the people and temporarily obscured the brightness of those principle for which the Liberals have ever fought. The fight will continue. That is the last word I have to say."

Addresses were also delivered by Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Mr. R. L. Calder, Hon. Charles Marcil, and Mr R. C. Smith, K.C. Sir Wilfrid also addressed another open-air meeting at Chateauguay village.

Winter Fair Improvements.

GUELPH, Oct. 10.—Robt. S. Wade, secretary of the Winter Fair board, has inspected the Winter Fair building, and as a result some suggestions made by Mr. Wade will be acted on.

The Winter Fair building will be whitewashed. Around the horse arena three tiers of benches will be built, and to connect the sheep pens with the lower part of the building a stairway will be constructed. An entrance from the Winter Fair into the auditorium of the City Hall will be made, so that it may be used for the grain exhibit. Other improvements also will be made.

Nineteen Plead Guilty.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 10.—Contrary to expectation, nineteen of the union men charged with rioting in the recent labor troubles at Nanaimo, pleaded guilty yesterday morning, when they were brought before Judge Howey for trial at the Coal City. All of these were young men, mostly English miners, and none were officials of the union.

ONTARIO APPLES TO CAPETOWN

Province Sends Her First Apples to South Africa

FROM ST. KITTS

TORONTO, Oct. 10.—Ontario has found a new market for her apples. The first shipment was made yesterday from St. Catharines to Cape Town, South Africa.

The shipment comprised three thousand bushels of "King" apples, the chief rival of the famous "Northern Spies." The output was gathered from 245 trees in an orchard at St. David's, belonging to Mr. George H. Gooderham, M.P.P., of Toronto. The fruit was packed in special boxes in compliance with the fruit shipment act.

A prominent merchant of Cape Town, while passing through the Niagara Peninsula about a month ago, was so impressed with the fruit that he made an offer for the entire output of the orchard. As a result Mr Gooderham obtained a price fully twenty per cent. better than he could in the home market, besides being relieved of the freight charges.

It is also understood that the same purchaser made contracts for apples to be shipped to South Africa next year with several other producers in the district, who could not accommodate him this year on account of the fact that they had already closed contracts with Toronto commission men.

TREATED CASE BY WIRELESS

Surgeons On Other Ships Told Captain How To Stop Hemorrhage

MONTREAL, Oct. 10.—The fact that a fireman of the C. P. R. Atlantic liner Monmouth is alive to-day is almost certainly due to the fact that he was on board a ship which was fitted with wireless.

James Arthur, the fireman in question, was attacked with internal trouble of some kind accompanied by severe hemorrhage. There was no surgeon on board the Monmouth, during the voyage which terminated Wednesday with the ship's arrival at Montreal, so her commander, Capt. N Griffiths, got into communication with the Allan liner Hesperian. By wireless he detailed the sufferer's symptoms to the Hesperian's surgeon, and received daily prescriptions in return.

After the Hesperian had passed beyond the range of the Monmouth's wireless apparatus, Capt. Griffiths managed to get in touch with the Montezuma, of the same line, and the surgeon of the sister ship continued the good work.

BAD ONES TO BE FED.

Only Minor Suffragettes Will Be Let Out of Prison.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The belief of the militant incendiaries that under the "cat and mouse" act they were assured of speedy release from prison by "hunger striking" and could then repeat their offence, received a rude shock yesterday by the announcement of the Home Secretary that Miss May Richardson, who has been in prison since Oct 4 on the charge of arson, and who has been refusing food since her arrest, would not be given her freedom. The prison authorities have been instructed to resort to forcible feeding, if necessary, to prevent the incendiaries from starving themselves to death.

The Home Secretary says that the act will continue to be applied, as heretofore, to minor suffragette offenders, whose crimes do not include acts of serious violence.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY NEAR NEW YORK

Mother and Son Found Dead Beside Tell-tale Revolver

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The Queen's County Jail in Long Island City, just across the East River, from New York, was the scene of a midnight double tragedy, which was probably a case of murder and suicide. Henry C. Schleth, who was warden of the jail, returned to his apartments there at an early hour yesterday morning and found his wife and four-year-old son dead, each with a bullet wound in the right temple. Near Mrs. Schleth was found a revolver with two chambers empty. Both mother and child were in their night clothes.

Eminent Latinist Dead.

Since 1893 Prof. Ellis had been corpus professor of Latin literature at Oxford. He was born at Barming, Kent, in 1834. He was appointed professor of Latin at University College, London, in 1870, and Latin reader at Oxford from 1883 to 1893. He was the author of many works on various phases of Latin literature.

IS CONVICT FOR BENEFIT OF HUMANITY.

THOMAS MOTT OSBORNE

Voluntarily Thomas Mott Osborne, president of the New York State Prison Reform Commission, has become a prisoner in Auburn Prison. He has donned the garb of a convict, is eating the same food, marching in their lines, working with them, and, in fact, he has become one of them in every particular so far as their incarceration is concerned.

Mr. Osborne is going through the ordeal for the benefit of humanity and to make known to the world whether the present system of putting men in cells is the only way to reform them.

MACK AGAIN

Catcher Schang in the Limelight for the Athletics

SCORE 6-5

The Athletics made it three out of four in the World's Series, by defeated New York to-day by 6-5. Demaree, McGraw's youngster started against the Mackmen, but failed to deliver although he did not get the support accorded Bush in yesterday's game. He was relieved in the fifth by Marquard, but the Athletics liked the change and added another brace of runs to their already big lead, Schang's single sending the runners home.

URGE DAMMING CHIPPEWA CREEK

OTTAWA, Oct. 10.—The damming of Chippewa Creek so as to connect the city of Niagara Falls with the new Welland canal was urged upon Hon. Dr. Reid, acting Minister of Railways, yesterday by a delegation headed by Evan Fraser, M.P.P. The creek enters the Niagara River within a mile of the city, and from the outlet to the new canal is about seven miles. A dam is required to make the creek navigable and furnish Niagara Falls with water transportation like Welland and St. Catharines.

Say Commission is a Failure.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—(C.A.P. Cable)—Commercial quarters are betraying some scepticism as to the ultimate result of the Dominion Trades Commission. It is officially stated that no further meeting will be held till November, and no further evidence taken from this country. The commissioners are due to go to South Africa early next year, and must subsequently visit Canada, and also inspect the Panama Canal. There are rumors that the commission will collapse before completing its labors.

Reclaim 11 Acres From Sea.

In the reclamation from the sea now completed, of 11 1-2 acres to form the site of the new Marine Station at Dover, Eng., 850,000 tons of chalk taken from the eastern cliffs were used. The retaining seawall is over 2,000 feet long, 73 feet 9 inches high, and 35 feet wide at the base. Nearly 200,000 tons of mud and debris were dredged up by the contractors in clearing the foundations. The contract has involved an expenditure of $2,000,000.

"RITUAL" MURDER TRIAL ON

All Russia Watches Proceedings Against Jewish Suspect

KIEV, Russia, Oct. 10.—The indictment of Mandel Beilisa for the murder of Andrew Yusbinsky on March 25, 1911, near this city, was read immediately upon the reassembling of the court yesterday morning.

Widespread interest was attracted by the trial, owing to the report that the prosecution would advance the theory that the killing of the Christian boy Yushinsky was a "ritual murder."

The court-room was crowded when the four judges, presided over by Judge Boldirlew, took their seats. The jurymen sleep in the court-house during the trial, and are kept without newspaper or letters until their verdict has been given.

The tables in the centre of the court contained the exhibits to be used in evidence, including dozens of sealed and clothbound packages, a large wooden box and a mysterious parcel wrapped in green paper. The Catholic priest, Pranaites, one of the principal witnesses for the prosecution, occupied a seat in the well of the court next to Rabbi Maze of Moscow, and both of them sat reading books and taking notes.

Opposed To Striped Clothing.

KINGSTON, Oct. 10.—The grand jury at the assize court here asked that the jail prisoners be provided with less conspicuous uniforms. For the most part the men confined are short course men for drunkenness and the jurors do not think it is right to place them out cutting the court house lawn and doing other work in view of the public in striped clothing.

Babe's Body In Sleeper.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 10.—The body of a four months' old boy was found with his mouth stuffed with cotton in the berth of a C. P. R. train from Toronto yesterday morning.

SECRET UNION

London (Eng.) Police Organize in Defiance of Orders

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—A cable to The Tribune from London says: "Efforts are being made to form a secret trade union among the members of the metropolitan police. The Daily Express understands that in spite of official opposition to scheme, offices have already been taken in Westminster, not far from Scotland Yard, and that within a fortnight an appeal will be issued to all the members of the force to join the new organization.

"Owing to the official opposition which the scheme has encountered the utmost secrecy will be maintained with regard both to membership and to the identity of the officers of the union. The organization will certainly be completed this month and will first be confined to the metropolitan force, but if it is successful it will be extended to other districts."

RAILWAYS NOT PAYING THEIR SHARE, DECLARE DELEGATES

Two Score Representatives of Ontario Municipalities Who Meet in Toronto Preparatory to Interviewing Government Declare That Assessments Here Are Far Below Those in the United States.

TORONTO, Oct. 10.—"The Assessment Act provides how rural and urban property shall be taxed, and the interpretation is set forth in the provincial act. If the assessment were applied to railway property as it is applied to rural and urban property, the whole question would be disposed of." J. G. Morrison of Arthur, secretary of the Dominion Grange, made the above observation during a discussion in the City Hall yesterday on railway taxation. There were about 40 delegates from various counties in Ontario, who gathered in the council chamber to investigate the cause of excessive assessment, and to attempt to discover by what means the situation could be alleviated.

H. J. Pettypiece of Forest presented statistics on railway assessments in Canada. On a total railway investment in Canada of $1,600,000,000 the taxation would be about one mill, while on a similar amount of investment in the United States it would be about six mills. The speaker said he had secured figures from a U. S. railway manager, and they illustrated the relative positions of the farmer and the Grand Trunk Railway in Canada.

"Railway taxation in Michigan" was the subject undertaken by C. A. Parker. He stated that there was a vast difference in the revenue collected from railroads in Ontario and that collected in Michigan. In Michigan there were 8,741 miles of route, valued at $24,126 per mile. In Ontario there were 8,321 miles of road, which, on the basis of the Michigan mile value, would be worth $200,000,000. When the Ontario average rate of $18 was applied it would mean a tax of $3,600,000, but the province is only collecting $970,000.

The meeting was opened by a formal address by W. D. Gregory of Toronto.

He produced figures to show that the 630 miles of Grand Trunk Railway running through the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario pay $69,000 per annum, or $112 per mile, while the 5,000 miles of Grand Trunk road through various states in the Union are taxed $238,265, or $475 per mile per annum. "Why should this be?" asked Mr. Gregory. "If the railways pay less than their share, the general property owners have to pay their own taxes together with an amount equal to that which the railways evade."

The result of the conference was the drafting of a plan of argument to be advanced when the deputation goes to the Provincial Government to-day to press for assessment changes.

Three Injured In Wreck.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Oct. 10.—Three men were injured when the Michigan Central train, No. 63, from Buffalo to Niagara-on-the-Lake, was ditched two miles south of here yesterday. An open switch was the cause of the wreck.

Killed In the West.

KINGSTON, Oct. 10.—Word has been received here that Peter O'Donnell, aged 55, a resident of Kingston for many years, was killed by a train near Vancouver, B.C. Particulars of the accident are meagre. O'Donnell was a sailmaker, and had been living in the west for six years. His wife and several children reside here.

Carry Relief Free.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 10.—Relief supplies for Nome will be transported free by the steamship companies operating vessels from Seattle. The Senator's sailing has been delayed until to-day, and she will carry a large cargo of supplies.

For a Summer Resort.

KINGSTON, Oct. 10.—Pressure is being brought to bear to have the City Council purchase Belle Island, Cataraqui Bay, for a summer resort.

Carnegie Helps Aberdeen.

EDINBURGH, Oct. 10.—Andrew Carnegie has expressed an intention of giving funds enough to Aberdeen University to establish a lectureship or professorship of Norwegian history. Dr. Jakob Jakobsen, one of Norway's most learned men, has been invited to be the first occupant of the chair. He is noted as an authority on old Norse dialects and place names.

LOAN SHARK GETS PRISON

Six Months Term for David H. Tolman

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—David H. Tolman, notorious as a loan shark was convicted yesterday afternoon of violating the state law against usury and sentenced to serve six months in the penitentiary. The complainant, a clerk, testified that he had paid interest at the rate of 200 per cent. a year for the use of $10 for three months. The defendant said he had conducted between 40 and 50 loan offices throughout the United States.

"This is the most flagrant case of usuary that has ever come to the attention of the court of special sessions," said Presiding Judge Zeller. "Tolman, you are a most miserable usurer."

Warrants for Tolman's arrest on usury charges were issued some years ago in Montreal and Winnipeg, but he was careful to keep out of the jurisdiction of the Canadian courts.

Polack Rioters Punished.

BRAMPTON, Oct. 10.—Two Polacks who took part in Sunday's fracas were fined $25 and costs in the police court yesterday afternoon.

Michael Heryog, boarding-house-keeper, at whose place the fight took place, was sentenced to three months' imprisonment. He was given the option of a $100 fine with costs, but did not pay.

Died At Ninety-Four.

KINGSTON, Oct. 10.—The oldest resident of the Village of Portsmouth, Mrs. James Fisher, who was 94 years of age, is dead. She is survived by four sons.

HARROWING EXPERIENCES OF FOREIGN MISSIONARIES

CUTE LITTLE MISS MAKES BIG JOURNEY

GRETCHEN RITTCHEN

Miss Gretchen Rittchen, just four years old, has travelled alone all the way from Europe and is now on her way to the home of her parents in San Francisco. The cute little miss, with a large tag on her breast, made a big hit with the immigration officials at New York.

They Fell Into the Hands of Brigands—Without Food and Water.

PEKIN, Oct. 10.—The harrowing experiences of the missionaries who fell into the hands of the Chinese brigands under leadership of "White Wolf" at Tsao Yang were related yesterday in a despatch from Rev. Christian Stokstad of the Hauges Norwegian Mission.

He declared that the Government's troops found the two missionaries, Rev. George Holm and Rev. H. Fauske, merely living skeletons. The children had been for ten days hidden under a heap of straw. For the first three days they were without water. Afterward water was obtainable but the captives were without food on several occasions.

The bandits searched their hiding places and thrust their bayonets through the straw, grazing the limbs of those hidden beneath.

Acquitted of Grave Charge.

GALT, Oct. 10.—Several months ago William Flood, of Galt, aged 20, was arrested and committed for trial on the charge of outraging a girl of tender years. At the trial before Sir John Boyd at the Waterloo assizes, a jury heard the case, the charge having been reduced by the crown to indecent assault. The prisoner was acquitted. A strong local public feeling was created over the case in which an innocent youth suffered arrest, imprisonment and the odium of a public trial on a grave charge.

MUSICAL PETERBORO

However poor a reputation Peterboro may have had in the past as a musical centre, there are various individuals and agencies at work in our midst that are doing much to create a deeper interest in good music.

Not only is our excellent Conservatory of Music taking up this matter, but an increasing number of professional musicians are establishing themselves in the city and attracting around them an intelligent clientile.

Perhaps the most ambitious venture in this direction is the St. George's Choral Society, which under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devey, is making good progress and attempting big things in oratorio and chorus production.

There is no reason why Peterborough should not stand out prominently in the musical world of Ontario. Citizens generally will only interest themselves in these various agencies of patronizing and supporting their efforts they will be doing a service, not merely to musicians themselves. But they would be creating an atmosphere in social life which will result in a more refined and elevated community.

THE BROCKVILLE MEET

The Canadian League per Messrs. Hawkes & Cooper, threw a line into Brockville on Tuesday night. Mr. Hawkes' strong point seemed to be the awful charge that Canada cannot defend herself on the sea. We can only say that the charge is as distasteful to us as to Mr. Hawkes. We do not know anything worse unless it be the charge that Canada could so defend herself in the past and did not.

But the matter will never be cleared up by horrified sentimentalists. Canadians may (despite the evidence of recent experience) rush unanimously to man a Canadian Navy. Also, they may not. Messrs. Hawkes and Cooper have not, we believe, so far volunteered. Neither has the entire staff of this public-spirited journal. That Messrs Hawkes and Cooper together with our editor and devil are prepared to enlist in event of a real emergency does not help.

Naval preparation has to take place years before the emergency and if other Canadians find themselves as thirsty as we are for the actual fray, but equally unprepared for years of peaceful training and service, it does not seem obvious that Mr. Hawkes or ourselves are in a position to admonish them. The question turns entirely on the proportion of Canadians who like Mr. Hawkes and Mr. Cooper and ourselves, are in times of peace absolutely indispensable to other callings.

Mr. Hawkes has another point. A safeguard of British liberty he said, is the subordination of the military to the civil authority. Now war, as we are often told is a relic of barbarism but the subordination of military to civil authority is a result of centuries of civilization. The two are in conflict. What wonder therefore that the matter of national defence becomes an increasingly difficult adjustment of means to ends. It behooves us to take a rational practical view of the problem and not be too ready to throw up our hands either in despair or in pious horror.

EDITORIAL NOTES

A Toronto palmist was fined fifty dollars the other day for reading the palm of a constable. That fortune-teller should henceforth direct his scrutiny more particularly to the feet of his clients.

The Duke of Connaught sails next week for Canada to resume his office as Governor General. If the Duke had needed any excuse for not returning he might have said something about the Canadian winter. But it may be that the Duke is returning now to be in time to get the full benefit of the sleighing.

A man who was imprisoned for stealing in England, tried to bring about his release by following the example of the suffragettes. He went on hunger strike with fatal results, he was permitted to starve to death. This will perhaps put an end to criminals adopting these methods to escape the due rewards of their crime. But why was it not done before now? If the authorities had let one or two of the women hunger to death, the thing would never have gone so far.

EXCERPTS

One Was Enough.

Robert Bridges, the new poet laureate, is a fastidious critic, and hence sees little to admire in the commonplace verses of Alfred Noyes.

Noyes once brought to Mr. Bridges two very long odes that he proposed to submit to the English Review.

"I'll read them both aloud," the young man said, "and afterward you will tell me which is, in your opinion, the more likely to be accepted by the English Review."

Poor Mr. Bridges sighed and settled himself in his chair, and Noyes, in his loud, harsh voice, read the first ode. It was very long, and at its conclusion Mr. Bridges leaped to his feet and said briskly:

"Now, my young friend, I can advise you. Send the other ode to the Review."

Shields For London Police.

To indicate the value of this new form of protection various officers have already been provided with these defensive shields, so that when sergeants and other throw things at them they can demonstrate how to dodge the blows and the missiles. The shields are circular contrivances which the constables can carry over their arms to ward off bricks or hat pins.

They will only be carried when the police have reason to anticipate serious assault.

WHERE FINE FEATHERS COME FROM

Who among us has not noticed the triumphant feathers, the "aigrettes" and the "crosses" that cooly and coquettishly scintillate in the hats of well dressed women of all countries?

To whom does it occur that the greater part of these luxurious feathers are supplied by the State of Matto Grosso, Brazil?

Commerce in these assumes day by day greater importance, as the fashion of wearing feathers doesn't change, and rightly so. It is indeed lucky that at the moment when beatiful birds of plumage should have disappeared from Europe, and when implacable hunters should have exterminated them in Senegal, Reunion and Indo-China, the unknown treasures of Matto Grosso should open up, promising for long to be the great provider to the entire world of these rare feathers.

It is in vain that at Tunis breeders have tried to domesticate these birds and to keep them in spacious avaries. The expense of the upkeep is too great for the breeding to be remunerative, and the ten to fifteen grammes of feathers harvested each year per bird, even with prices varying from 1 sh. to 4 sh. per gramme, leaves too small a margin to cover purchase and working expenses.

As the name indicates, the aigrette feathers are straight, rigid, 15 to 20 centimetres high, white and regular; those that are yellow and used constitute a second quality. As to the "crosses" in form of a bishop's crosier, they are also white, frail, delicate, and 10 to 12 centimetres in length.

They are furnished by a species of heron (garca) of 40 to 60 centimetres in height, entirely white in color that lives in innumerable flocks on the banks of rivers, lakes, marshes and streams, recognized neighbors of the "tayouyous" and the large saurians, who are also of great number and who occasionally betray the confidence of the birds by snapping some of them up.

These birds adorn themselves in their most beautiful feathers at the period of mating, and it is at that time when they are in full plumage, that the hunters seize on the opportunity to despoil them of their luxurious attire.

They are hunted in different manners, following the methods practiced by the Indians or those of the native Brazilians.

The first, marking in the evening the trees on which the herons are perched for the night, silently approach them in canoes, then cautiously light fires giving out stupefying fumes and during the lethargic sleep of the birds nimbly pluck the valuable feathers and let them go before they have had time to recover from their surprise.

One must allow that, for savages, this is pretty reasonable, and if it is rather cruel to pluck the birds living it is after all in a measure generous to leave them their lives.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotation in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Instead of proving bearish, the government report today on wheat turned out slightly in favor of the other side. The news, however, came too late to affect prices, which closed steady, the same as last night, to a shade decline. As to corn, the Washington estimate showed some gain as expected. That cereal, nevertheless, finished ⅛c to ⅜c net higher, with oats ⅛c to ¼c up, and provisions 5c off to 5c advance.

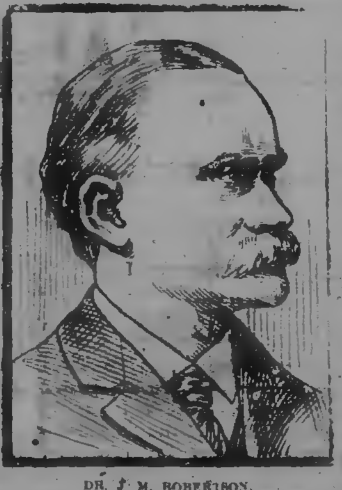
DR. ROBERTSON TAKES A FLING AT IDLE RICH.

Head of the Dominion Educational Association Looks For a New Era In Canadian Industrial Affairs When Government Puts Into Practice the New Technical Training Program.

President J. W. Robertson, head of the Dominion Educational Association, is one of the best known educational leaders of Canada and an idealist of sound common sense and keen practical experience. He is a man of progressive modern spirit and believes in the practical training of man in every field of endeavor in order to draw out all that is best and noblest in his nature. His teaching, writing and lectures are a great inspiration to all thinking Canadians and his influence in the country is a splendid one for good and the general moral and intellectual uplift. He is conceded to be one of the greatest of Canadian thinkers and workers in the field of educational endeavor.



DR. J. M. ROBERTSON.

During the recent convention of the association in Ottawa, Dr. Robertson took a fling at the idle rich in America and said that every rich person who is idle six months of the year of his own free will, should be exiled from the country. Nobody should be allowed to consume what others make. One of the chief subjects under consideration was the report of the industrial and technical commission. This was introduced by Dr. Robertson in an able address. He outlined the purposes of the technical commission and some of the results which he expected would follow if the Dominion Government acted on the suggestions of the commission. It would inaugurate, he said, a new era in Canada for industrial research, and develop many new industries that were now practically non-existent.

Difficult Walking Feat.

A very difficult walking feat was accomplished in England in 1826, when a well-known pedestrian named Lloyd undertook for a bet to walk 30 miles backward in nine hours. This he succeeded in doing, with 14 minutes to spare, on the road between Hagshot and Portsmouth.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

1. 'Twas twi-light on the pla-cid lake, for two were on the skiff, And for an hour we hung beneath the shadows of the cliff, 'Twas twilight on the pla-cid lake, we two were on the skiff, And for an hour we hung beneath the shad-ows of a cliff. She in the stern, I at the oars, and heaven-ly did she seem, and heaven-ly did she seem, With noth-ing could she be com-pared, could be com-pared, un-less, un-less a po-et's dream.
2. "Ah! would the stern were wide enough for two," I mad-ly cried, "But come, mind not the til-ler, love, this seat of mine is wide," "Ah! would the stern were wide enough for two," I mad-ly cried, "But come, mind not the til-ler, love, this seat of mine is wide. "Come, help me row, we're far from shore, and night comes on," I said, "and night comes on," I said, But flush-ing slight-ly at her thoughts, at her thoughts, she shook, she shook her pret-ty head.
3. "Oh, no," said she, "I would not dare; row fur-ther on you may, But I must steer," and to my prayers her tress-es wav-ed nay, "Oh, no," she said, "I would not dare; row fur-ther on you may, But I must steer," and to my prayers Her tress-es waved me nay. "Art not a-fraid?" I sore-ly asked, with slight-ly flush-ing brow, with slight-ly flush-ing brow, "A-fraid? oh, no, you cross old stick! you cross old stick! it's most, it's most too light just now."

LITERARY FOUNDLINGS.

Famous Books Abandoned by Indifferent Fathers.

The first edition of Browning's Pauline was sold at auction for $2,440, yet not only did Browning receive nothing for it originally, but he would have withdrawn it from print if it had been possible.

Mr. Browning was so careless as to the fate of his works that it is a wonder that any of them have survived. Indeed, if it had not been for a doting father before marriage and a devoted husband after marriage it is possible that the published works of the greatest English woman poet would have been nil.

Even Tennyson was careless with regard to his manuscripts and seemed to despise them. Some weeks after leaving his lodgings at Mornington place, Hampstead, he wrote from Barchurch to Coventry Patmore, the author of The Angel in the House, asking him casually to go along some time to his late lodgings and see if he could find his "book of Elegies—a long, butcher, ledgerlike book," as he described it. Patmore went, and the landlady gave him permission to search the poet's old rooms. There, in a cupboard in which Tennyson had kept his tea and butter, Patmore found the book, full of verses. It was the unpublished manuscript of In Memoriam, Tennyson's masterpiece.

Edward Fitzgerald was utterly careless of his fame. He lived to be an old man, yet not one in a million of his fellow countrymen regarded him as a poet, even if they had heard his name mentioned as an old chum of Alfred Tennyson. Yet he wrote The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam long years before his death. He kept it "chucking about," apparently not thinking it worth publishing, and when he did print a few copies nobody took any notice of it. To-day Omar is one of the most famous poems in the world.

Scott was apt to despise his work. He threw the original draft of The Lay of the Last Minstrel into the fire, and was only persuaded to rewrite it by two friends to whom he had read it; and Waverley—or the first half of it, rather—lay in a barrel for nine years before it was exhumed and finished.

If John Keble had had his way it is possible that his famous Christian Year might never have been published. He was extremely averse to it, and only yielded to the importunities of his friends and the pleadings of his father. Even so, he refused to have his name on the title-page. In 45 years it went through 158 editions, and since it went out of copyright they have ceased to be counted.

Young chickens for broiling may be given a pleasant and unusual flavor by rubbing them on the inside with powdered ginger.

Are You Still Insurable?

The main secret of success is seeing and seizing the opportunities that are continually offering themselves to every man. Many men are not wide-awake enough to detect and utilize chances to improve their condition, and this explains the great number of those who have made failures of their lives. A man who cannot perceive the thing which he should do is to be pitied, but blame only is deserved by one who deliberately ignores opportunity. In this latter class must be included those who know they should insure their lives for the benefit of their families, but do not do so. Thousands while they were in good health, and could easily secure policies, have deferred this sacred duty until disease has laid its cluth on them and the very last opportunity for becoming an insurant is lost. In 1912, 50,000 applications in the United States for life insurance were rejected because of bodily ailments. Five thousand persons missed getting insurance because of hereditary taint. These could never have been insured at all, but the 45,000 others who were in ill health might have passed a medical examination if they had applied for it in time. Of these 10,000 were five years too late, 10,000 three years too late, 10,000 one year too late, 5,000 six months too late and 10,000 only two to three months too late. It is to be hoped that the army of lost opportunity in life insurance will be smaller in 1913 than it was in 1912.

The Sun Life of Canada has plans which should interest all who propose making provision for their family in the event of death, or if living, for old age.

GOOD WORK ACCOMPLISHED AT THE PROTESTANT HOME

Thirty Eight Old People Cared for and There Are Many Applications For Admission---Entertainment for Inmates Asked For---The New Officers

The annual meeting of the Protestant Home was held yesterday afternoon in the reception room of the Home, Mrs. Walter Rogers, President of the society presided. Those present besides the officers were Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Mason, Messrs. J. A. Aylmer, Jas. Edgar, Dr. J. B. Mann, R. H. Turner, and Ald. Anderson. His worship, Mayor Bradburn was absent from the meeting owing to important business, but telephoned his regrets as to being unable to be present at the meeting.

Canon Davidson opened the meeting with a short prayer.

The annual report was then presented by the secretary, Miss Helen Denison and adopted by the members. Miss Denison is deserving of great praise, for the zeal and efficiency in connection with the work of the Home.

Canon Davidson spoke a few words on the wonderful success the Home was meeting with. He also spoke of the great work being done by the different officials especially the superintendent, Miss Lancaster whose efficient services have been very gratifying.

The Treasurer's statement was very satisfactory. Mrs. Roger said although their expenses were fear bigger than other years, owing to the Government paying up a back grant they were able to meet the large increase. On motion of Miss Robinson and Mrs. Mason, the report was adopted.

THE OFFICERS

The officers were elected as follows—

President— Mrs. Walter Roger.
1st Vice-President— Miss Nicholls.
2nd. Vice-President— Mrs. Birdsall.
3rd. Vice-President— Mrs. Hazelitt
Treasurer— Miss Sarah Robinson.
Secretary— Miss Jean Neill.

Directors for the three year term are— Mrs. Walter Roger, Miss A. M. Nicholls, Mrs. Hazelitt and Miss Mary Brown.

Mrs. Birdsall, Mrs. J. B. McWilliams and Mr. J. A. Aylmer, are the retiring directors at the end of the year.

ANNUAL REPORT.

The year which has just closed has been a quiet and uneventful, though a most successful one for the Home. The increased responsibility in carrying on the work in a so much larger scale since the opening of the new building in April of last year, has been fully realized by the Directors.

There have been in all 38 inmates in the Home during the year with a total number of 8,894 days, 18 men and 20 women. Of these, 13 have been discharged for various reasons, 4 deaths have occurred, and 21 remain at the present time. Judging from the number of applications for admission which are being received, this number will soon be materially increased.

Twenty-eight meetings of the Directors have been held and two general meetings of the Board have been called, when subjects of special importance had to be discussed

In June last, Mr. Lewis found it necessary to resign from the position of Secretary, owing to ill-health and absence from the city. The Board wishes to place on record their thanks for her efficient services. Miss Helen Denison was asked to take her place until the annual meeting.

Services have been held every Sunday by different clergy of the city. These services have been greatly appreciate by the inmates and also by the Directors. In this connection the Board wish to convey their thanks to Dr. F. L. Robinson, who has so kindly furnished cabs for the clergy

In July a communication was received from the Peterborough Laymen's Evangelical Association, who have for many years conducted services on Sunday afternoons, saying that they would be unable to do so in the future, and that they had notified the Ministerial Association to that effect. A sincere regret was felt by the Directors at this decision, and a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the laymen for their many years of faithful services to the Home.

The usual Christmas entertainment was provided for the old people, and they spent a very happy day. The donations from the public were most generous and acceptable.

The garden has proved a great success, and special mention must be made of the flower garden which, under Miss Lancaster's care, has been a thing of beauty, and which has given much pleasure, not only, to the inmates, but to the many others to whom she has been most generous. The Directors have had much pleasing in giving Miss Lancaster an enlarged photo of the garden, hoping it may prove a memento of the work which has given so much happiness to others, and we hope, to herself.

There is much work yet to be done in the grounds, in the way of planting shrubs and trees. The work of laying pipes for watering is to be done this fall, so that everything may be, as much as possible, in readiness for the spring.

On the formation of the Local Council of Women, the Board though it wise to affiliate, and Mrs. Neill, Miss Brown and Miss Robinson were appointed as representatives, Mrs. Roger taking her seat as President.

Owing to the vastly increased work entailed by the larger institution, the Directors have found it necessary to increase their number from nine to twelve, and a by-law to this effect was passed, to be ratified at this meeting.

One of the most urgent needs for the inmates is felt to be some form of small entertainments during the winter months. With this end in view, the Directors have issued invitations to as many of the Young People's Societies of our churches as possible, to attend a social evening at the Home, on Tuesday, October 14th, at 7.45 p.m. The object of this evening is to interest the young people in the Home, and to ask them to provide short mucisal programs once a week for the old people. The programs need only be short, lasting from about 7.30 to 8.30, and without refreshments. Any societies which may have been unwittingly omitted from the invitation, are asked to kindly communicate with the Superintendent, Miss Lancaster.

If this plan can be carried out, it will be absolutely necessary to provide a piano for the Home. There is a small amount on hand as a nucleus of a Piano Fund, but the Board do not feel justified in using any of their income for this at the present time, when there are so many many other calls. They would be most grateful to receive any donations towards this fund, and are sure that there are many in Peterborough who would be only too glad to assist.

In December Dr. Clinton, M.H.O. for this District, visited the Home and reported most favorably on the building and sanitary arrangements.

The work in the Home has been carried on in the most able manner by Miss Lancaster, who has been unfailing in her efforts to promote the welfare and happiness of the inmates, and has endeared herself to all those with whom she has come in contact.

We also wish to express our satisfaction with the manner in which Mr. Downing has carried out his work in the garden, and also for his kind care of the sick men.

We cannot close the report of the year's work without expressing the deep gratitude we feel towards the many who have so materially assisted us. To the Ministerial Association for their Sunday services. The doctors of the staff, who as usual have given their services so freely, also to the many kind friends who have been generous in their donations. To Messrs. Robinson and Kidd, who have so kindly acted as Auditors, to the press of the city, which has always shown us unfailing coutesy, and to Messrs. Matthews-Laing Co. who have allowed us the use of their cold storage.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

HELEN DENISON,
Secretary.

The Story of a Wonderful Conversion From Sin

A service of song to be given on Saturday evening at the Salvation Army Temple by the Songster Brigade is to be a real treat.

It is the story of a most wonderful conversion. No admission is being charged so that all may heart it. Special service all day Sunday. All invited.

RUN BY WOMEN

French Town, Where Mere Man Stands Very Little Show.

In contrasting woman as a butterfly and as a busy bee, The London Graphic comments on the small amount of clothing worn by the fashionable women of to-day and the masculine attire aped by some freakish women and calls attention to the fact that women who really compete with men in hard work stick to the conservative clothes of their sex.

This is particularly true of the French working-woman. The French peasant woman fills a big place in the agricultural life of France, while in the towns we find the petite bourgeoise taking an active share in commerce—a widow often running a business entirely alone.

These facts explain the existence of Froissy, a village in the department of l'Oise, on the borders of l'Isle de France and Picardy, with a population of between 500 and 600 souls. And in this very exceptional village all the public posts are filled by women.

The stationmaster is Mme. Taillefer. Her husband is a guard. It does not trouble him that he has to take occasional official instructions from his wife. He knows that if she were a guard and he the stationmaster the home would suffer. Think also what a community of interests these two billets provide for them!

Froissy gets its daily mail delivered by a woman postman while it is the business of another employe despostes to see the outward mail aboard the train.

In Froissy there is no such person as a male barber. All the men's heads are placed at the mercy of Mlle. Jeanne Marchandin, who with skillful hands shaves or cuts the hair of all her friends. They are her friends, for who would quarrel with the only barber in the place?

The most striking and interesting figure in the community, however, is Mme. Druhon Marchandin. Hers is the task of heralding all important public events with drum music—weddings, for instance. She has an erect, martial figure, strongly marked and humorous features, and bears proudly the weight of her 80 years.

An odd occupation for a woman is that of road mender. Lastly, there is the young telegraphist, who keeps Froissy in touch with the outside world.

Ice water is very bad for the stomach and for the complexion. Cool water, kept in a pitcher in the refrigerator, is not unhealthful.

To the Lover of Good Coffee
We wish to advise you that we have installed in our store a new Royal Electric Coffee Mill
manufactured by the A. J. Deer Co., of Hornell, N.Y. This machine is equipped with steel knives which cut the berry into fairly uniform, clean cut particles, instead of grinding and crushing it, as by the old method.
All Coffee Mills heretofore used will only crush the berry, mutilating the minute oil cells, allowing the Coffee Oil to evaporate, thus impairing the strength and flavor, and in a short time the coffee becomes rancid, sour.
This is one reason why a pound of coffee cut in this Mill will make more cups of full strength coffee than will any coffee ground the old way.
Another feature about this Mill is that you may have your coffee cut as fine as the finest sand and it will still be practically free from that fine dust which is produced by the old method of grinding. You will, therefore, always have a clear cup of coffee instead of a muddy effect—a result of using the old style mills.
ROYAL CUT COFFEE is also adaptable for percolators or French Drip Coffee Pots.
Try a pound of our Coffee cut on a Royal Mill and we know you will be pleased with the results.
Yours truly,
J. JOHN 336 WATER ST. PETERBORO

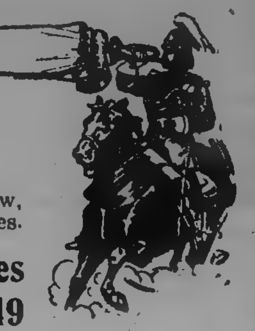
OCTOBER SHOE SALE



This is the First Saturday of the OCTOBER SHOE SALE

An annual opportunity to secure new, satisfactory footwear at much reduced prices.

Some Fine $3.50 & $4.00 Lines to be hurriedly cleared at $2.49

Amongst this clearing lot of over 100 pairs there is a splendid little street boot in straight lace style, of patent leather with dull calf top. Other styles are a "J. & K." Patent and Kid Boot, having a button top of Cravenette cloth, while there is also a button boot made throughout of dull calf. These embrace some very smart, very neat styles, as well as the more staple lasts, which so many women prefer; and though there is not every size in each of these lines, half of them offer a very large range, while the little street boot mentioned above is here in a complete size assortment. Particular emphasis should be placed on the fact, that these are all $3.50 & $4.00 shoes, a number being originally marked at twice the October Sale Price $2.49

Highest Grade American and Canadian Fall Boots. These are $4.50, $4.75 & $5.00 values.

The "Pingree" and "J. & K." are the American lines while the McDermot is of Canadian manufacture. Looking over the assortment one will find the cream of the shoe factories' product, whether it be in the new and correct last that has narrow toe and longer vamp, or the more conservative lines that are made for the broader foot. Some are patent button with dull calf tops, some patent button with cravenette cloth top, while another button style is entirely of dull calf. Each model expresses good taste, and contains the hide and workmanship, that demands a usual selling price of $4.50, $4.75 or $5.00. And the point of extra value is easily seen, when the October Shoe Sale price is $3.89

Women's Dull Calf Button Boots $1.99

We do not hesitate to say, that not often does three dollars in the ordinary way, buy a better boot than this dull calf button. It is stoutly made, with extension soles and military heels, and we call it the "Peterboro" last. Being a splendid line for the price we anticipate a big sale of this line, and though there are now all sizes from 2½ to 7, it is safe to say that a few days will make a big hole in the assortment $1.99

Our $10.00 Autumn and Winter Coat for Women

FAILED TO APPEAR

Warrant for Arrest is Made Out Against Robt. McNabb

As a result of his non-appearance before County Police Magistrate Edmison this morning on the charge assaulting his wife, a warrant has been issued against Robert McNabb, a resident just outside the city limits.

The information charging the defendant with assault, was laid by his wife, who claims that her husband had been drinking for some time and has put her out of the house on four occasions and has also forbid her to occupy the residence.

The husband was summoned to appear before Magistrate Edmison this morning but as he failed to appear a warrant was issued for his arrest.

CONVENTION OF TEACHERS

To be Held at Collegiate Assembly Hall

The annual convention of the city school teachers will be held at the Collegiate Institute Hall, Thursday evening, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 23rd, 24th, 25th.

At the opening meeting Thursday evening Dr. D. J. Goggin of Toronto will give an address his subject being "A Practical Education."

"PEBLO" GLASS

The demand for this High Quality Glass has increased so rapidly that we are forced to buy it in very large quantities. We have now the invoices for the largest quantity of unground glass that has ever come to this city.

This "Peblo" Quality Glass (for which we have the exclusive agency) is as near perfect as is possible to make glass. Lenses ground from it are hard and brilliant, and as clear as crystal. We use this High Quality Glass in all repair work as well as all new work, and while it costs us more to make "PEBLO" Lenses, remember, it costs you no more than you pay for the ordinary kind.

All our Lens Grinding is done on automatic machines and is in charge of Mr. C. A. Primeau, who has had 14 years experience in Lens Grinding.

We have one of the Best Equipped Optical Parlors in Canada, and all examinations are conducted personally by Mr. A. A. Fowler.

FOREST PRESERVATION FIRE-BUGS AND FIRE LAW

Appeal to Mr. J. H. Burnham M. P. by an Owner of 150 Acres of Young Timber

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I enclose for the perusal of your readers a complaint of a well-known man up north, whose name I conceal for obvious reasons. It speaks for itself.

Harvey, Oct. 8, 1913.

J. H. Burnham, M.P., Peterborough:

Sir,—I have about 150 acres of young timber on lot 28, concession 10, that I am trying to keep for present and future use. You know there are fire bugs in this county. How can we get after these lads; is there such a thing as a Fire Act; if there is, where could I get a few copies? It is a terrible misfortune that nobody takes any interest in the preservation of our young timber. There was a fire set out beside my timber. It may wipe it out. Has Dr. Fernow anything to do with the preservation of our young timber? Please let me hear from you.

Lately we have been before the Minister of Forests in Toronto on a forest fire mission, but he seems helpless in the work of preserving our growing timber and the soil under it, which, when burned, becomes the sand of a desert. Is it not time that some of our people set themselves to do something for the benefit of the country? Politics is well enough in its place, but surely we are not stupid enough to see our country destroyed before our eyes without an effort to stop it.

J. H. BURNHAM.

VICTIM IN RUNAWAY ACCIDENT IMPROVING

Mr. Wm. Crawford, of Lakefield, who is confined to Nicholls Hospital, where an operation was performed last Saturday, is doing nicely.

Mr. Crawford sustained internal injuries, in a runaway accident. In company with Mr. W. J. Little he was driving to Lakefield after doing some carpenter work at the farm of Mr. H. G. Garbutt and the horse frightened at an automobile. Mr. Crawford jumped from the rig and the wheels passed over him. He was able to walk home but he became ill and he was brought to the hospital here.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE FOR KILLINBECK AND LANDRY

Lindsay, Oct. 10.—With a warning that if they appeared before him again and were convicted, they would be sent to Central Prison, Magistrate Moore allowed Lavergne Kinninbeck and Herbert Landry their liberty this morning, on suspended sentence.

The two young men had been arrested on suspicion of being implicated in recent robberies but there was no evidence to show that they had had anything to do with the thefts.

The young men were told that they must leave the town by the first train and they took this advice.

His Worship made an appeal to the prisoners to make an effort to conduct themselves in a law-abiding manner. He would allow them to return to their own homes where they were known and could start life anew.

The fathers of the prisoners were in court.

Girdle Foundation.

A novelty in great demand at the notion counter is the girdle foundation banding. Even the amateur can fashion one of the new girdles with the aid of this foundation. It can be bought in two widths, four and six inches, and is boned at three and one-half inch intervals. It hardly pays to bother with the making of these girdles without this foundation, for the four inch width can be bought for 15 cents a yard and the six inch width for 20 cents.

SHE REALLY CARED

And Earle Barton Discovered That He Had a True Life Partner.

BY FLORENCE LILLIAN HENDERSON.

"Going—going—gone!"

The hammer of the auctioneer came down with a final tap. The man of bids waved his hand towards the cashier's desk. Earle Barton paid four dollars, gave his name and address, received a package wrapped in tissue paper and regained his companion, Ward Tolman.

"Whatever induced you to pay that money for a toy that looked to me like a cross between a baby's rattle and a nutmeg grater?" rallied young Tolman.

"Well, in the first place it was cheap, and further, it is quite an oddity," replied Earle, but he did not disclose for whom the purchase was intended.

"What is it, anyhow?" inquired Tolman.

"It is a called a prayer mill. I suppose that doesn't tell you much, so I'll show it to you."

Earle removed the so-called toy from its wrappings. It's form was box-like, with a little ivory handle. There was a slot across it, and as the handle was turned a silk ribbon showed between two rollers. This ribbon was covered with hieroglyphics printed in gold letters.

"The mill came from Thibet," said Earle. "It is made by the priests in that great city of mystery, Lhassa, a place where they visit the intrusion of a stranger with death. The devotee, when he wishes to pray, simply turns the mill and his work is done for him."

"I see," nodded Tolman carelessly; "but how do you come to know so much about these curios?"

Earle flushed deeply and evaded a direct response. He went on to tell that he had a certain liking for antiques. The auctioneer had interested him by narrating the story of a native priest of Thibet traveling in the United States, who had died in debt and whose effects had been sold to bury the poor fellow. The name of the man was engraved on the mill—"Zuelphi."

The friends parted, Tolman, who had money and position, to attend some social function, Earle, who had very little, to proceed to the nearest express office and send the prayer mill package to Miss Velda Tresham, Maybrook. Then he went to his rather cheerless room where he was making a struggle of life trying to write for the newspapers.

"I'd Starve Before My First Story Was Paid For."

Maybrook was the little country town from which Earle had come six months previous. Velda Tresham was the one young lady in that village for whom he entertained a warmer sentiment than she had ever divined. Tolman, making a visit to the city, had come across Earle. Only casually had Earle ventured to ask about Velda. He had heard incidentally that Tolman had been paying some attentions to the young lady, and did not seek a gratuitous heartache by exploring the intimacy.

Earle knew that the erudite Professor Tresham, the father of Velda, was a great collector of unique oddities. He had sent the prayer mill to Velda hoping she might write to him. At least it would show that he had not forgotten her.

The next day Earle was sorry that he had sent the little gift. He happened to meet Tolman. The latter dropped into a jewelry store and produced an exquisite little ring.

"I wish you would engrave this for me," he said to the jeweler, and carelessly scribbled on a card: "Ward to Velda."

Earle chanced to glance at the inscription ordered. He said nothing about it, but his heart sank like lead. To him there was only one "Velda" in the world, and he parted from Tolman with the impression that what he had just seen was an engagement ring, and Miss Velda Tresham its prospective recipient.

The conviction killed a good deal of the ambition of the young writer. He changed his room for a cheaper one. Things did not go very well with him. He did not seem able to break in with any regular publisher. His struck the erratic routine of a penny-a-liner. Then, cheerless and disappointed, he broke down. A fit of sickness followed. He was two months in the hospital, and came out of it to face the world, a pensioner on the bounty of a fine-souled bohemian, almost as poor as himself, but glorying in dividing the last cent with a fellow journalist.

"Down and out," was the way that Earle put it to himself. If he had only received a word from Velda! She was probably married by this time, he reflected.

"Tell you, Barton," his friend and almoner said to him, "you're too good for this market. If you could get into the magazine circle now—once a foothold, and you're a made man."

"I'd starve before my first story was paid for. No, I'll pound along on the occasional special article line. I can at least get a half living from that."

And then suddenly, by a rare chance, there awoke one day in the experience of this lonely city waif the most extravagant soul of hope. Magically, poverty was gilded and forlorn distress became a fading wraith of the past.

A man, a lawyer, hunted him out—after a long quest, he said. Was he Earle Barton? Yes. He lived at such an address formerly? Yes, again. Was he the purchaser, on such a date at such an auction shop, of a certain prayer mill?

If so, what of it?—it all opened up the old wounds, and Earle was weak and irritable from his long spell of illness. Was the prayer mill marked "Zuelphi?" It was. Could he produce it?

The long and short of it was, that the owner of the prayer mill was a member of one of the richest noblest families in Thibet. His relatives had too late learned of his fatal stranded situation. Now they had ordered his remains returned to his native soil—at any expense. The mill must be found—if it took a fortune. It had been in the family for centuries. It must be recovered or the family would lose caste, and, according to their superstitious ideas, would lose paradise.

Ten thousand dollars was offered for the return of the prayer mill. It was at a distance. Then go for it—and expenses advanced. This was the gist of the stranger's proposal.

The first thing Earle learned when he reached his native town, was that Velda was not married. The next was that Ward Tolman had wedded a lady in the next town named Velda Morse. Then Earle Barton realised his error.

In an hour he was at the Tresham home. Through an open window he saw Velda. She was looking at a photograph. Her face grew pale and she trembled as she admitted him to the house. He told her of his mission.

"I will get the prayer mill for you," she said, but in arising her unsteady hand brushed the photograph to the floor—his own!

"Wait," said Earle, a new light shining in upon his soul—"why did you never write?"

"I did, twice, and no reply, and then—"

He drew a step nearer.

"You really cared?" he faltered.

"Oh, could you doubt it!" she cried and dropped to a chair and burst into tears, and Earle Barton knew that he had a life partner to share his new fortune.

Arabic Letters.

Every letter in Arabic has four vowelings, and some letters have twenty-five separate forms. So it is possible for the printer to have to deal with a hundred different forms of a single letter. Knowing the printers' case is not so simple a matter for Arabian craftsmen as for English.

Undoubtedly.

"Who do you suppose dared to set this new fashion of wearing whiskers?"

"Some man whose children have grown up, I suppose."

A Preparatory Test

By OLIVE EDNA MAY

"Harry," said Bess, "I've been thinking what an awful thing it is for a girl to trust her whole future to a man, not knowing whether he's going to make a good husband or a horrid one. I've a good mind to break our engagement."

"Strange, isn't it? I was thinking the same thing about a man's tying himself up for life to a woman. My uncle says a man runs an awful risk when he marries."

"How should he know? He's never been married."

"I've no doubt that your aunt, who is an elderly maiden, put all this distrust into your head. I've often heard her say she wouldn't marry the best man in the world."

"Aunt Martha has a very clear idea of men's faults."

"So has my Uncle Jim of women's shortcomings. But, as I said a moment ago, I've been thinking myself that it's like taking a cold plunge to be married. If you think you don't care to risk it perhaps we'd better break it off."

She pouted at this and bent her eyes down on a locket she was toying with.

"Uncle Jim says," he continued, "that marriage is all very well so long as the spooning lasts, but just as soon as a couple come down to the real thing the girl discovers that she hasn't got exactly what she wanted, or the fellow finds he's made a bull, or both do, and the fracas begins. Now, suppose we stop spooning and treat each other in that friendly way married people do. We'd find out the cause of future dissatisfaction and could make up our minds with deliberation whether we'd better risk it or not."

"That's a good idea. When shall we begin—now?"

"No; the next time we meet."

He didn't care to begin now, because it was only 11 o'clock at night and he was quite sure he would wish to spoon till 1. So they sat locked in each other's arms till 2, when they made preparations for parting, which required half an hour more, and finally succeeded in dragging themselves away from each other at 3. They were to begin their humdrum matrimonial treatment at their next meeting, and in order to be well prepared he was not to call again for three days. When the time was up he had nerved himself to act like a man who had been married ten years. He gave her a perfunctory kiss and, throwing himself into an easy chair, asked if anything new had turned up since he saw her last. She gave him a scornful glance, made no reply and, taking a seat in another part of the room, took up a book she had been reading.

He yawned and, taking a cigarette from a box, lit it, leaned back and smoked. There was a long silence. It was only a few minutes, but it seemed long.

"Been to your aunt's today?" he asked.

"No. Is your uncle well?"

"Very."

Another silence, during which he took up a magazine from a table, turned over the leaves and threw it down. Then he glanced in her direction and saw that the book she was reading, or, rather, pretending to read, was upside down, pictures and all.

"Been a big storm lately?"

"Not that I know of. Why do you ask?"

"Oh, I see a picture of a capsized ship in the book you're reading."

This called her attention to the inverted position of the volume, and she reversed it. There was no sound except the turning of its leaves, which occurred so rapidly that she must have been capable of reading a page every ten seconds. Finally he said with a yawn:

"I shall have to go to bed early tonight. I've been up till late for several nights."

"I'm sorry you must go early."

He took out his watch. It was a quarter to 9. "I think I'll go now," he said. "I'll drop into the club for a few minutes before I go to my room."

"Good night."

Since he had not risen this was somewhat unexpected. He arose with a scowl on his brow and, without saying a word of adieu, strode to the closet in the hall and was hunting for his hat and cane when he heard a sob directly behind him. She was there, holding her handkerchief to her eyes. He clasped her in his arms, and her head fell on his shoulder. There was an impressive silence for some moments, which he broke.

"I don't believe this test plan is at all necessary."

"I—don't—think so."

"I'm sure there are no disagreeable features about you that would cause me to wish myself unmarried."

"You won't treat me badly, will you, Harry, dear?"

"No."

The promise was sealed with a kiss.

"Must you go so early?"

"By no means. Now that we have proved that we love each other there's no possibility of our being dissatisfied with each other after marriage."

He was not so sleepy as he had supposed. At any rate, it was half past 3 in the morning when he took his departure.

He has now been married ten years, and he wonders what they said to each other between 8 p. m. and 3 a. m. during their sittings when they were engaged.

Save one or two turkey wings. They are the best brushes in the world to use around a stove and splendid for sweeping closet shelves. Weight the wing tip with iron until it dries.

Did You Ever Stop to Think
What a Great Proportion of a Newspaper's Readers Read Its Classified Columns

Every Person can be an Advertiser.

Suppose you want a Situation, or want Help—turn to the Classified Columns. There you will find "Situations Wanted" and "Help Wanted" headings over advertisements which properly belong under those classifications. The COST of such Advertising is MODERATE. The RETURNS from such Advertising are practically CERTAIN.

Suppose you don't want a Situation or don't want Help—maybe you are looking for a "Business Chance," or have a coal or cook stove you would like to sell—maybe you want to buy or sell a sewing machine, a piano, a typewriter or an automobile.

No matter what you want, you can sell or you can acquire by being a Classified Advertiser.

VETERAN AGAINST COLT; MACKMEN POUND DEMAREE

Athletics Had the Giants On Their Heads In the Fourth

SCHANG AGAIN

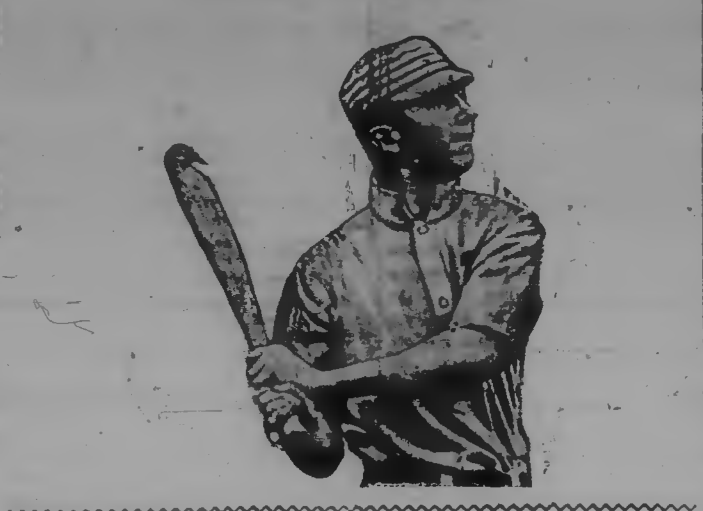
Demaree Gave Way for Pinch Hitter Who Failed to Connect

Canadian Press Despatch.

SHIBE PARK, PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—While neither manager will give a hint as to the battery he purposes employing in the game this afternoon the forecast is made that Demaree and McLean will work for New York and Bender and Schang for the Athletics. The morning was overcast but a fine afternoon is predicted. The field is in good condition.

SHIBE PARK, PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—The sun came out clear and strong just before two o'clock, and the sun-fielders had to put on smoked glasses. Snodgrass batted first for New York instead of Herzog. Demaree and McLean are the battery for the Giants, while Bender and Schang are the battery for the Athletics. Their batting order is the same as yesterday.

HOME RUN BAKER



FIRST INNINGS

NEW YORK—Snodgrass popped out to Baker. Doyle went out on a high one to Strunk. Barry threw out Fletcher.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

Snodgrass replaces Herzog in batting order and Shafer goes to second place. Herzog is taken out not having made one hit in three games.

PHILADELPHIA — Murphy went out on a long fly to Snodgrass and the crowd yelled when Oldring hit into right field for three bases, but the din subsided when Oldring was out at the plate following a grounder by Collins. The latter stole second and Baker ended the innings with a high foul to Shafer.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

SECOND INNINGS

NEW YORK— Burns flied out to Murphy and Shafer fanned. Murray was hit by a pitched ball and McLean singled to right sending Murray to third. Merkle's best was a foul which McInnis got under.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

PHILADELPHIA— McInnis got a texas leaguer and Strunk was out sacrificing, Demaree to Merkle. Then Merkle dropped a foul from Barry after a good run. The official scorer gave it as an error. McInnis scored on Barry's long two base hit to left. Schang walked, Bender flied to Burns and Murphy sent a fly to Snodgrass.

One run, two hits, one error.

THIRD INNINGS.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

PHILADELPHIA— Herzog went to play third base and Shafer went to centre field, replacing Snodgrass whose strained leg began to bother him again. Demaree took Oldring's rap and threw him out at first. Burns caught Collins' fly. Doyle took care of Baker, throwing him out at first.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

FOURTH INNINGS.

NEW YORK—Fletcher flied out to Collins. Burns popped a fly to Baker. Shafer fanned for the second time and angrily flung his bat toward the benches. No runs, no hits, no errors.

PHILADELPHIA — Doyle threw out McInnis. Strunk bounced a hit off Herzog's legs, and Barry going to second on Shafer's throw, Strunk and Barry scored on Schang's single to centre. Schang took second on Shafer's throw to the plate to catch Barry, who went to third on the passed ball and scored when Merkle muffled Bender's grounder. Murphy popped out to Doyle. Oldring singled to centre. McLean threw out Collins at first.

Three runs, four hits, one error.

FIFTH INNINGS.

NEW YORK— Murray walked, McLean singled and Murray went to third. Cooper ran for McLean. Merkle fanned. McCormack is batting for Demaree. Oldring caught McCormack's fly and Cooper was out stealing, Schang to Collins.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

The fielding of the Athletics in the fifth was simply superb. Marquard and Wilson are now the battery for New York.

PHILADELPHIA — Baker fanned. Marquard threw out McInnis. Strunk walked on four pitched balls. Barry got a two base hit and Strunk went to third. Strunk and Barry scored on Schang's single to centre. Marquard threw out Bender.

Two runs, two hits, no errors.

CATCHER SCHANG.

The hard hitting catcher of the Athletics.

BASKETBALL

In the basketball league for the Employed Boys, Leaders and Rovers were the winners last night, the Leaders defeating the Jeffs 4 to 0 while the Rovers downed the Mutts by 3-2.

The next games will be played Tuesday night.

THE BOX SCORE

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—A new star blazed forth in the world's series baseball firmament yesterday, when 19-year-old Leslie Bush pitched the Philadelphia Athletics to victory over the New York Giants in the third game of the championship struggle by a score of 8 to 2. Bush was materially aided in his rush to a pedestal in the baseball hall of fame by the savage batting of his team-mates.

MACK IS TICKLED OVER BUSH'S WORK

Athletic Leader Says Performance Was Beyond His Expectations

When Connie Mack was asked what he thought of the series as it stands at present, he replied:

"We must win two more games to come out on top, and we are going to try mighty hard to accomplish the feat between now and Saturday evening. But baseball is so uncertain that I do not care to make a prediction. Let us play one game at a time. Bush certainly pitched beyond my expectations. After that first inning he had the Giants on the hip. I never saw a more confident youngster. Every time he came to the bench after an inning he said that he knew he had the Giants' measure. Schang handled him superbly. The only fault that could be found with Bush was the start he allowed several Giants to get when they tried to steal. Schang had to throw some difficult ball, and that perhaps was the reason why he missed a couple of stealers. My boys hit the ball on the nose, and that tells the story."

LOCALS PLAY WITH PARKDALE

The local rugby team will play Parkdale in Toronto to-morrow, the line-up to be selected from the following players:

TYPES OF SMOKER

Encouragement is now given to the growing of tobacco in Ireland, of which the best that can be said is that "it is not at all bad." It was George III. who, to give some encouragement—not too much—to his infant industry, had the law enacted that the tobacco produced should be exported only to Great Britain and should be subject to the same duty as that then levied on tobacco grown in the American colonies.

Carlyle was once suffering agonies from dyspepsia, and abandoned his pipe on his doctor's advice. For months he went without a smoke, but got no better, when one day while walking in the fields he saw lying on the grass a pipe and a tobacco pouch. The next moment he was puffing away at the pipe to his heart's content, exclaiming, "I will endure this diabolical farce no longer!" and henceforth nothing could induce him to forego his pipe.

In this respect how different he was from the father of David Livingstone! When David brought home the news that tobacco had been heavily taxed his father was just filling his pipe. "If we have to give it up," said he, "we may as well begin now." So saying, he knocked the weed out of his pipe and never smoked again.

RE-ARRANGEMENTS OF APPOINTMENTS ARE MADE

Springville and Lakevale as One Charge --- Rev. Dr. Marsh Tenders His Resignation

The Presbytery held at St. Paul's Church yesterday decided upon the following re-arrangements of the appointments under discussion. Pontypool, Ballyduff and Janetville to make one charge. Omemee and Mount Pleasant to make one charge. Springville and Lakevale to make one charge.

As regards Bethany the Presbytery is seeking to make arrangements as to this appointment, and has appointed Rev. Wm Johnson, of Millbrook as Moderator.

Owing to Lakevale being joined to Springville, Rev. Dr. Marsh, in courtesy to Springville and Lakevale, has tendered his resignation to the Presbytery, in order to leave the way open for them to recall him to the work if desired, or to appoint another in his place.

This action on the part of Dr. Marsh is regarded as a very generous and gracious act of courtesy. The doctor is well known in and around Peterborough, and indeed throughout the continent in astronomical work. He has served Springville for 7 years and the charge is now in a progressive and healthy condition.

REV. MR THOMSON FOR MODERATOR.

The resignation of Dr. Marsh will be considered at a meeting of the Synod in Toronto next week. At that meeting Rev. D. A. Thomson, of Hastings, will be nominated for the position of Moderator of the Synod of Toronto and Kingston.

CHURCH UNION.

Pontypool, Janetville and Ballyduff will likely extend a call to Rev. Mr. Ross who is the present supply minister, when Presbytery meets again on Thursday, Nov. 13. At this meeting, Presbytery will discuss the question of Church Union.

The reports from Home Mission Fields for August and September showed that good work had been accomplished by the various students in the fields.

JOIN THE UNION AND LET YOUR WHISKERS GROW

The rumor that the barbers of Peterborough are to raise the price of a shave from ten to fifteen cents is alarming some of our barefaced citizens. They are feeling their chins meditatively and wondering whether in the event of the raising of the price, they ought not to raise a beard, or raise a row about it.

They ought to consult the ladies on the former and the police on the latter. A bearded city is too fearful to contemplate. Young and old shavers of Peterborough might, as a protest, form a union, and having let their whiskers grow for a week or so, walk in procession down George street.

Such a display of sentiment—not to speak of bristles—ought to have some effect upon the barbarians But it may be that a little hirsute covering of our faces would improve the good looks of some of us.

Local Happenings

The paving operations at Lindsay were completed last night, and the asphalt mixing machine will be brought to Peterborough. Hunter street should be completed next week.

The police have no further information regarding the whereabouts of the young Italian whose disappearance was reported last Saturday. The police do not think that he was drowned.

The Regina Cyclone will be the subject of an address which Rev. J. G. Lewis will deliver at the annual tea of the North Smith Methodist Church on Thursday, Oct. 16.

The Power Committee will meet tonight to deliberate on the agreement submitted by the Railway Co. re the use of the Hydro poles.

Several small parties have departed to the lodges in the north on the annual fishing expedition.

The Songster Brigade of the Peterborough corps of the Salvation Army will visit Campbellford for Thanksgiving week end, October 18-19. They will be assisted by part of the silver band, including the saxaphone quintette.

Millinery Styles FOR AUTUMN AND WINTER

You will be surprised at the picturesque style of these Hats. Our workroom has spared no pains in making these the most exclusive creations at the prices they are marked. Every one is of this season's popular design. Shapes are admired for their becomingness combined with these qualities; A rich appearance, smart trims of feathers or ribbon and one that will see that fashion presents a hat that at once satisfies the demands of good style, yet keeps within the bounds of economy.

TO MERCER FOR ONE YEAR

Mrs. Peter Munroe Goes to the Reformatory

One year in the Mercer was the sentence meted out to Mrs. Peter Munroe by Magistrate Dumble at Police Court this morning on the charge of being a common prostitute.

Mrs. Munroe was arrested a week ago in company with a man and women by the name of Wallace who claimed their home to be in Campbellford. The Wallace couple were able to give a satisfactory account of themselves and left the city at the magistrate's request, but the Munroe woman was not so fortunate and as a result she was remanded to jail for a week.

The case of Harry Hutchinson, a local man, charged with allowing his horse to run at large, contrary to the by-law, was dismissed owing to the fact that sufficient evidence was given to show that the horse was locked in a field and that the fence had been tampered with, therefore allowing the horse to break out.

ANNIVERSARY AND JUBILEE

Mr. Wm. Aldridge Was a Welcome Visitor

(Lakefield News.)

The anniversary and jubilee of the Baptist Church, held on Sunday last and Monday evening proved to be a most delightful occasion. The success was due in a large part to the very acceptable ministry on Sunday of the efficient pastor of the Lindsay Baptist Church, Rev. H. C. Bryant, to the weather which was fine throughout, to the ladies of the church who supplied abundant refreshments on Monday evening, to the goodwill of the community manifest in the presence of many, to members of Gilmour Memorial Church, who contributed largely to the program and to the resourceful pastor Webb, who somehow arranged that an entire influential committee of Murray St. Baptist Church, Peterborough, six in all arrived in an automobile about 9 o'clock, each member giving practical cheer and good will. Prominent in this committee, on account of his age and the respect in which he is held, was Deacon Wm. Aldridge, who, fifty years ago, laid the brick of the Chapel that still stands in good repair, at the end of the larger building erected later. Then as a sort of climax, there was the burning of the bonds of the pastorium, purchased and paid for in the present pastorate, lit by the senior deacon, Mr. Thos. Gordon, amid gratitude and rejoicing that found expression in the singing of the doxology and benediction by Pastor Webb.

CRUELTY TO CHILD

Sherbrooke Street Woman Must Appear In Police Court

Strap With Buckle Used on Child it is Said

Residents of Street Made Demonstration Near the House

Sherbrooke street, near the boundary was the scene of an extremely unpleasant fracas last night and as result Mrs. John Billington of Sherbrooke street, will in all probability appear in police court next Monday on the charge of causing bodily injuries to her small eight year old niece.

Mrs. Billington has appeared in police court before on the same charge and had been warned against her methods of punishment.

The little girl whom the woman is alleged to have punished so severely is only about eight years old. On several occasions neighbors say they have rushed in and stopped her from ill-treating the child.

Last night about eight o'clock this alleged common occurrence happened again and this time it was carried so far that in a few minutes over one hundred residents had surrounded the house, they having been attracted by the child's screams.

The authorities were notified and Mr. Geo. Cochrane, Detective Newhall, and Mr. Henry went to investigate and as result the child was taken and placed in the Shelter. It is alleged that Mrs. Billington had tied the child to a bed post and was beating it with a leather strap, the buckle of the strap causing painful injuries.

This conduct made the residents so angry that a wild time ensued for a few minutes and it looked as if the suggestion made by one of the gathering, to "tar and feather" the woman would be carried out. However, they finally quieted down and things presented a more peaceful aspect. However, had it not been for the assistance of the officers Mrs. Billington might have suffered bodily harm.

Interviewed by a Review reporter, several of the neighbors said that on several occasions the little girl has been most cruelly-treated by different methods. One instance was reported that only a few weeks ago the woman had smashed a plate over the little girl's head. Had it not been for the presence of the officers the neighbors say that the woman would have had a warm time, as they were extremely angry.

READING AND ITS PLEASURES

Special Feature for Review

The Review has arranged with Mr. Dela Fosse, the City librarian, for a series of articles dealing with books and reading. These will appear fortnightly. The first article will be published in the Review to-morrow Saturday.

Mr. Dela Fosse's object is to stimulate the taste for good literature and bring to the notice of citizens any special works of interest unknown to the general public.

The articles will be of a chatty and discoursive nature, and we are sure will be much appreciated by our readers.

The Review has had in prospect for some time a similar idea, and we hope to supplement the efforts of Mr. Dela Fosse with occasional book notices and reviews in our Saturday issues.

FATHER COTE FOR BOWMANVILLE

It Is Said he Will Succeed Father Ferguson---Not Official

On his last visit to Bowmanville Sunday Rev. Father Ferguson was presented by the congregation of St. Joseph's R. C. Church with a purse of gold. During the sixteen months in which he had visited Bowmanville he has endeared himself to the congregation and made many friends, who deeply regret his departure. Father Ferguson will be his successor to Bowmanville.—Statesman.

The Review was given to understand to-day that no official step had been made as yet in regard to the appointment of Rev. Father Cote.

LAID TO REST

The funeral of the late Edward Clarke was held yesterday afternoon from his late residence, 51 Ware street, to the Little Lake cemetery. The pallbearers were Messrs. B. Morrow, H. Rush, G. W. Popham, H. Puelan, F. Hooper sr., and F. W. Miller.

The sweet fragrance of numerous floral tributes pervaded the room and many friends and acquaintances were present and paid their last respects.

Rev. Canon Davidson officiated at the services at the house and the grave. In his remarks at the house Canon Davidson referred to the late Mr. Clarke as having been quite an historic personage and interesting character. Not only had he been an old resident of Peterborough, but he had also been connected with many happenings of days gone by. He had always been bright and cheerful and of a happy disposition thus endearing himself to many people. Canon Davidson said he was glad to see present so large an assemblage of representatives of the older families of Peterborough as a sign of respect to his memory.

PERSONAL

Miss May Callahan left this morning for Buffalo, N.Y., where she will enter the Sisters' Hospital, as nurse-in-training.

Miss Bella Higgins of this city is recovering from a serious operation in the Nicholls Hospital, but will be confined to her room for some time. Her many friends hope for a speedy recovery and that she may soon join them again.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Trent, of Trenton, announce the engagement of their daughter, Gertrude, to Mr. Morley W. Sparling, of Campbellford, son of the Rev. W. W. and Sparling, of Toronto. The marriage will be celebrated on the 22nd inst.

Hair-Cuts Make Baldness.

That close cutting of the hair tends to make men bald is the theory advanced by Dr. F. H. Barendt, a skin specialist of Liverpool, England.

"Why is it there are so many bald men and so few bald women?" he asked. "I believe it is because men will not let their hair grow to a proper length. The average man wears his hair about an inch long, whereas it should be at least 13 or 14 inches."

Dr Barendt afterwards explained that he considered nature was affronted by frequent cutting of the hair. "If it is not allowed to grow to the length I have mentioned it becomes dry and loses its strength, much in the same way that the muscles of the body become flabby and weak if they are not exercised."

FIRE AND STORM CAUSE HEAVY LOSS OF LIFE UPON THE SEA

LINER VOLTURNO BURNS WHILE STEAMERS STAND BY UNABLE TO AID PASSENGERS

Confusion in Wireless Messages Makes It Impossible to Give Accurate Number of Lives Lost---One Report Places Total at 236, While Another Says 136.

Many Were Lost in Attempting Their Escape in Life Boats---Ten Ships Answer Wireless Calls for Help, But Owing to the Storm Could Not Give Assistance.

[CANADIAN PRESS DISAATCH]

LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND, Oct. 11.—Wireless reports from the Cunarder Carmania says the Uranium liner Volturno from Rotterdam for New York caught fire at sea in a gale. Wireless calls for help brought several vessels to her aid who fought the fire for some time but ultimately the ship had to be abandoned. Several lifeboats were smashed against the ship's sides and a large number were drowned. One report says 236 passengers and members of the crew perished.

FISHGUARD, ENG., Oct. 11.—Fire during a raging storm destroyed the steamer Volturno last Thursday when about 800 miles east of Newfoundland on her voyage from Rotterdam to New York. 136 or 236 people (the confusion in wireless messages makes it impossible to tell which) perished by burning or drowning while ten other steamers, summoned to her aid, stood by unable to reach her with their boats owing to the violence of the storm. The Volturno was owned by The Canadian Northern Steamship Co., but had been chartered to the Uranium Line. She carried 262 steerage passengers for Halifax and 278 for New York, besides 21 cabin passengers and crew of 93 men. This makes a total of 654, but other reports say 757.

It seems altogether probable that the lower number of lives lost, 136, is correct. Capt. Barr's despatch from the Carmania says the Volturno was abandoned Friday, Oct. 10th, when all survivors were taken off. The majority of those who were lost perished in an attempt to get away from the ship in lifeboats when the fire became dangerous. The Carmania was 78 miles distant from the burning vessel when she received a wireless call for help and steamed for the ship in the teeth of a howling gale, making over 20 knots an hour. When she reached the Volturno at noon, Thursday, the doomed vessel was burning fiercely forward and at the same time rolling heavily in the sea, while her propellers were fouled with the boat tackle used in lowering her six lifeboats. Only two boats had succeeded in getting away safely, the other four being smashed against the vessel's side and all the occupants drowned. The Carmania launched lifeboats which, after two hours' battling with heavy seas and having all but three oars snapped or wrenched from the hands of the crew, failed to reach the Volturno and put back. Capt. Barr then laid the Carmania within one hundred feet of the Volturno's stern, but found it impossible to get a line aboard or rescue anybody. It was a terrifying sight for the Carmania's passengers and crew to see so close to them hundreds of horror stricken passengers, including women and children, on the Volturno's decks, and yet were unable to help.

Capt. Barr kept calling other vessels to the Volturno's aid and before dark altogether nine would-be rescuers were on the scene, but although the gale moderated at sunset and all these ships put out lifeboats and attempted to reach the burning vessel, in each case after a desperate struggle they gave up the attempt and returned with great difficulty and danger to their own ship.

All night the anxious ships stood by playing their searchlights an the black waters for a possible stray swimmer, and watching the flames creep aft, becoming fiercer as they reached the engine room and bunkers, accompanied by explosions which hurled burning wreckage into the air like rockets.

Never was such a scene witnessed as these ten huge illuminated hulls, crowded with thousands of spectators anxiously watching the burning ship, eager but powerless to save the 500 threatened souls aboard her. Late in the evening cries were heard near the Carmania and by lowering a seaman overboard, she picked up one solitary steerage passenger floating on a lifebelt.

Later in the night the flames made slower progress, the sea moderated considerably, and a flotilla of lifeboats gathered around the Volturno's stern ready to remove the distracted passengers.

The Volturno was a comparatively small ship, 340 feet long, 43 feet beam, and 2581 gross tonnage and was built by Fairfields at Glasgow seven years ago. She was commanded by Captain Inch and carried a cargo of non-combustible chemicals, cotton goods, liquors and mineral waters.

PREPARED TO YIELD ON PANAMA TOLLS AFFAIR

LONDON, Oct. 11.—The Washington correspondent of The Times sends his paper this cable: "Almost at the same moment as President Wilson yesterday, by releasing an electric spark, has removed the last obstacle between the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans, it is with peculiar pleasure that I am able to announce that there now is every prospect of a victory for Great Britain's patient and logical diplomacy over the Panama tolls question."

The President, after conferring with John Bassett Moore, councillor for the State Department, announced that he is convinced of the correctness of the British contention that free tolls for American shipping are a violation of treaty obligations.

"Whether the Presidents' view will be presented to Congress in a special message or be personally communicated to the Democratic leaders, has not yet been decided, but action will be taken either in this or early in the next session. Politicians who are in favor of a rebate have not changed their views, but the administration is confident it now will be able to secure a repeal of the clause."

Gamboa Dike Shattered.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—The momentary touch of a key by the President of the United States yesterday sent a flash of electricity through a continuous telegraph and cable connection of 4,000 miles, setting off a gigantic blast of dynamite which exploded the Gamboa Dike, the last of the great physical barriers to water communication in the Panama Canal.

It was an extraordinary feat of telegraphy, specially planned for the occasion. At precisely two o'clock yesterday afternoon President Wilson, by simply closing a telegraph key at the White House, sent the current overland and under sea and just a few seconds later came a message informing him that the explosion had been successful.

The special circuit had been set up early in the day and the telegraph companies stationed men at every important point en route to guard the continuous connection and prevent mechanical interference.

"Is the cable ready?" he enquired.

"Yes," came the answer, and soon Galveston announced that "PA," the telegraph call of Panama City, was heard. By agreement, the operator at the White House made four distinct dots at 20 seconds before two o'clock. This gave the signal for the engineers at the Gamboa Dike to be in readiness for the flash. They waited 20 seconds, and on the dot President Wilson closed the key which sent the current into the dynamite apparatus.

"There, it is all over," smiled the President. "Gamboa is busted."

The President sent Col. Goethals, engineer of the canal, a brief message of congratulation and turned to those about him, happy in the thrill of the moment for it brought anticipation of the final step that will open to the world a short waterway between the Atlantic and the Pacific, the dream of centuries.

Potatoes should boil slowly to prevent the skins from curling off.

Tokio Insists On Satisfaction.

TOKIO, Oct. 11.—The Foreign Office yesterday issued a statement concerning the negotiations with China, arising from the killing of Japanese subjects at Nanking, in which it says one condition imposed by Japan upon China remains unsatisfied. The statement adds that the time has not arrived to disclose its nature, but that China has given assurances that it will be complied with.

It is understood that this condition calls for the dismissal of Gen. Chang Hsun, head of the Chinese Government troops at Nanking, and that while China has agreed eventually to comply, she has postponed action for the time being owing to the inability of the central government to enforce his dismissal at the present time if it were decreed.

Galt's Population Increases.

GALT, Oct. 11.—Galt's growth is evidenced in the assessor's returns, made public yesterday. Each of five wards show increased population, the aggregate being 806, making a total population of 11,932. Total value of assessment is $8,192,540, being $332,000 increase. Births were 192, deaths 65. The town has three hundred dogs. Following the rabies' scare of two years ago, the canine population has perceptibly diminished. Assessors report a house famine. Many houses contain two to four families, some as many as 22 persons.

Midland Carries Bylaw.

Midland, Oct. 11.—Voting took place yesterday on a bylaw to authorize a loan of $60,000 to a company establishing a malleable iron works in Midland. The bylaw was carried by a vote of 569 to 54. Mayor H. J. Craig headed a band of workers who got out the vote, is well satisfied with the result. The company is to erect a large concrete plant and will employ 150 men from the start.

DRAINING CATTLE SUPPLY

Voracity of American Buyers Menaces Canada's Industry

WINNIPEG, Oct. 11.—That the already inadequate herds of western Canadian cattle are suffering very grave depletion, and in many cases will soon be totally wiped out through the operations of American buyers who have come here to secure stockers and butchers' cattle since the passing of the Democratic tariff measure, is a statement made by prominent local shippers.

No less than 70 cars of western Canadian cattle have been shipped across the international boundary from western points since the coming into effect of the tariff last Monday morning.

American Buyers in Ontario.

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 11.—Since the Wilson-Underwood tariff has gone into effect across the line extensive shipments of cattle have been made from Brockville to the New York and Buffalo markets. Four hundred head were exported yesterday to New York and 200 head will be sent to Buffalo the beginning of the week. The buyers are from northern New York points.

Lloyd George Opens Fight.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—A cable to The Tribune from London says:

"David Lloyd George's great land fight begins to-morrow at Bedford. The Chancellor of the Exchequer's speech will be the signal for battle all along the line. The Unionists, as well as the Liberals, however, have a land program, for the votes of the farmer and the agricultural laborer cannot be ignored by either party.

The Unionist policy, of which Lord Lansdowne is the protagonist, is to make the tiller the owner of the soil he tills. He will then be a propertied person and a Unionist. The Liberal policy is to let the farmers remain a tenant, with his interests safeguarded. He will then be antagonistic to landlordism and consequently a Liberal.

PEACE NOT HERE YET.

So Britain's Duty Is To Guarantee World's Amity, Says Samuel.

MONTREAL, Oct. 11.—Naval armament, Britain's burden and the duty of the British dominions in this regard were topics discussed by the Rt. Hon. Herbert L. Samuel in the last public address of his present visit to Canada, delivered before the Canadian Club yesterday afternoon.

"The question of world peace," said Mr. Samuel, "brought up the idea of the possibility of war and the necessity of preparation therefor. The greater the power of the British Empire, the greater its duty to be pacific. The present policy of the Imperial Cabinet was one of amity toward every nation of the world. But," qualified Mr. Samuel, "though we may work for a reign of permanent peace, we cannot act as though it had already been secured. In the word of George Meredith, "England cannot invest her all in the millenium and be ruined if it delays to come." We cannot treat fleets and armies as though they were unnecessary.

"We, who are charged with the duty of Imperial Government, sincere lovers of peace, though we feel that we should be doing less than our duty if we failed to maintain at whatever point may be necessary such guarantees of the security of the Empire as may be demanded.

Died From Excitement.

HAMILTON, Oct. 11.—A few moments after receiving the advice of a doctor to avoid all excitement, Mrs. Ernest Hall, 19 years of age, fell prostrate Friday afternoon on Main street and died while being carried to the hospital. Mrs. Hall's death was caused by apoplexy, induced by the sight of a small boy, Teddie Johnson, being thrown from a bicycle and crushed under the wheels of a heavy motor truck.

Seeing the accident as she walked from the public library building, Mrs. Hall stepped forward quickly in an attempt to save the boy. Suddenly she faltered and fell. Death followed within a few minutes.

ONE HUNDRED MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT ARRESTED

Charged by Huerto With Usurping Executive Functions

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 11.—President Huerta's heavy hand fell remorsely upon members of the House of Deputies last night, when, acting under orders from the President, Garza Aldape, Minister Gobernacion and Chavez, chief of police, arrested 110 members of the chamber and imprisoned them in the penitentiary.

The men arrested are charged with usurping executive functions. They constitute the entire membership of the chamber, exceptiu those belonging to the Catholic party.

Gendarmes and soldiers in civilian garb were packed into the galleries of the chamber, and the public was excluded.

Garza Aldape bore a written message from Huerta, in which he peremptorily ordered the deputies to rescind their resolution for an investigation of the Dominguez case.

A guard was stationed at each deputy's desk. Then Garza Aldape and Chaves, with several soldiers, replaced the President and clerk of the chamber. A list of those members who voted for the Dominguez resolution was read. As each name was called, the member who bore it was formally taken into custody. A score of automobiles were waiting outside the chamber, and into them the prisoners were forced and hurried to the penitentiary. No cells were available for them, as the institution is crowded with political captives. Accordingly they are spending the night on the floors of the corridors.

The American secretary of embassy, Mr. O'Shaughnessy, was refused admittance to the chamber, although Sir Lionel Carden, the British Minister, was allowed to pass the lines of troops to the diplomatic gallery.

The Chamber of Deputies is surrounded by federal troops, and several hundred others are inside the building. It is reported that President Huerta intends to dissolve the body.

The evacuation of Torreon by the federal forces just before its occupation by the Constitutionalists is beginning to show its effect in the capital. A small detachment of troops in Provisional President Huerta's army broke out in rebellion Thursday evening in Tlalnepantla, a suburb of the city. The soldiers who engaged in the local revolt turned on their officers before the latter had an opportunity to escape. The officers were killed by the mutineers.

Further violence was prevented when other troops combined to put down the mutiny. It is feared, however, that this tragedy will have a great effect on the morale of the garrison here.

CONSIDERATION IS PROMISED

Plea of Tax Reformers Is Presented to Provincial Ministers

TORONTO, Oct. 11.—The Provincial Government was approached yesterday afternoon by a representative deputation from Ontario counties and certain sections of the Assessment Act were suggested for revision. Two things in particular were urged as pointing towards relief—the assessment at a specific value per mile of "structures, substructures, superstructures, rails, ties, poles and other property on railway land," and an increase in the provincial supplementary revenue tax on railways.

Twenty-nine counties and one township appeared under the auspices of the Municipal Railway Taxation Association before Hon. Messrs. Hearst, Foy and Duff, and presented their claims for recognition. In the absence of the Premier, and Hon. Mr. Hanna, the Attorney-General stated that the matter would be taken up in the Cabinet as soon as possible and they would find what could be done.

The members of the deputation were introduced by K. W. McKay of St. Thomas. William Bress of Grey County laid the facts before the Ministers. He began by showing that the Government had always exhibited a willingness to equalize taxes throughout the province. The present situation, where the rural taxpayer was bearing the major portion of taxation in comparison with the railway corporations should appeal to them as needing to be changed. The supplementary revenue tax, he said, ties in the province, county councils was aimed to obviate this condition, but it was not far-reaching enough. With the rapid growth of municipalities were facing the serious problems of meeting necessary revenues.

Four Hundred Thousand Fire.

JAMES VINCENT ECK DENIES THAT HE IS DEAD AND BURIED

He Sends Message From Timmins, Porcupine—Has a Good Job and is Far From Feeling Dead.

THE AUTO TRAGEDY AT LAKEFIELD

ST. CATHARINES, Oct. 11.—After being positively identified as the remains of James Vincent Eck, son of a wealthy resident of Harrow, near London, Eng., a body was buried in the Roman Catholic cemetery at Peterboro on Wednesday. Yesterday definite proof was established that Eck is still alive, and occupies a position at the Hollinger mine at Timmins, Porcupine.

When the tidings came from Peterboro that a farmer named Bell had identified the body of the man killed at Lakefield by an automobile as MacDonald, by which name Eck was known in that locality, relatives of two other missing men withdrew their claims because of the fact that Bell asserted that a tattoo mark of a certain design on the arm would prove it was Eck's body; the shirt sleeve was turned up and the mark was there. When word came to St. Catharines that the body was being shipped to the medical college at Toronto, Mr. R. F. Robinson of this city and his brother-in-law, L. Singleton of Cobalt, met at Toronto after receiving word from Eck's father to bury the body in this country. They found the corpse at the University at Kingston, took it to Peterboro, and personally saw that a respectable burial was given.

"Returned from bush to-day and learned of my sad death. Kindly convey sympathy with all for this disappointment, for I am still alive and far from feeling dead."

To guard against any possible hoax, Mr. Singleton, who is still visiting Mr. Robinson, sent an inquiring telegram to Manager Robbins of the Hollinger mine at Timmins, who replied confirming the fact that Eck is unquestionably alive.

IMMODESTY IN DRESS

W.C.T.C Convention Deplores Some New Tendencies

STRATFORD, Oct. 11.—The discussions at the Ontario Women's Christian Temperance Union convention were crystallized at the closing session yesterday afternoon in a series of resolutions touching various phases of temperance and social activities.

Toronto was selected as the meeting place next year.

The convention in its resolutions dealt with Ontario liquor legislation and expressed disappointment that the reforms had not been more drastic. Endorsation of the present policies was given as follows:

"Resolved, that we are in hearty sympathy with the advanced temperance legislation enacted at the recent session of the Ontario House. We believe these amendments to the License Act will have a most salutary effect in compelling respect for the present law. At the same time we must express our regret at the refusal of the Government to enact the only legislation that can really be effective (prohibition) up to the constitutional powers of the province, and we take pleasure in endorsing the much more radical stand of the Opposition. For while the abolition of the bar, treating and drinking in clubs is not our ultimate goal, it is a long stride towards it, and is a policy that should command the respect and compel the support of every temperance man and woman."

A vigorous shot was levelled at modern dress tendencies among women:

"Believing that many of the present styles of dress are not only immodest, but directly tend toward immorality among our youth, therefore be it resolved that we do all in our power to raise the whole question of dress to a higher plane, training our daughters to desire only beauty of line and color—the visible sign of the soul, which is all glorious within."

The desire of the W. C. T. U. for woman suffrage was indicated in the following resolution:

"That our women should make manifest their determination to secure in every legitimate means an extended franchise either in Parliamentary or municipal suffrage."

WILL BUILD RETAINING WALL

GALT, Oct. 11.—A special meeting of Galt town council last night, decided to proceed with the work of a retaining wall on the west side of the river, extended back ten feet, to admit a wider channel and minimize flood danger. The Grand River Improvement Association would seem to have abandoned hope of having the Ontario Government take up the flood question in a practical way and it will fall on the several municipalities menaced, to protect themselves as best they can.

Chatham Gets Industry.

CHATHAM, Oct. 11.—This week the National Forging Co., an American concern, decided to establish a branch factory here, and the deal has been satisfactorily closed. They will employ 50 hands at the start. The industrial committee is now angling for another American industry, with good chances for success. A proposition has been accepted and a bylaw will be placed before the people for ratification.

Four Bomb Exploders Confess to New York Police

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—The mystery of more than a hundred bomb explosions that have occurred in this city during the past year is on the verge of solution, the police believe, as the result of the confessions of four men in jail at Hackensack, N.J., their statements leading to the arrest here yesterday of two men charged with setting off a quantity of explosives in front of an east side tenement house on Sept. 9. The accused men, Pietro Gambrone and Antonio Leventino, were held in heavy bail in a magistrate's court for a hearing to-day.

Leventino was taken to Hackensack, and, according to Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty, was identified by the prisoners there as the head of a gang of black hand bomb exploders operating in New York and vicinity. Italian detectives were assigned to make a round up of suspects, and last night several were being detained at police headquarters. Commissioner Dougherty said they had made confessions corroborating the statements of the men under arrest in Hackensack.

One of the latter prisoners is declared to have betrayed the gang when a portion of his reward for firing off a bomb was held back. Disclosures that followed police inquiry, according to reports, indicated that some bombs were manufactured here with dynamite stolen on contracting jobs in nearby counties.

DOCTORS SUFFER

LONDON, Oct. 11.—The doctors of London have been made the first victims of the vengeance of the militant suffragettes, whose anger has been aroused by the decision of the Home Secretary, Reginald McKenna, to resume the forcible feeding of their sisters, who start hunger strikes when convicted of outrages.

A band of women yesterday raided Harley street in the west end of London, which is almost entirely occupied by the offices of specialists. The women smashed windows right and left all along the street.

The secretary of the Women's Social and Political Union, the militant organization, says yesterday's attack on this medical centre is merely a commencement of the women's protest against the revival of the torture of forcible feeding.

Will Sail Incognito.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—Mrs. Pankhurst will not leave for this country on the steamer La Provence to-day as had been arranged as she has heard she is likely to be detained by the immigration authorities here, according to a cable message received yesterday. She will take another steamer and sail under an assumed name, "to test the efficiency of male government."

Success Attends Inauguration.

PEKIN, Oct. 11.—The utmost success attended the first inauguration of the president of the republic of China yesterday, when Yuan Shi Kai was inducted into the office of chief executive. The entire ceremony passed off without the slightest hitch, and was succeeded by a brilliant review of troops, at which the exercises were conducted [illegible] lently.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 11.—A general holiday was declared here yesterday in honor of the Chinese Republic. All the ships of the foreign [illegible] present in Chinese waters dressed with flags.

MORE LIFT-LOCK REASONING

In another column we reprint a portion of an editorial from the Toronto Star dealing with the Review's criticism of The Star's attitude toward Militarism.

The first thing to be made clear, and which we thought we had made clear enough, is the difference between a belief in the necessity for militarism and a belief in war. Can the Star not see that a person may hold that soldiers are a necessity without at the same time thirsting for the blood of the foreigner?

The Star says: "There is no longer any sense in war." We would go even further than the Star and affirm dogmatically that there never was any sense in war. War is a relict of barbarism. Militarism, as we understand it, is an indispensable adjunct of civilization.

Personally we do not care for militarism, and have no more desire to become a soldier than we have to join the police force. But because we do not want to become a Bobby, and because we detest thieving and abhor murder and all lawlessness, we are not so foolish as to condemn the city soldier in blue and attribute all these human vices to his existance.

You could argue a policeman off his beat, or at least pass an act of Parliament to get rid of him; but no amount of argument and proof that it is not necessary will abolish robbery and vice. There is no sense in burning a good house down. But we may have a passionate dislike for fires and at the same time make elaborate arrangements for putting them out. No doubt firemen might be better employed digging potatoes, or harvesting wheat, or reporting for the Star; and the money spent on fire-engines might be expended upon threshing machines and printing presses. But while there is so much inflammable material in the constitution of a city, a wise community will prepare for outbreaks.

The application of all this is scarcely necessary. But for the sake of clarity let it be stated that we not only believe that war is a relict of barbarism, but that man himself is a relict of barbarism, and while he has any of that old fire in him there is always the danger of it breaking out.

Humanity, and especially that "nationhood-self-government-autonomy" spirit which the Toronto Star would fight to the last ditch to maintain, is a dump of combustible material and is liable to ignite spontaneously and start a conflagration.

The Star says: "In a grocery store in Peterborough the editor of the Review can find on sale the products of a dozen countries," and that behind these things there are decent, honest men with wives and families depending upon them. That every liner carries people of all nations, and that the interests of the various nations are so interwoven that war would upset the whole concern. All this must be admitted, and for this very reason we would commend the art of national preparedness and military and naval insurance, just as we would commend an efficient police force or fire brigade in a well organized city.

Does the Star think for a moment that if Germany was not kept in [illegible] by the knowledge of a [illegible] force she would care two [illegible] for the German sausages in the Peterborough grocer's window, or a few scattered children of the Fatherland, who happened to be on a trip to New York or Toronto?

If the Star read history aright it would know that Hengist and Horsa came over the North Sea, and some of their descendants are running Canada to-day along with Picts and Scots and a few ancient Britons; and the same old fighting spirit is still in them and only waits for a spark of "interference" to set the old fire ablaze.

This may be "lift lock reasoning," we make no objection to this description of our argument, but take it as a compliment, for Peterborough's lift lock has some force beneath it, and is one of the finest in the world!

AN EDITOR BEYOND THE VEIL

A biography of the late W. T. Stead, who perished in the Titanic disaster, has been written by his daughter. Mr. Stead was famous as an editor, and it was he who established and ran so successfully the Review of Reviews.

But apart from his editorial work, he was an interesting, if somewhat erratic personality, and was regarded by many as a crank. His special weakness was spiritualism. He believed in spooks and professed to hold constant communication with the dead. He had one spiritual agent in particular on the other side of the veil with whom he kept always in touch. His connections with this spirit, whom he called "Julia," might almost be described as a syndicate, or spiritual news association. Mr. Stead being an editor was always looking for the news, and one world was not enough for his operations.

Many stories are told by his daughter of premonitions and signs. It is said that he had a premonition that he would die a violent death. It is also stated that Mr. Stead has appeared since his death to a party in the Upper Room of the "Julia Bureau," and that "his voice rang out through the room, and spoke, saying: "All I told you is true."

If there ever was a personality who would get over the "border line" and move heaven and earth to interview the living, that person was the ubiquitous and indefatigable W. T. Stead. But it is to be feared that the Julia Bureau have been deceived this time, for Stead would not have been content with so brief a statement of his experiences. What an account he could have given of the sinking of the Titanic! He was too good an editor to miss such an excellent opportunity.

READING AND ITS PLEASURES

By F. M. Dela Fosse

Part I Biography

At present the chief interest of patrons of all libraries centres in Fiction. Presumably this will always be the case, but whilst there is small hope that Fiction will ever be relegated to the background in favor of other branches of literature, there is, nevertheless, an appreciable decrease in the patronage of this department and a noticeable increase in that extended to others. During the present year this has been the case in the Peterborough Library, and it is gratifying that it should be so, for there is much of the highest value and interest to be found on the shelves if people will only take the trouble to look for it.

It is very far from the aim of the writer, however, to attempt to belittle the value of Fiction. It is and always will be an abiding necessity in the lives of most of us to have something to turn to that will tend to ease our tired brains and cast our thoughts into channels far removed from the stress and strain of daily toil. But there is reason in all things and there is no more necessity for a continued diet of Fiction for the mind than there is for a continued diet of pork and beans for the body. It has been stated on good authority that there is at the present time in stock, in the storehouses of a well known New York publishing firm no less than 350,000 copies of the popular novel, "The Winning of Barbara Worth." It seems to me that there is something inexpressibly saddening in the knowledge that a work like this, excellent as it undoubtedly is, can sell in such tens of thousands whilst the stupendous labors of philosophers, poets, essayists, and others sell by tens.

LIVES OF MEN.

To-day I was examining the books in the Biographical section of our Library and was astonished at the number that had evidently never been taken out for reading purposes. Some of these, in fact most of them, had been purchased years ago, and afforded mute but eloquent testimony to the fact that the taste of the purchasers had been very far in advance of the taste of those to whom they were catering. Take, for instance, that encyclopaedic work, "The Lives of the Lord Chancellors" (10 vols). and "The Lives of the Chief Justices of England" (6 vols). Whenever I look at these works they seem to me to assume quite an aggressive and sinister individuality, for they hold their heads in such a high and mighty manner among their more gaudily bedecked brethren of a younger generation as if insistently demanding as their right a fair measure of recognition from the public.

Now, it is far enough from my thoughts that everybody should make it a point of necessity to read either of these ponderous works. They are neither of them a character to appeal to the general public but nevertheless, they are distinctively of a type to appeal to a far larger public than is at present aware of their existence. "The Lives of the Lord Chancellors" gives a short account of everyone who has held this high office from its inception to the time of Lord Brougham. It furnishes us with a knowledge of the origin, functions and jurisdiction of the office. But, apart from all this, there is very much in the volumes that should prove entertaining reading for those whose tastes do not lie exactly in the line of constitutional law or politics. Biography is more interesting than history to the average individual, and even though the story of the Great Seal is in reality the story of the British constitution, there is enough of the personal element in it to enchain the mind of the reader.

CHANCELLOR ST. SWITHEN.

I confess that until I took up the introductory volume I was in blissful ignorance of the fact that St. Swithin had once held that high office. He was the second Lord Chancellor of England, so that he has claims to renown beyond the pluvious reputation that clings to his name or the fact that he was one of the tutors of Alfred the Great and the introducer of the payment of "Peter's Pence" in England.

"The Lives of the Chief Justices of England" deals with quite as eminent a body of men as the Lord Chancellor and is just as interesting and instructive. It comprises the period between the time of the institution of the office of William the Conqueror to the year 1851 which marked the death of Lord Denman.

SELF HELP.

In the same category as regard lack of patronage may be mentioned "Captains of Industry" (2 vols.); Industrial Biography," by Smiles, and Lives of Eminent European and American Mechanics. These three works have to all appearance never been taken out of the Library. In the light of this fact it is amusing to read in the preface of one of the volumes that "thanks to the more general diffusion of knowledge and the light of Christianity, mankind are beginning to appreciate the labors of those to whom we are indebted for our present unparalleled state of intellectural and social advancement." These books are intensely interesting and grown-ups and juveniles alike will find in them food for both thought and recreation a combination that is somewhat difficult to find in much of our present day literature.

MILITARISM

Toronto Stars' Reply to the Review

Toronto Star's Reply to Review

By a process of lift-lock reasoning the Peterborough Review argues that militarism is the curb to the fighting spirit. It describes The Star as of the opinion that the millennium has arrived and that there will be no war. This misrepresents us. We do not think that there will be no more war. What we do think is that there ought not to be any more, and that there is no man so obscure either in Toronto or Peterborough but that he can, by declaring his disbelief in war, count for something against it.

There is no longer any sense in war. There is not a coast town in any country in Europe that either a German or British fleet could throw shells into without destroying the property of both German and British subjects. There is scarcely a merchant ship on the sea that could be sunk but that the loss would be scattered over London, Paris, Berlin and Toronto. When an earthquake smashed San Francisco, insurance companies in Germany were forced to liquidate, and British companies, in order to pay every dollar due from them without impairing their position, were forced to slightly shade up their rates in Toronto and Peterborough, Australia, South Africa and St. Petersburg. People living in twenty countries and speaking forty languages made up the losses paid by insurance companies in San Francisco. In a grocery store in Peterborough the editor of the Review can find on sale the products of a dozen countries—and if he traced each product home would find at the far end pretty much what he finds at his own end—a decent, honest, industrious man with a wife and family whose welfare and comfort are the main concern of his life. The civilized world, we say, is now one vast organization, and each part benefits from its intercourse with every other part.

Tug at Port Nelson.

OTTAWA, Oct. 11.—The Marine Department received word yesterday by wireless telegraph from Port Nelson that the new dredge, which left Toronto in August, had safely reached Port Nelson in tow of the tug Belleventure. The voyage from Toronto to Port Nelson took forty-two days. The dredge will be immediately put into operation deepening the channel leading to the Hudson Bay Railway terminal.

Queen Dedicates Warship.

NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—A cable from Madrid to The Tribune says: President and Mme. Poincare, accompanied by King Alfonso, Queen Victoria, the Queen Mother, the Premiers of France and Spain, and a large suite, left yesterday in a special train for Cartagenia, where Queen Victoria will dedicate the new warship Espana. The King and President Poincare will then review the Spanish fleet.

Will Call on Empire.

BELFAST, Oct. 11.—The Ulster Liberal Association issued a manifesto yesterday announcing that the Ulster Liberals would disregard the authority of the proposed provincial government and claim the protection of the forces of the Empire in defence of their liberties, "which would be greatly imperilled, by the success of the Anarchistic movement led by Sir Edward Carson."

THE HOME PHYSICIAN

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Cure Most of the Family's Ills.

This Little Box is Mother's Stand-by.

Perhaps if the children, and the "grown-ups" too, always ate exactly the right quantities of exactly the right things, at just the proper times, and in every other way obeyed the rules of health, there would be no sickness in the family, and no need of medicine.

But they never have and probably never will, so in every family there are sure to be more or less frequent attacks of sick headache, biliousness, indigestion, constipation, and kidney and liver troubles, and occasionally some one is "sick in bed".

It is worth a good deal to the mother, then, to have on hand that perfectly safe and reliable remedy for these ills —

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

They invigorate those organs which cleanse the body of waste and impurities, regulating the bowels, stimulating the kidneys and opening the pores of the skin.

Thus Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cure the common ailments and keep the family healthy. This they have been doing for over half a century in every part of the world.

MIKE REILEY'S FUNERAL

Showing That a Mistake May Breed Mistakes

By OSCAR COX

The incident of this story was a recent occurrence. This is mentioned beforehand because there are carping critics who would say after reading it that the plan was farfetched; that such happenings are only to be found in stories and there is nothing probable in it.

Mike Reiley, a young mason, started out to work on a bright morning, light hearted, for by the end of the week, when paid off, he would have the $500 that he had resolved to save before marrying Nora O'Toole, the girl he loved and who loved him better than all the world. The banns had been published, and everything was being made ready for the wedding, which was to occur in just ten days from that date.

Mike said "So long" to his mother, who was a widow, and to his sister, Kathleen, who worked in a paper mill, and then walked briskly along till he came to the house where Nora lived and where he expected to see her sitting in the second story window sewing on her wedding outfit, for Nora knew the time that Mike went to work and was always there to give and receive a smile, and sometimes they had a brief chat together.

This morning Nora threw up the sash, and Mike stopped, and Nora asked him if he had attended to this and to that in preparation for the wedding or the fixing up of the nest in which they were to live, a four room house near Mike's present home. He had satisfied her that he had done the painting needed, and replaced the broken glass in the windows, and mended the roof, and they both agreed that there was nothing more to be done on the premises except what could be done after they moved in. Mike kissed his hand to her. She threw him a kiss in return, and Mike went on his way, while Nora drew down the sash and resumed her sewing.

She was very happy considering that she was to be married so soon to the man she loved and plied her needle briskly. It seemed to go through the fabric of itself.

But suddenly a presentiment came over her that something was about to happen. In her mind's eye she saw a coffin with Mike in it and a lot of mourners sitting about as at a funeral.

Then it seemed to her that Mike sat up in his coffin and said: "What are you sittin' around that way for when you've come to a weddin'? Get up and shake a leg." But Nora drove it out of her head.

About 9 o'clock that night Mike's sister, Kathleen, appeared at Nora's home and asked if she had seen anything of Mike, for he had not come home. Nora was a bit troubled, for Mike, especially since he had begun his preparations to be married, had been very regular in his homecoming after knocking off work at 5 in the afternoon. She told Kathleen that she had not seen him since he went by in the morning, when he was looking very well and very cheerful. She asked Kathleen to tell him when he returned to come and let her know of his arrival, for she would not go to bed until she had news of him.

Mike did not come home that night, and in the morning her mother, his sister and his sweetheart were all very much troubled about his absence. They hoped that the postman would bring a note from him stating that he had been called upon to do some work which would take him too far from home to warrant his coming in the evening and going out again the next morning. But the postman passed, whistling at the door of every other house on his way except that of the Reileys, not leaving them a single letter.

The day ended without any word from Mike. They would have sent to where he worked to inquire about him, but Mike had never taken pains to keep them informed as to the places where he was employed, since he was frequently changing, sometimes working on two or three different jobs in the same day.

A week passed, and Mike did not turn up. His mother was broken down with worry. Nora ceased her preparations for the wedding. Kathleen alone, who was obliged to go to work every day and whose mind was therefore employed, stood up under the trouble. All three of them scanned what newspapers they could get hold of to see if a body had been found anywhere that might be Mike's.

One morning just before Kathleen went to the factory she saw her mother, who was looking in a newspaper for news of Mike, fall in a faint. Kathleen ran to her, and her first words after regaining consciousness were:

"My boy is dead!"

"Where is it, mother?" asked the horror stricken girl. "Show me!"

Mrs. Reiley put her finger on the item, and Kathleen read that the day before a man had staggered into St. Luke's hospital and had fallen unconscious. He had revived just long enough to say "My name's O'Reiley."

"It isn't Mike at all, mother," said Kathleen. "There's no 'O' to our name."

"Yes, it is," replied the poor woman. "The newspapers never get names right, and like enough the hospital people made the mistake themselves."

"Now, don't you worry, mother, dear. I'll go to the hospital—I'll do no work today—and see if it's Mike. But I'm sure it isn't."

So Kathleen, instead of going to the factory, started for the hospital and on reaching it asked to see the body of the man who had died there the day before. She was taken to where the body lay, and the moment she looked at it the tears started to her eyes, and she turned them away at once, so ghastly was the sight.

"It's my brother, Mike Reiley," she moaned.

She went away, stopping at Nora's to break the sad news to her. Nora was broken hearted, but bore her affliction with resignation. She went with Kathleen to Mrs. Reiley and told her that the body in the hospital was Mike's.

After awhile when they had become quieted they took steps to have the body brought to the house for the funeral. They called in friends, who took the burden upon themselves of making all the preparations. An undertaker was instructed to bring the body, and all other details were attended to.

The same evening the body arrived, already in its coffin.

"He looks very natural," said one. "He must have died a peaceful death."

"How changed!" said another. "I'd scarcely know him."

And so the comments went on. Mrs. Reiley gazed down upon the corpse, her face blinded with tears. Nora would not look at it, saying that she preferred to remember the happy countenance of her lover as she saw it when he looked up at her while she was sitting at her window the last day he ever went to work.

When the day of the funeral came round the mother, the sister and the betrothed were given seats near the coffin, while the friends of the family took chairs behind them. There they awaited the opening of the funeral ceremony.

We left Mike on his way to his work. He was engaged in laying brick all day, and just before knocking off the boss drove up in a buggy and said to him:

"Mike, I've got a call for a chimney out in the country. The carpenter work is all done, and they can't do any more till the chimney is put in. I've agreed to send a man out tonight to go to work the first thing in the morning. I want you to go."

Mike demurred, but the boss offered him double pay, and he consented. A train was leaving in half an hour which was barely enough time for him to catch it. He arrived at his destination at 11 o'clock at night and found a team waiting for him that carried him fifteen miles into the country, where there was no other house than the one being built within a considerable distance.

Mike worked several days on the chimney. He thought he should try to get word to his family as to the reason for his absence, but he was too busy to think much about it. He had once or twice remained on a job for several days without going home or sending word and did not expect to be longer on this one. But before he finished it he was called upon to put in the foundation walls for a house ready to be built a few miles away and was offered double pay if he would do it. He thought what a beautiful bridal gift he could buy for Nora with the extra money he was earning. He would take the job and if Nora complained of his being away so long just before the wedding he would console her with the gift.

When Mike finished his work and went home, as he approached the house where his mother lived he saw a hearse and carriages standing before the door. Terrified, he went in, eager to know who was dead. There sat his mother and sister and bride to be in a row before a coffin. His mother gave him one look and fainted. Nora drew back from him. Those occupying the rear seats tumbled over each other to get through the narrow door.

Kathleen alone seemed to take in the situation.

"Mike," she cried, "ye're not dead after all!"

"Dead? Why should I be dead?"

"I made a mistake. Mebbe I didn't look close enough."

"What's the matter with you all?" asked Mike.

By this time Nora had recovered her wits and flew to her lover's arms, burying her face on his breast and crying:

"Oh, Mike, sure it's a miracle! We thought you were in your coffin."

"In my coffin? Do I look like that?"

This led to a comparison, and it was agreed that the dead man, though not unlike Mike, under other circumstances would not have been mistaken for him.

In a twinkling all was changed. The faces put off the lugubrious appearance of mourning and put on the happy expression of wedding guests, for it was decided to hurry up the bridal preparations and turn the funeral into a marriage. That very evening the pair were united and went to live in the house they had prepared for their reception.

My story shows, among other things, the power of the imagination. Kathleen's fear that she would find Mike's dead body in a coffin impressed on her mind that she saw him. This started a chain of imaginary incidents that led to a union of errors. After all, was there anything especially remarkable that, Mike being supposed dead, another person with a similar name should have been mistaken for him?

Well Used to It.

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

Canadian women are continually writing us such letters as the two following, which are heartfelt expressions of gratitude for restored health:

Glanford Station, Ont. — "I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and never found any medicine to compare with it. I had ulcers and falling of womb and doctors did me no good. I suffered dreadfully for years until I began taking your medicine. I also recommend it for nervousness and indigestion." — Mrs. HENRY CLARK, Glanford Station, Ont.

Chesterville, Ont. — "I heard your medicines highly praised, and a year ago I began taking them for falling of womb and ovarian trouble.

"My left side pained me all the time and just before my periods which were irregular and painful it would be worse. To sit down caused me pain and suffering and I would be so nervous sometimes that I could not bear to see any one or hear any one speak. Little specks would float before my eyes and I was always constipated.

"I cannot say too much for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, for there are no medicines like them. I have taken them and I recommend them to all women. You may publish this testimonial." Mrs. STEPHEN J. MARTIN, Chesterville, Ontario, Canada.

Best Way to Polish Furniture.

Remove the dust thoroughly before starting to polish. For the crevices use a small stick covered with cloth or a brush. Should there be any greasiness, wash with vinegar and water before polishing. Use very little polish and apply on a pad of flannel or soft linen. Be provided with a second duster with which to hold the furniture while polishing.

Packing Hint For China.

It should be remembered when packing china or glassware that damp straw is better than dry and newspaper more advisable than tissue paper.

Keeping Cups Whole.

To prevent custard dishes or cups from cracking when pouring hot custard into them place the dish on a cap on a damp cloth.

CRIED NIGHT AND DAY

Mrs. Adelaite Ouellette, St. Bruno, Que., says: "My little boy cried night and day from stomach trouble and nothing seemed to help him till I got a box of Baby's Own Tablets. They soon made him well and happy again. I have also found them valuable at teething time." Thousands of other mothers have the same praise to offer not only for stomach trouble and teething troubles but for all the minor ills of little ones. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Brockville, Ont.

For Monuments to Women

Senator Jones of Washington, an ardent advocate of female suffrage, introduced a bill recently naming part of the capitol grounds "the Parthenon" and setting it aside for monuments to the achievements of women.

Mr. Jones' measure specifies that the tract in front of the Union station be called "the Acropolis," and there is no provision prohibiting its use by mere man. The tract nearer the capitol is reserved to women.

"I am not much of a classical scholar," said Mr. Jones, "but I selected these ancient names in gratitude to the Greek poet Euripides, whose play 'The Medea,' contains perhaps the earliest plea for woman suffrage. You probably recall the chorus, which has been translated something like this:

Life, life is changed and the laws of it o'er trod.
Man hath forgotten God.

"And woman, yes, woman, shall be terrible in story.
The tales whereof one telleth shall be other than of yore.
For a fear there is that cometh out of woman and a glory,
And the hard hating voices shall encompass her no more."

BIBLE STUDY ON JEALOUSY AND ENVY PUNISHED

—October 12.—Numbers 12.—

"Love envieth not; love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly."—13:4, 5

ST. PAUL includes envy, and therefore jealousy, in his enumeration of the works of the flesh and the Devil together with anger, malice, hatred and strife. These are works of the Devil in that they are characteristic of Satan. They are works of the flesh in that the dying process includes evil works, evil desires of every kind. More and more our race has become subject to these adverse influences as it has become weak, dying, unbalanced.

St. Paul urges the Lord's people to put off these Satanic characteristics and to adopt instead those which make us Godlike. These are meekness, gentleness, peace, long-suffering, brotherly kindness and love. St. Peter indicates that those having characteristics well developed will be granted abundant entrance into the Kingdom.—2 Peter 1:11.

Miriam's Jealousy and Envy.

To-day's Bible Study tells of a serious error made by Aaron and Miriam, Moses' brother and sister. That Miriam was the leading spirit is fully demonstrated by the outcome, which shows that God's punishment rested upon her, and not upon Aaron.

Moses had married an Ethiopian. At this time she had come to live with him in the Camp, and thus became the first lady of the nation. Previous to this, Miriam had filled this office. It was but natural that she should feel the loss of her position, especially as she reflected that her sister-in-law was of an alien race.

The Lord's presence.

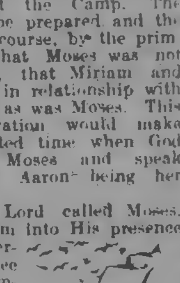
This fact seemed to give Miriam's jealousy a religious footing; and she undoubtedly convinced herself that her hostility to her sister-in-law was based upon a high moral ground, affecting God's honor and the future possibilities of Abraham's seed in the Promised Land. No good people can harbor jealousy, envy, etc., without deluding themselves into thinking that the peculiar circumstances of their case fully justify their attitude.

Miriam became more and more convinced that God would not use especially one who had thus lost caste with herself. Her poisoned mind began to see evidences that the Lord had forsaken Moses, that otherwise he would not have fallen into what she considered a great mistake. She communicated her fears to Aaron. The two doubtless thought seriously and prayed much respecting the sad fall of Israel's leader and the necessity laid upon them to make good his dereliction.

Apparently Aaron was a weak character merely used and useful as Moses' mouthpiece. He showed much weakness on this occasion, as also when he made the golden calf and assisted the people in their adolatrous worship. Miriam probably asserted at that time that such would be the only course to take to satisfy the rebellious spirit of the people.

The text implies that Miriam began to spread her seditious suggestions throughout the Camp. The people were to be prepared and the Lord helped, of course, by the primary suggestion that Moses was not the only leader, that Miriam and Aaron were also in relationship with the Lord exactly as was Moses. This insidious preparation would make ready for expected time when God would disown Moses and speak through Miriam, Aaron being her mouthpiece.

Suddenly the Lord called Moses, Aaron and Miriam into His presence before the Tabernacle. All three obeyed the summons, Miriam doubtless supposing that now the Lord would oust Moses from the leadership and appoint herself.



Miriam seven days outside the camp.

The denouement, however, was very different. God did, indeed, declare that He had used Miriam and Aaron, but that His dealing with Moses was on a very much higher plane. To him God had spoken directly, not through dreams and visions. Thus the ambitions which were the grounds for jealousy and evil speaking God promptly set aside.

Additionally the Lord gave a punishment. Miriam was smitten with leprosy. Aaron recognized this to signify that he had upheld his sister in a wrong course. To Moses he prayed for relief, acknowledging their sin and pleading for Miriam.

Then Moses cried to the Lord. God heard him and healed Miriam then but directed that she be treated like others healed of leprosy. All such were required to remain seven days outside the Camp, to see that no further symptoms of the disease appeared.

St. Paul explains that the various things commanded Israel under the Law Covenant were prophetic shadows illustrating things appertaining to Spiritual Israel. Thus leprosy was a type of sin; and the seven days of excommunication represented a complete period of tests respecting a putting away of sin, a cleansing, a return to harmony with God.

The Golden Text is St. Paul's exhortation to the Church. And the Church, we must remember, is the special class called out from humanity in general by the Gospel to become followers of Jesus. Their call is to sacrifice all earthly rights, and to be fully submissive to the Divine will in everything. Their Covenant is to be loyal to every principle and arrangement of the Divine Program under the leadership of the Saviour.

THE WORD QUIZ

The word quiz is one of the few English words which has no root nor etymological meaning to give a hint of what it signifies.

It is said, in fact, that the manufacturer of the word himself did not know what it meant. He made it up jokingly, according to the following story of the word's origin:

Many years ago there lived in Dublin a person whose name was Daly. According to custom he and a party of friends were gathered together one evening, when he made a wager that by the end of the following day every man in Dublin would be speaking a word having no meaning and being derived from no language known.

The wager was eagerly taken up by Daly's associates, who were sure that he had no chance of winning under the circumstances.

Daly owned among other things a theatre and after the party had broken up he called up all the men connected with the theatre, assigned to each a certain portion of the city, supplied them with chalk and instructed them to write the letters "Q U I Z" on every door and shop window in town before daylight. His orders were carried out so effectually that before the morning of the following day was over everybody was asking of his neighbor the meaning of the mysterious word "quiz." The ignorance of its meaning and its sudden appearance all over the city created talk and conjecture for many a day.

When the truth that it was all a joke came out the word was adopted as a synonym for a jest and expressive also of a puzzle because of the questions and general perplexity it had aroused.

To quiz means, therefore, in one sense, to ask questions, and in other to quiz a person means to jest with or poke fun at him.

AGREED WITH BABY

This Mother Found The Right Food For Her Baby Girl.

Mrs. Arthur Prince of Meaford, Ont., writes, on Sept. 12th, 1911: "Some time ago, you were good enough to send me a sample of Neave's Food. Baby liked it so well and it agreed with her, so I am using it right along and think it is excellent.

"I have a friend with a very delicate baby. She cannot nurse it and has tried six different foods, but it does not thrive at all—is always sick and troubled with indigestion. I strongly recommended your food. Will you please send her a sample?"

Mrs. Prince wrote again on Sept. 27th, 1911: My friend's baby has grown wonderfully. I can scarcely credit it. Her next baby, which she expects in five months, will be fed on Neave's Food right from the start—she thinks it is so good."

Mothers and prospective mothers may obtain a free tin of Neave's Food and a valuable book "Hints About Baby" by writing Edwin Utley, 14 Front Street East, Toronto, who is the Agent for Canada. (Mention this paper.)

DROWNED IN SOUTH AFRICA

Dr. Boyd of Bobcaygeon Loses His Brother

Dr. Boyd, of Bobcaygeon, has received word of the drowning of his younger brother out in Africa by the following brief newspaper notice:- Major Alexander Charles Boyd, of the Royal Artillery, was accidentally drowned at Illwo, South Africa. He was the third surviving son of Major General and Mrs. Mossom Boyd, and entered the Royal Artillery in 1891 as a second liqutenant, becoming Lieutenant in 1894, Captain in 1898, Major in 1911. He was on ordinance duty.

PLEASED THE BOYS

Rev T.J. Mansell Gave an Interesting Lecture

"A Trip through Egypt" was the subject of a lecture given by the Rev. T. J. Mansell, of the Charlotte street Church last evening to a large member of the Boys' Department of the Y.M.C.A. Mr. G. Galley, secretary of the Boys' Department, acted as chairman and Vernon Fiske operated the lantern.

A short musical program was also rendered in connection with the lecture.

Instrumental—Gordon Lamb.
Recitation—Jack Scrivens.
Instrumental—Arthur Stewart.

One of the features of the evening was the illustrated hymns which was very much enjoyed by the boys.

Another lecture will be given next Friday evening.

AN EXPLANATION

In view of the fact that several people in the city believe that Mrs. Alice Billington, of 545 Sherbrooke street, is a member of the Free Methodist church, we think it only fair and right to state that she positively is not a member of said church.

A FREE METHODIST.

If linen on which ink is spilled is promptly soaked in sour milk and left for a few hours, then rinsed in cold water the stains will be removed.

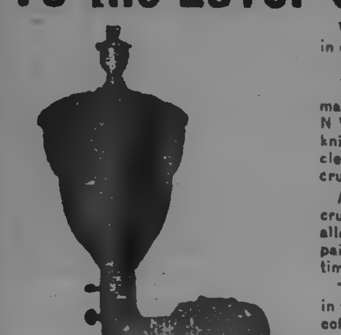
If clothes are sprinkled at night to be ironed the next day, cover the clothes basket with a big, heavy blanket and it will prevent mildew or souring.

Eat and Get Thin

This is turning an old phrase face about, but modern methods of reducing fat have made this revision possible.

If you are overfat and also averse to physical exertion and likewise fond of the table and still want to reduce your excess flesh several pounds, do this: Go to your druggist (or write the Marmola Co., Farmer Building, Detroit, Mich.) and give him (or send them) 75 cents. For this modest amount of money the druggist will put you in the way of satisfying your ambition for a nice, trim, slim figure. He will hand you a large case of Marmola Prescription Tablets (compounded in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription), one of which you must take after each meal and at bedtime until you begin to lose your fat at the rate of 12 to 16 ounces a day. That is all. Just go on eating what you like, leave exercising to the athletes, but take your little tablet faithfully and without a doubt that flabby flesh will quickly take unto itself wings, leaving behind it your natural self, neatly clothed in firm flesh and trim muscles.

To the Lover of Good Coffee



We wish to advise you that we have installed in our store a new

Royal Electric Coffee Mill

manufactured by the A. J. Deer Co., of Hornell, N.Y. This machine is equipped with steel knives which cut the berry into fairly uniform, clean cut particles, instead of grinding and crushing it, as by the old method.

All Coffee Mills heretofore used will only crush the berry mutilating the minute oil cells, allowing the Coffee Oil to evaporate, thus impairing the strength and flavor, and in a short time the coffee becomes rancid, sour.

This is one reason why a pound of coffee cut in this Mill will make more cups of full strength coffee than will any coffee ground the old way.

Another feature about this Mill is that you may have your coffee cut as fine as the finest sand and it will still be practically free from that fine dust which is produced by the old method of grinding. You will, therefore, always have a clear cup of coffee instead of a muddy effect—a result of using the old style mills.

ROYAL CUT COFFEE is also adaptable for percolators or French Drip Coffee Pots.

Try a pound of our Coffee cut on a Royal Mill and we know you will be pleased with the results.

Yours truly,

J. JOHN 336 WATER ST. PETERBORO

THE AGREEMENT THE RADIAL RAILWAY COMPANY ASK THE CITY COUNCIL TO SIGN; MODIFICATIONS WILL BE SOUGHT

Council Consider Terms to be Most Unreasonable on the Part of the Company

HYDRO ELECTRIC SCHEME AFFECTED

At the inception of the Hydro Electric proposition for a power and light service in Peterborough, the street pole line system of which Mr. Johnston Greer is now installing, the Street Railway Co. agreed to string their trolley wires along the ornamental lighting poles from which will be suspended the magnetite arc lamps for street illumination. This would allow of the removal of the present wooden trolley poles, and free our business streets from ugly timber, however, when they met last night had the following form of agreement from the Street Railway Co. to hand for their signature. This agreement the Power Committee considers very much as a hold up, binding the city to conditions which they cannot entertain. The Committee will approach the Street Railway Co. with a view to securing considerable modification to the agreement in question.

THE PROPOSED AGREEMENT.

This Agreement Made this day of A.D., 1913.

BETWEEN

The Municipal Corporation of the City of Peterborough, hereinafter called "the City" of the First Part,

- and

WHEREAS the railway has built and is operating a street railway along the public streets of the City of Peterborough, and under a Franchise granted to it for that purpose, has the right to erect poles along the streets of the said City for the purposes of the street railway.

AND WHEREAS the city is desirous of erecting a street lighting system on the public streets of the city, and has requested the railway to abandon its present poles upon George street, from McDonnel street to the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks near Wolfe street, and upon Charlotte street, from George street to Bethune street, and to use in the place and stead thereof, the metal poles, which are to be provided by the city, for stringing its suspension wires, feeder wires, ground wires, and other apparatus used for railway purposes, and which poles are also to maintain and carry the City's street lighting system.

NOW THEREFORE THIS AGREEMENT WITNESSETH that in consideration of the premises the railway doth agree to abandon its present poles used for its street railway purposes upon George street, from McDonnel street to the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks near Wolfe street, and upon Charlotte street, from George street to Bethune street, and to remove all wires and fixtures therefrom, and to use the metal poles belonging to the City for stringing its suspension wires, feeder wires, ground wires, and other apparatus used for railway purposes, as hereinafter provided.

1. The City covenants and agrees that it will erect metal poles along the parts of the streets hereinafter mentioned, the poles being of tubular metal, and of such height, weight and size as shall be satisfactory to the railway for its uses in conducting its street railway. Said poles shall be erected in a manner satisfactory to the Railway, and shall be provided with substantial, psoper and convenient means of attaching suspension wires, and any other necessary wires or attachments. Said poles shall also be located and erected along straight sections of trolley wire, so as to give suspension points of intervals of not more than 115 feet at the maximum, while at all curves, turnouts, intersections, switches, etc., poles shall be located, installed and erected to the number and in the position required by the Railway, in lieu of which the Railway will continue to use its own poles.

2. The City also covenants and agrees that is at any points on the parts of the streets above mentioned, the City does not desire to erect or install lamps, but at which poles are required by the Railway, that the City shall erect plain tubular metal poles of such height, weight, size and manner as required by the Railway. The said poles to become an integral part of the Railway system.

3. The City does covenant and agree that it will bear all expenses of whatsoever nature or kind that the Railway may be put to in changing the Railway's system on the parts of the streets above mentioned, in the matter of poles, suspension wires, feeder wires, ground wires, and all other changes incidental thereto, from its present condition to a condition wherein the metal poles provided by the City are used. The city further covenants and agrees to pay the Railway at the rate of $10.00 per hour per "line" of cars, for each hour or fraction thereof that the traffic on each "line" is wholly or partially interfered with for loss of revenue and interruption of traffic during the period said system is being changed. It is further provided that the City agrees to pay such bills of the Railway for making said change as its presents, within ten days after presentation.

4. The Railway shall, so soon as the transfer above mentioned has been made, and upon obtaining the written consent and concurrence of The Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, and The Otonabee Power Company, Limited, who have the joint issue of the said wooden poles, remove said poles no longer required. The cost of removing said poles and delivering them at Pole Yard on London street, east, to be paid by the City.

5. The City shall bear all extra expense and cost to the Railway in case the Railway shall desire to carry trolley feed wires, power transmission wires, ground wires, or signal wires, on the poles furnished and erected by the City, or to make use of the said poles in any similar way for the necessity of carrying on its business, provided, however, that is the City does not desire to permit the Railway to carry feed, power, ground or signal wires or other apparatus on the said poles, it shall supply an alternative route equally as safe, suitable and satisfactory to the Railway as over the said poles, and shall bear all extra expenses incurred by the Railway over and above the expenses that would have been incurred if the Railway's present poles had been used for such purpose, and it is agreed that the evidence that the Railway produces as to what amount constitutes such increased expense shall be accepted by the City as final and binding.

6. Whereas at the present time the Railway has feeder wires erected on poles of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, Limited, as short cuts to points of their system where they desire to have feeders applied, and it is possible that the City is going to purchase the Plant of the Peterborough Light and Power Company, in which case the City agrees that if they do take over the Peterborough Light and Power Company's lighting system that they will permit the Railway to run feeder wires or power transmission wires for purposes of the street railway only, on any distribution system poles, free of charge, that may be the property of the City, and the Railway agrees to erect and maintain such wires.

7. The City hereby releases and agrees to save harmless the Railway from (a) any and all claims whatever for damages to either person or property due to the presence on any poles used of electricity, or the leakage through same of electric current. (b) Any damage to lamps or connections or other apparatus, not the property of the Railway, installed on or in said poles, or hindrance or interference with the operation of the said lamps or apparatus which it may be alleged is caused by operation of the street railway or any occurrence thereon, either regular or accidental. (c) From any loss, injury or damage however caused to any property, person or persons whomsoever by reason or in consequence of, or resulting from the use of said poles by the Railway harmless from any and against all claims, costs and proceedings of every kind and nature whatsoever which may be made or taken in respect of or arising out of such injury, loss or damge.

8. The City shall for the period covered by the Railway's franchise, and by any extensions thereof, paint keep in alignment, re-install for defects in material or looseness of joints or footings; provide new suspension wire and other attachments and insulators, and pay for their renewal on the poles, (work to be done by the Railway or by arrangement with it); and otherwise to completely maintain said poles free of all expense to the Railway, in a manner that they can be most economically and conveniently used by the Railway, of which the Railway will be the sole judge.

9. Should any pole or poles become defective for street railway purposes for any cause in the opinion of the Railway, it or they shall be replaced by the City without delay on written notice from the Company that same should be replaced.

10.—The Railway shall have the free use of poles for advertising or other purposes in the same manner as it would use its own poles.

11. Provided, however, that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to surrender any rights or in any way contravene or mitigate against the Railway's franchise, as granted to it by the City and dated the 14th September, 1903.

12. The City covenants and agrees that in making any changes to its street lighting system it will not disturb or in any way interrupt the service of the Railway, and that the employees of the Railway shall at all times have access to the said poles for the purpose of the Railway only.

13. Wherever used throughout this Agreement the words "the City," and "the Railway" shall be deemed to extend and apply to the respective successors and assigns of the parties hereto.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the said parties hereto have hereunto set their corporate seals attested by the hands of their proper officers.

Worth Saving?

A bar of N.P. SOAP costs 15¢. It takes from four to five 5 cent cakes of other soaps to come near the same weight. That's a difference of at least 5¢. On a dollars worth of soap it amounts to from 25¢ to 40¢.

And N.P. SOAP is better soap.

Try it and see.

Escaped Lunatic a Menace.

CHATHAM, Oct. 11.—A man, who is supposed to be an escaped lunatic from the London asylum, is terrorizing the residents of the vicinity of Blenheim. Thursday he made his appearance near a farmer's house, and with a revolver, gave chase to two small boys, shooting the gun off several times during the pursuit. The boys were not injured, but they and their parents were badly scared. The man frightened several other people, also of the vicinity. Constables Fagan and Earle tried to locate the lunatic, but he is still at large.

Former Cheese Buyer Dead.

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 11. — The death is announced at Dixon's Corners of John R. McNeil, a former leading Brockville cheese buyer, who carried on an extensive business as a produce dealer before overtaken by ill-health ten years ago. Since then he has lived in retirement at Dixon's Corners.

Commission Will Resume Tuesday.

KINGSTON, Oct. 11.—The prison reform commission will resume sessions on Tuesday, but these will last only three days, as J. P. Downey, one of the commissioners, has to leave in three days' time, and an adjournment is necessary.

Vegetables like beets and green corn that contain sugar do not keep well and should be eaten as soon as possible.

Makes Cooking Easier

A HANDY range—truly. The whole front section raises for toasting or broiling. You wonder how you ever got along without it. You can regulate the oven to the exact heat with the sliding damper. The oven door is, of course, the drop style—to prevent burning the hands in basting, or trying cakes and pies. The door of the warming closet opens down, too, forming a wide shelf for keeping a large dinner warm.

And the grates always work free—they can't warp and stick. And easy to clean! The nickel is removable. The beautiful white doors can be kept spotless with a damp cloth. See this range—or write for booklet, "The Cost of a Range."

Women's Pains

"I received your sample of Zutoo Tablets, and took them for severe pain (monthly) and headache. At the end of 30 minutes I was entirely free from pain and experienced no more throughout the period. I suffer a great deal at these times and feel grateful that I now have a remedy which affords quick relief. Every woman in the land should know about Zutoo Tablets and what they will do."

NORMALITES AT SCHOOL

An Enjoyable Time at the Young Women's Christian Association

The Y.W.C.A. entertained the Normal and Model students last evening in the gymnasium of the "Y." The entertainment took the form of a school, suitable prizes being awarded the smartest and most clever pupils. Refreshments were served when school let out, after which "School Days" was sung, and everyone went away reporting one of the most enjoyable evenings ever spent.

Vesper service will be held in the "Green Room" of the Y.W.C.A. on Sunday at 5 o'clock. This is a most attractive, home-like service for all who feel inclined to spend a half-hour with us Sunday evenings.

Mr. Mansell will deliver the address Sunday, October 11th, and Mrs. Thomas Cruikshanks will provide the music.

"His name shall endure forever, His name shall be continued as long as the sun."

GOOD BLOOD THE SECRET OF HEALTH

To be Healthy You Must Keep the Blood Rich, Red and Pure

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are useful in any disease caused by thin or impure blood, and the list of such diseases is astonishingly large. Anaemia literally means a condition in hwich the blood is thin and watery. Chlorosis is a form of anaemia most common to growing girls. In rheumatism the blood becomes thin more rapidly than in any other disease. After an attack of la grippe or acute fevers the blood is always thin and impure, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the tonic to use during convalescence. When the blood is poor and thin the stomach suffers. The food ferments, gas and certain acids form and the trouble is pronounced indigestion or dyspepsia. The nerves receive from the blood all of their nourishment to keep up their energy and repair waste or damage. Some forms of paralysis are caused by thin blood. The progress of locomotor ataxia is stopped in many cases when the blood is made pure, rich and red. This is only a partial list of the troubles having their origin in impure, watery blood, and all can be cured by supplying the blood with its missing constituents.

This is exactly what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do. Their chief mission is to make rich, red blood, and this good blood reaches every organ and every nerve in the human body, thus driving out disease and bringing renewed health and strength to thousands of weak, despondent people.

Ask your neighbors. There is not an inhabited corner in Canada where Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have not restored some sufferer, and all over this country there are grateful people who do not hesitate to say they owe health—in some cases life itself—to this great medicine. If you are ailing begin to cure yourself to-day by using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Sold by all dealers in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, One

INCREASE IN THANK OFFERING

The annual Thank Offering of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of St. Paul's church was held in the Sunday school yesterday afternoon and was presided over by the president Miss Dickson.

Among the papers read was one of particular interest to the members It was by Miss Dickson on "Thought and Thanksgiving." Mrs. Robert Pogue contributed a most interesting and exceptionally good paper on the "Aim of the Foreign Missionary Societies and its Inference."

A solo rendered in a charming manner by Mrs. Dickson Hall was very much appreciated by the ladies present. A reading by Mrs. Mason was also very much enjoyed.

The Thank Offering taken up amounted to $712, and was not only very encouraging but a decided increase over that of last year.

The annual business meeting will be held in December.

ANNIVERSARY

Special Services at Gilmour Memorial Church

Anniversary services will be held at Gilmour Memorial Church on Sunday, and services of a very interesting character are anticipated. Rev. F. A. Conners, pastor of the Park street Baptist church, will preach at the morning service.

KNOX CHURCH

Individual Communion Service on Sunday October 19

On Sunday, Oct. 19, the morning service of Knox Church will take the form of the presentation of individual communion, at which Rev. Dr. Thomas, of Toronto, will officiate.

At the evening service, Rev. E. Bosworth of Montreal, will preach. His subject will be; "Does the Roman Catholic Church need to be Evangelized?"

EXTEND CALL

Centreville Congregation Ask for Rev. A. McCorniche

The congregation of Centreville Presbyterian Church, met last night with Rev. H. J. Keith, presiding as Moderator, when a call was extended to Rev. A. McCorniche, who for the past fifteen years has been a minister in Ayr, Scotland.

The call will be further taken up by the Presbytery of Peterborough at a meeting in St. James' Square Church, Toronto, on Wednesday, October 15th.

Central Park

If the fine weather should continue there will be a service in Central Park, Sunday night. By request Mr. Mulligan will sing Sankey's "The Ninety and Nine" and "My Mother's Prayer."

A Dark Hint.

Somebody was talking to a newly married couple who were spending their honeymoon at Scarborough. "You must not leave Scarborough till you've seen the cemetery," he said. "It's well worth a visit!"

They said they would go, but they forgot about it until too late. Then the young wife reproached her husband. "George," she said, "you haven't taken me to the cemetery yet."

"Well, dear," was the reply, "that is a pleasure I must defer until some time in the future."—Pearson's.

The Scriptures.

The present arrangement of the Scriptures into chapters originated in the thirteenth century with Cardinal Hugo, who devised it while making a Latin concordance. The division into verses was introduced by the celebrated printer, Robert Stephens, in his Greek Testament (1551 and in his Latin Bible (1556-7).

A Valuable Book.

Claude Lorraine's "Book of Truth," said to be one of the rarest and most valuable volumes in Europe, is owned by the Duke of Devonshire. It is worth six times as much as the "Mazarin" Bible, the most costly book that the British Museum can boast. The late duke refused an offer of £20,000 for it.

"PEBLO" GLASS

The demand for this High Quality Glass has increased so rapidly that we are forced to buy it in very large quantities. We have now the invoices for the largest quantity of unground glass that has ever come to this city.

This "Peblo" Quality Glass (for which we have the exclusive agency) is as near perfect as is possible to make glass. Lenses ground from it are hard and brilliant, and as clear as crystal. We use this High Quality Glass in all repair work as well as all new work, and while it costs us more to make "PEBLO" Lenses, remember, it costs you no more than you pay for the ordinary kind.

All our Lens Grinding is done on automatic machines and is in charge of Mr. C. A. Primeau, who has had 14 years experience in Lens Grinding.

We have one of the Best Equipped Optical Parlors in Canada, and all examinations are conducted personally by Mr. A. A. Fowler.

SOCIAL EVENING SPENT AT GEORGE ST. CHURCH

The Church Formally Welcomes Rev. Mr. Peever to His Pastorate

Last evening the large Sunday School room at George Street Methodist Church was filled to its capacity with members of the congregation and friends called together to greet the new pastor, Rev. Mr. Peever, and to welcome him to his home and duties. While he has been in charge of the pulpit for some weeks he has not had the opportunity of meeting the congregation as a whole, very many being absent during the summer months on vacation.

Mr D. W. Dumble filled the chair. Interspersed on the program were several musical numbers, a violin solo by Miss Mignon Teigmann, of Kingston; a vocal quintette by the Misses McKee, Mrs. Telford and Mrs. E. Telford; a song by Mr. Jas. Brown, and song by Mrs. Renwick. These selections, as well as those played by the orchestra of the Sunday School added variety to the program of short addresses.

Clergymen in charge of the several Methodist Churches in the city were called to the platform. Rev Mr. Cragg, of Mark Street Church, spoke briefly, as well he might, having been warned by the chairman that five-minute speeches would be the rule. Rev. Mr. Cragg spoke of his connection with George Street Church, and the work throughout the city generally, most hopefully, and in a burst of confidence said he had gotten in George Street Church the best pastor's wife in the district.

Rev. Mr Clarry, of St. James' Church, south, gave a brief talk on Methodism and its claims on the loyalty of its members, and told of the progress in the south. He welcomed Rev. Mr. Peever as a valued addition to the strength of the Methodist body in the city.

Rev. Mr. Mansell, of Charlotte street Church, said he considered Rev. Mr. Peever as one man eminently fitted for all pastoral needs and that the interests of the church spiritually were in good hands.

Rev. Mr. Peever briefly thanked the friends for such a cordial manifestation of regard for himself Mrs. Peever. He had learned things since coming to Peterborough. He had, he knew, the hearty support and confidence of his brethren in the ministry.

He had learned of the large kindness of the church, of both old and young. He felt he would have confidence and help. He also learned that he would not spoil for want of something to do in George St. Church. There was a great strain on heart and brain in a modern pastorate. There were very many duties and the imperative need for strong pulpit preparation. He desired co-operation so far as possible. He desired suggestions in his work. He was here to spend his life in the welfare of the congregation. He hoped to avoid getting into a rut, one danger often present in large congregations. A second danger was that it might break up into sections, that would differ. We should preserve a strong sense of unity. All arms of the service should work together. We should use the possibilities in our young people in church work and service. To get the best there must be interdependence, all working together.

Using as an illustration "how to keep a husband," he went on to say how to keep a pastor, by garnishing him with patience, charity and supporting him with devotion and loyalty.

The need to-day is that the church should build its life into its different organizations, welding all its people into a united family, working for the common object of church progress and prosperity, and looking for the dedicating spirit of God on our work.

He renewed his thanks and hopes for a pastorate of the very best.

Before the gathering dispersed the friends were entertained to refreshments served by ladies of the Ladies Aid.

The Chinese Music.

The Chinese have eight instruments for making their ritual music—the bell, the flute, the drum, the sonorous stone, the fife, the plume, the shield and the axe. The last three make no music, but are used as decoration or emblem in the musical ceremonies and are enumerated as musical instruments. In every ceremony there are always two instruments of each kind, sometimes as many as four or six, never an odd number, in order to emphasize the duality of the Chinese people. For instance, one drum announces the beginning of the music, and its mate strikes the last note; one bell calls, and its counterpart answers.

Science and Sound Fact.

"The working of the human mind when asleep are full of wonder," remarked a scientist who was paying a visit to an acquaintance. "Have you ever started up from a sound dreamless sleep, with every sense on the alert and with your whole being thrilled with a vivid yet indefinable feeling that something was wrong and instant action required?"

"Often," replied his hostess, "and in nearly every case I have found that I was awakened by the fumbling of my husband's key at the front door!"

Nevertheless He Got Her.

"You say my daughter loves you?" questioned the old man.

"I'm sure of it," replied the young man.

"Well, well," returned the old man, looking the young man over critically. "There's no accounting for tastes, is there?"

And somehow, although the young man knew that he ought to be happy over the possession of the girl, he couldn't help scowling and speculating on that remark of the old man's.

Why The Harmonic Bridge?

THE different tones in a piano scale are the result of vibrations of wires of varying diameters and lengths. Roughly speaking, the larger or longer the wire the lower the tone. Absolute purity of tone comes only from strings whose vibrations are confined solely to the space between the bridge at the bottom and the pressure bar just below the tuning pins at the top. If the strings vibrate beyond the pressure bar they of course make "harsh" tones so often recognized by the cultured ear in even the best pianos.

When you play heavily upon other pianos you force the vibrations beyond the pressure bar, and these harsh tones invariably follow.

Through a patented invention belonging exclusively to these vibrations beyond the pressure bar are purified, and made to harmonize with the true tone of each string, just as notes one octave apart harmonize.

Without the BRASS AGRAFFE HARMONIC BRIDGE indicated by the arrow in the illustration, none can hope to equal the unparelleled tone of the New Scale Williams Piano. Your interest in securing the best piano from every standpoint will surely lead you to choose the instrument which combines with exclusive features of mechanical supremacy the most beautiful of cases and the approval of nearly every one of the world's great musicians.

Come in to-day and arrange to own one of these superb instruments.

Lace Arranged in a Winglike Effect.

IF women resembled angels at Deauville this summer because of their diaphanous finery, they will certainly look like them this winter in some of the new ball gowns. Sleeves are nil in the really up to date models. A seeming mist of tulle and laces, long and scarflike in shape, is draped over bust and bare arms, covered at most by a simple kimono slip of flesh colored chiffon. This naturally accents the already transparent look given by the tulle and laces. The floating scarves fly out charmingly as the wearer moves or dances, often giving the illusion of wings.

In spite of the elegant ceremoniousness of the season's brocaded fabrics used to make the lower part of these gowns, few boast trains. Even when the occasion requires a train, it does not consist of sweeping yards of material trailing their damasked loveliness over polished floors, but an extended panel or breadth, lengthened out just enough to flop about the feet of the wearer with every step. One or two new models show trains of exaggerated length, but they are simply individual fashions, not "the" fashion. Even in the models of trained gowns the slash is still present, but instead of being at the front and side as last season, it is considered smarter to have it at the back of the gown. This may be because of those dances having the knee bending dips and quick backward steps, and, alas, the skirt hem still measures only about twenty-seven inches around in the most exclusive French model gowns.

A typical dress, having style details that shape the ultra fashionable contour of the figure, is shown here in a back and a front view. Ideal for a stout or matronly figure, either young or old, it is on the princess lines so difficult to find in the present modes. Of blue and gold brocade interwoven with tinsel threads and in Persian pattern, it shapes over the bust in softly wrinkled folds; below the hips it is tightened in about the feet by a wide draped breadth of the material, which seemingly melts into the rest of the gown. At the back there is the desirable slash to give the necessary ease in walking and dancing. Blue tulle, draped in a veritable winglike fashion, veils the bare arms and filmy slip of flesh colored chiffon; both are held at the pointed décolleté by a garland band of bright passementerie.

All in black is another gown with winglike shoulder draperies. In this the slash is in the front of the skirt, which, in itself, is about as unlike an ordinary skirt as any heretofore seen. Wide and shapeless, a breadth of one of the very wide satin materials, it is gathered unevenly into the waist line under a wide girdle, and caught up at one side under a black and gold buckle slide, Chinese in design and character. A black Chantilly lace shoulder drapery is posed over the inevitable flesh pink chiffon slip. In front it forms an embroidered décolleté and drops in the back like folded wings.

Such gowns are a success, not because the woman who wears them is stout or thin, but because they are worn over an up to date corset. This does not necessarily mean one of the lackadaisical new elastic models with curves—it would be folly for a very stout woman to attempt to wear that kind—but a corset that makes the best of one's figure regardless of the wearer's size.

Two amusing dresses for youthful figures, shown here, are delightfully up to date. One has a minaret tunic combined with the new shaped girdle, the other is a filmy slashed affair with a skirt resembling Turkish trousers. This latter effect is gained by the long slash in front that allows the dress to fall in about the feet and give it that illusion. The bayadere sash swathes the figure in true Turkish fashion. The gown is of crystal beaded net over white satin; the girlish [illegible] has an inset of [illegible] chiffon down the shoulders [illegible]. The silk sash fairly gleams with warm Oriental tones. A gold lace and beaded casque hat, [illegible] posed, has two long aigrette ornaments at one side, caught by a blue cabochon ornament.

Of black satin, both the skirt and sash in another model contrast in color and texture with the white [illegible] lace tunic that is lightly wired about the edge. The gown top is of white chiffon, the edges defined by black tulle fringe. As a gown for a débutante it is perfect, but it also contains style details enough for half a dozen frocks for the one who must be satisfied with less beautiful materials and simpler dressmaking in her day and evening dresses.

AS a daytime costume the one piece dress is so firmly rooted in feminine favor that it is now considered an indispensable adjunct to every woman's outfit. It is especially suited to our climate, which is too warm in summer to allow for a coat and too cold during most of the winter for anything but long fur or heavy cloth coats. It slips nicely under the automobile coat and is equally good taste when worn to the business office under a fur or storm coat.

One piece dresses have their dressmaking peculiarities. The skirt is seldom lined, an under princess slip or clinging underskirt answering the purpose well enough. Waists are lined in two different fashions. Sometimes there is a simple fitted lining of white silk to protect the underwear from the dark materials of which such dresses are often made. This lining has an added wide girdle of belting about the waist, which holds the weight of the skirt and allows the corsage to blouse slightly. Other dresses have only a little net lining that looks like a party chemise with no armhole and straps over the shoulders to hold the body part in place. This light and skeletonlike under lining serves to hold the corsage in place. A strap of stiffened belting holds it at the waist.

One piece dresses are to be found in every sort of material, from the pique and cotton ratines used by the college girl to the elaborate brocaded crêpes and ottoman weaves for matinee, five o'clock tea or calling. In the more elegant models it only takes a matching coat wrap to make a complete street costume, of which, if carried out in velvet or satin, the coat may sometimes serve for a wrap with other dresses.

A front slash on a simulated underskirt has the appearance of being discreetly buttoned in a one piece dress that has especially well arranged style details. The gown is of black satin, and it also is slashed most of the way up the centre seam of the skirt. The simulated skirt, of cherry colored satin, shows under this wider slash and looks as if it were buttoned closely all the way down the slash seam by round cherry enamel buttons. Both of these skirt slashes have the lower corners rounded off. A cherry satin sash does not encircle the waist, but crosses the skirt diagonally, tying low at one side, and has heavily fringed ends. A slender net and lace frilled fichu finishes the décolleté, passing between two collars at the back. Two lace frills finish each long sleeve. A tiny black satin hat is worn, banded and decorated by two large butterfly loops of velvet. A Japanese apple cluster is thrust into the belt.

A clever tunic effect is arranged in a black and white dress. The dress, of white liberty satin, is laid in loose unstitched plaits in the front of the blouse, the collar and shoulder yoke being of a beautifully hand embroidered batiste. The skirt is half white material and the black satin is added as if it were a deep fold. Both are cut on straight breadths, so that the pleats in the skirt do not extend to the dress hem, a detail of the new skirts.

Simple but very up to date lines are to be seen in a bright blue Shantung frock. There is a slight baggy effect made by the shaping of the side skirt seams. The long sleeved blouse is cut away to disclose a white satin vest outlined with two white lace revers ruffles. The yoke is of white tucked net with a lace sailor collar finishing off the round neck. A pink rose gives a touch of contrasting color at the belt.

Canadian Press Despatch.

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, Oct. 11.—A large number of New York fans still inspired by hope, after the Giants' batting rally of yesterday, descended upon the Polo Grounds gates before opening time. Although a mist rain was falling the weather all morning has been overcast and is generally unsettled.

The probable line-up is:

PHILADELPHIA

Collins, second base.
Baker, third base.
McInnis, first base.
Strunk, centre field.
Barry, shortstop.
Schang, catcher.
Plank, pitcher.

NEW YORK

Herzog, third base.
Doyle, second base.
Fletcher, shortstop.
Shafer, centre field.
Murray, right field.
McLean, catcher.
Merkle, first base.
Mathewson, pitcher.

McGraw will not use Snodgrass again, it is believed as his lameness prevents him getting under easy outfield flies.

POLO GROUNDS, NEW YORK, Oct. 11—Thirty-five thousand fans have gathered to witness what may prove to be the final game of this year's world's series. Mathewson and Plank are again opposed. The batteries announce are Mathewson and McLean; Plank and Schang. McGraw gave the Giants a talking to in the club house and told them if they expected to make a stand they must give Mathewson support with the bat.

FIRST INNINGS.

PHILADELPHIA—Murphy singled; Murphy was forced when Matty took Oldring's bunt and tossed to Fletcher. Collins singled to right, Oldring making third. Oldring scored on Baker's sacrifice fly; Collins went to second on Burns' throw in. Herzog took McInnis' smash and threw to Doyle, who touched Collins. One run, two hits, one error.

NEW YORK—Herzog out on a fly to Murphy; Doyle out Barry to McInnis. Fletcher out on a long fly to Oldring. No runs no hits no errors.

SECOND INNINGS.

PHILADELPHIA—Doyle tossed out Strunk at first. Barry went out on a high fly to Murray. Schang got an infield single, but Plank popped out to Herzog. No runs, one hit, no errors.

NEW YORK—Herzog went out on three straight strikes; Doyle out to McInnis unassisted. Fletcher flied out to Strunk. No runs, no hits, no errors.

THIRD INNINGS.

PHILADELPHIA—Murphy got his second bingle to left. Doyle made an error on Oldring's hot grounder, Murphy going to second. Collins was out when Merkle took his sacrifice bunt and touched him on the line. Both runners move up. Murphy scored when Merkle took Baker's smash and threw to the plate. Oldring went to third and scored on McInnis' sacrifice fly to Burns. Baker was held at first. Doyle threw out Strunk at first. Two runs, two hits one error.

NEW YORK—McLean sent a high fly to Oldring. Merkle lined a fly to Collins. Barry threw out Matty at first. No runs, no hits, no errors.

FOURTH INNINGS.

PHILADELPHIA—Fletcher threw out Barry, Murray took Schang's short fly after a good run. Fletcher caught Plank's fly back of second base. No runs, no hits, no errors.

NEW YORK—Baker threw out Burns at first. Shafer fouled out to McInnis. Murray was thrown out by Plank at first. No runs, no hits, no errors.

FIFTH INNINGS.

PHILADELPHIA—Doyle threw out Murphy at first. Doyle also took care of Oldring's grounder. Collins was out on a fly to Shafer. No runs, no hits, no errors.

NEW YORK—Burns flied to McInnis. Shafer walked the first Giant to reach first. Plank dropped Murray's pop-fly and Shafer went to second. Plank had an easy double play in sight. Shafer scored on McLean's single to left, Murray being held at second. Collins took Merkle's grounder and threw to Barry forcing McLean at second. Barry completed the double play by throwing to first.

SIXTH INNINGS.

PHILADELPHIA—Baker shot a liner to right for a base. McLean threw out McInnis. Doyle threw out Strunk, Baker going to third. Fletcher threw out Barry at first.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

No runs, one hit, no errors.

SEVENTH INNINGS.

PHILADELPHIA—Schang struck out. Doyle threw out Plank who made no attempt to run to first. Murphy walked, Oldring fouled out to McLean.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

NEW YORK—Fletcher flied out to Strunk. Barry threw out Burns at first. Shafer went out by the Barry-McInnis route.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

EIGHTH INNINGS.

Collins went out at first. Matty threw out Baker. Fletcher threw McInnis out at first. No runs, no hits, no errors.

NEW YORK—Baker threw out Murray at first. McLean went out on a fly to Oldring. Barry threw out Merkle at first. No runs no hits no errors.

NINTH INNINGS.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

NEW YORK—Crandall is batting for Mathewson. Crandall out Collins to McInnis. Herzog out on a fly to Barry, Doyle flied to Murphy.

No runs, no hits, no errors.

THIS FINE OLD GENTLEMAN ANSWERED 187 LETTERS IN REGARD TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

People In All Parts of Canada Wanted To Know More About These Wonderful Tablets Made From Fruit Juices.

N. JOUBERT, Esq.

"I heartily recommend "Fruit-a-tives" to all who suffer from Constipation and the painful consequences—Piles. I am now over 74 years old and suffered for over 20 years with Constipation and Piles. I tried all kinds of remedies, saw the doctors and took their medicines but nothing cured me. About four years ago, I tried "Fruit-a-tives"—found they were doing me good. Then I procured an additional supply and was much gratified at the wonderful good they did me. After taking four boxes, I felt well—my bowels were regular and the Piles had disappeared.

My wife was troubled for three years with Asthma, and Eczema on the hands, which made her hands almost useless. The doctor gave her several ointments to use, none of which had any effect. He also advised her to use rubber gloves (she wore out three pairs). I persuaded her as a last resort, to try "Fruit-a-tives". The effect was marvellous. Her hands are cured and the Asthma has also left her. We both attribute our present good health to "Fruit-a-tives".

N. JOUBERT, GRANDE LIGNE, P.Q.

Whether it was the fine, honest, straightforward face that inspired confidence or the simple language, which rang true as a silver bell, that made so many people think over this letter, is hard to say. But the fact remains that one hundred and eighty-seven persons have written Mr. Joubert to enquire more fully about "Fruit-a-tives". And this delightful old gentleman who is now 74 years old—happy in his release from pain—grateful for his cure—took the time to answer every inquiry. Take his advice and try "Fruit-a-tives".

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50—trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

KAISER MAY TRY TO LIFT THE AMERICA'S CUP

[illegible], Oct. 11.—Emperor William yesterday ordered from Max Oertz, the well known yacht builder of this city, a new schooner to replace his present yacht Meteor, and her success will have an important bearing on the question whether Germany will challenge for the America's Cup with a cutter designed by Oertz.

The new schooner for the emperor is to be built at the Krupp works at Kiel, and probably will have less water line than her predecessor which was forced to concede heavy time allowances to her competitors.

The emperor has the fullest confidence in the ability of Max Oertz, and ordered the new boat without waiting for the launching of the new yacht under construction by Herreshoff for Robert E. Tod, of the New York Yacht Club.

"I don't think your father feels very kindly toward me," said Mr. Staylate.

"You misjudge him. The morning after you called on me he seemed quite worried for fear I had not treated you with proper courtesy."

"Indeed! What did he say?"

"He asked me how I could be so rude as to let you go away without your breakfast."

A Celtic Isle.

The smallest dependency of France is the Ile d'Hoedic, situated at the east of Belle Isle. Its population is less than 250. The people do not speak French, but Celtic. Fishing is the principal industry, and all the inhabitants are provided with food at an inn managed by the women. The town has no streets. The houses are mostly of mud.

Enlarging the Supply.

He—I see that there were but 5,080 words in the English language in Shakespeare's time. Now there are 450,000. She—Well, just think how many more people there are who speak English.

Values.

The value of a piece of land is the number of footsteps passing by it in twenty-four hours. The value of a railroad is the number of people near it who cannot keep still.

"THE ONE THING THAT DOES ME GOOD

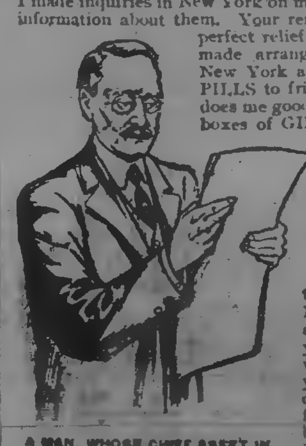
At 60 Years Of Age, Gin Pills Give Me Perfect Relief"

As one begins to get along in life, the vital organs grow less active and need assistance. Men and women of 50, 60 and 70 should read the following letter very carefully. It points the way to a happy, healthy old age and long life.

E. G. WOODFORD, Consulting Mining Engineer,
29 BROADWAY, NEW YORK. 50 BROAD STREET HOUSE, LONDON.

"Bought some of your GIN PILLS at Victoria, B. C. last September. I made inquiries in New York on my arrival there but was unable to obtain any information about them. Your remedy, I find at 60 years of age, to give me perfect relief and I regret very much that you have not made arrangements to have GIN PILLS on sale in New York and London, as I urgently recommend GIN PILLS to friends of my age as being the one thing that does me good. I will be glad if you will send me a few boxes of GIN PILLS to my London address and a few to my office in New York by post if possible".

E. G. WOODFORD.



A MAN, WHOSE CHIEF ASSET IN BUSINESS, IS HEALTH.

P. S. Since receiving the above letter from Mr. Woodford we have completed arrangements for supplying GIN PILLS to the British Public.

Perhaps you are 60 years of age. Perhaps your Kidneys are troubling you. Perhaps you have Pain In The Back or trouble with urinating. Do just as Mr. Woodford did—get GIN PILLS—keep a box always on hand—take them whenever you feel that the kidneys need help. You will find an occasional GIN PILL will keep you in perfect health and free from pain and discomfort. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50. Write for free sample and give GIN PILLS a trial before you buy them. SOCIETY
WEDDING—PERSONALS

ARMSTRONG—DINSDALE

At the Parliament Street Methodist parsonage, Toronto, on Thursday, Oct. 9, a very pretty wedding was solemnized in the presence of a few friends, Rev. T. G. McAteer, B.D., officiating, when Miss Olga Margaret Dinsdale of Peterboro, became the wife of Robt. Leslie Armstrong, of Toronto. The bride was becomingly gowned in her navy blue traveling suit with hat to match. The happy young couple left on the evening train for a short trip to New York and Atlantic City. On their return they will reside in Parkdale.

POPPLEWELL—WATT.

A wedding of particular interest to local people was solemnized in Brantford, on Wednesday, when Miss Mary Watt of Brantford, who is well known in this city, was united in the bonds of matrimony to Mr. Fred Popplewell, of Brantford.

Miss Alma Knapman, of this city, cousin of the bride, acted as bridesmaid.

Mr. J. J. Daly, of Cobourg is in the city.

Mr. E. Rose, of Toronto is among the visitors in the city.

Mr. R. H. Dane, of Montreal, was in the city yesterday, a guest at the Oriental.

Miss M. Fox of Cobourg, Ont., is the guest of Miss Monda White, Rubidge street.

TWENTY-ONE YEARS OF THE CANADIAN CLUB

The Subject of It's Founder Who Will Address Local Club Next Thursday

The Canadian Club is to be congratulated on having for its guest at its opening meeting for the season, on Thursday next, Mr. Charles R. McCullough, of Hamilton, the founder of the Canadian Clubs. Mr. McCullough, who is a forceful and fluent speaker will address the members on "Twenty-one Years of the Canadian Club," for it is now twenty-one years since Mr. McCullough suggested the idea to his friend Mr. Sanford Evans, who assisted him in carrying out his plans, and became first President, Mr. McCullough remaining secretary until the success of the venture was beyond question. Now Canadian Clubs are an National Institution and every town of any size as well as every city in Canada has its Canadian Club, holding meetings regularly during the winter season, listening to speakers on subjects of National interest and learning at first hand of the development of the different sections of our country.

The cost of membership is only one dollar per season and any British subject is eligible. Meetings are held in the Y.M.C.A. and are preceded by an informal dinner, the cost of which is 50 cts. Membership tickets may be had from the following members of the Committee; D. Walker principal of the Normal School; W. H. Munro, J. F. Harvey, V. J. McElderry, G. O. Cameron, G. D. Hall, A. H. Stratton, and W. H. Morris, or from Mr. Hainsworth at the Y.M.C.A. It is hoped that there will be a large turn out of old members at the first meeting and in addition that there will be many new ones.

SWING AT TE NEW C.P.R. BRIDGE NOW A CERTAINTY

The Mission of Mayor Bradburn and Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., to Ottawa was successful, the C.P.R. having agreed to provide a swing at their bridge across the Otonabee River.

It will be remembered that this matter had reached a crisis. The trouble was due to a number of misunderstandings, which could not be set right only by personal interviews and explanations.

The Railway Company will be put to considerable expense but it is probable that the Government will do something to make up for the failure of the Commission to notify the City in the first instance.

Mayor Bradburn received a letter this morning stating that the swing would be placed in the bridge.

BISHOP O'BRIEN ATTENDED CONSECRATION AT JOLIETTE

His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, has returned from Joliette, Que., where he attended the consecration of Father Forbes as Bishop.

Father Forbes, who spent three-fourths of his priestly life among the Indians of Caughnawaga was raised to the hierarchy of Canada in succession to Bishop Archambault.

Among the prelates present were; Bruchesi, Montreal; Gauthier Ottawa; Begin, Quebec, and Sprat, Kingston. Their Lordships, Gauthier, Montreal, Blais, Romouski; Leplane, St. John, N.B.; Emard, Valleyfield; Cloutier, Three Rivers; Bernard, St. Hyacinthe; Brunault, Nicolet; Scollard, Sault Ste. Marie; McNally, Calgary; O'Brien, Peterborough; Beliveau, St. Boniface; Ryan, Pembroke; Laroque, Sherbrooke and McDonnell, Alexandria.

Archbishop Bruchesi was the consecrator being assisted by Bishops Emard and McDonnell. Bishop Gauthier of Montreal preached the sermon.

Places of honor were occupied by the father and mother, brothers and sisters of the new bishop and Sir Francois Langelier, Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec.

Millinery Styles FOR AUTUMN AND WINTER

You will be surprised at the picturesque style of these Hats. Our workroom has spared no pains in making these the most exclusive creations at the prices they are marked. Every one is of this season's popular design. Shapes are admired for their becomingness combined with these qualities: A rich appearance, smart trims of feathers or ribbon and one that will see that fashion presents a hat that at once satisfies the demands of good style, yet keeps within the bounds of economy.

HAMBOURG CONCERT MUSICAL TREAT

Talented Intrumentalists Discourse Charming Music

Last Evening at the Conservatory Hall the Hambourg Concert Company provided a high-class and exceptionally refined entertainment. The company is under the immediate patronage of Their Royal Highness the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and many others of the British Nobility.

Such a feast of beautiful and soul-stirring music as these artists provided last evening will not soon be forgotten by those who had the good fortune to be present.

Mr. Jan Hambourg was especially fine and made the violin sing like an enraptured divine being. He is certainly inspired when he gets hold of his instrument.

The pianist was marvelous, and the plaintive 'cello was in its best mood. The audience, though not too large, nevertheless, from the enthusiastic way in which they received the artists, greatly appreciated their work.

Last night was a rather inconvenient date, as there were a number of other meetings on in the city, which must have hindered many music-lovers from enjoying the exceptional treat offered by the Conservatory.

A little more collusion and less collision on the part of the promoters of the various concerts on these special occasions would give more an opportunity of enjoying them.

It is to be hoped that the Company will visit the city again in the near future, as such concerts are not only entertaining, but are educative and elevating.

RETURN OF THE FAVORITES

Next Thursday Oct. 16th, evening, the attraction booked for the Grand Opera House is the famous Guy Brothers Greater Minstrels. This season Geo. Guy has gathered together the best company that he has ever engaged, and assures the theatregoers of Peterborough a good evening's pleasure. The show is entirely different from former years and well worthy of your patronage, as every member is first-class in his work and each act was carefully selected for this season's tour.

At the rise of the curtain you see a beautiful stage setting, with all new scenery and handsome costumes all of which blend and help to make a very pretty scene. Albert Guy, the favorite interlocutor, will present the eight endmen, who are the best white colored comedians that could be secured, and they know how to entertain you. Their songs dances and jokes are right up-to-the minute. The soloists, who were engaged some months previous to the opening of the season, are trained vocalists and will be heard for the first time in this city. The olio consists of twelve big vaudeville acts that will please everyone. It is seldom that any company carries as large a number of performers as do the Guy Brothers this season, among whom are Herman, known as the Human Bird, a European novelty, the paraphernalia for this wonderful act alone weighing over fifteen hundred pounds. Valley & Arnold a very clever dancing team, will also appear; these men have more different steps than any team on the stage to-day. The Imperial Quartette will be heard here for the first time. Their selections are the best ever heard and worth going miles to hear.

CASE SETTLED OUT OF COURT

John Swanston Asked Damages for Loss of an Eye

The action for damages to the amount of $2,000 against the Peterborough Canoe Company which was to have been heard at the Fall Assizes on Tuesday, has been settled out of court. The plaintiff is John Swanston.

NOTICE

The ladies of St. John's Church will present in the Opera House, under the direction of Miss D. H. Leonard, her gorgeous spectacular extravaganza, "The Land of Golden Dreams," for three nights, commencing Nov. 6th. Will everyone who took part in "Alice in Wonderland," and who is willing to assist in this entertainment please communicate at once with Mrs. Fawcett, 379 Park St., 'Phone 896.

Never stir a sponge cake batter. If this is done the air is allowed to escape.

Always stretch out the body fully when sleeping. When the limbs are crossed or the body curled the rest is not so much benefit.

STORES ROBBED

The store of R. C. Braund in the south end of the city was entered last night through a rear window and a quantity of good amounting to $50 was taken by the intruders. The store of W. J. Routley was also entered by the means of a skeleton key. Only a few cents were taken.

WILL TAKE NO FURTHER ACTION

Says Crown Attorney, Regarding the Eck Case

Crown Attorney R. E. Wood, stated this morning that he would take no further action in the Eck case. The Crown Attorney added that he had never been convinced that the body was that of Eck. As an example of mistaken identity, Mr. Wood told of how on September 20, the daughter of Wm. Bell of Smith, for whom Eck had worked, pointed out a man to her mother, stating, "there's Mac," as Eck was then called. She was sure the man was Eck. On September 22nd, E. J. Singleton, who has been mentioned in connection with the case, received a letter written by Eck and sent from Timmons, Porcupine, where the man is now working.

There is no mistake about the man at Bell's not being Eck, as a son of Mr. Bell, knew him at St. Catharines, and Eck accompanied the son to his father's home in Smith.

Now the remains of the man killed in the auto accident are interred in the Roman Catholic Cemetery and his identity will likely remain a mystery.

THE BALLAD OF YAADA.

[The following poem taken from Toronto Saturday Night is said to be the last written by the late E. Pauline Johnson, the Indian poetess, who died in Vancouver a little over a year ago.]

There are fires on Lulu Island, and the sky is opalescent
With the pearl and purple tinting from the smouldering of peat.
With the Capilano canyon at their feet.

There are fires on Lulu Island, and the smoke, uplifting lingers
In a faded scarf of fragrance as it creeps across the day,
And the Inlet and the Narrows blur beneath its silent fingers,
And the canyon is enfolded in its grey.

As towards the altar candles of the night a censer swings,
And the echo of tradition wakes from slumbering and whispers,
Where the Capilano River sobs and sings.

It was Yaada, lovely Yaada, who first taught the stream its sighing,
For 'twas silent till her coming, and 'twas voiceless as the shore,
But throughout the great forever it will sing the song undying
That the lips of lovers sing for evermore.

He was chief of all the Squamish, and he ruled the coastal waters—
And he warred upon her people in the distant Charlotte Isles,
She, a winsome basket weaver, daintiest of Haida daughters,
Made him captive to her singing and her smiles.

Till his stormy eyes allured her from the land of Totem Poles,
Till she followed where he called her, followed with a woman's trusting,
To the canyon where the Capilano rolls.

And the women of the Haidas plied in vain their magic power,
Wailed for many moons her absence, wailed for many moons their prayer,
"Bring her back, O! Squamish foeman, bring to us our Yaada flower."
But the silence only answered their despair.

But the men were swift to battle, swift to cross the coastal water,
Swift to war and swift of weapon, swift to paddle trackless miles,
Crept with stealth along the canyon stole her from her love and brought her
Once again unto the distant Charlotte Isles.

But she faded, ever faded, and her eyes were ever turning
Southward toward the Capilano, while her voice had hushed its song,
And her riven heart repeated word that on her lips were burning,
"Not to friend—but unto foeman I belong.

"Give me back my Squamish lover though you hate, I still must love him,
Give me back the rugged canyon where my heart must ever be—
Where his lodge awaits my coming, and the Dream Hills lift above him
And the Capilano learned its song from me."

But through long forgotten seasons moons too many to be numbered
He yet waited by the canyon—she yet called across the years,
And the soul within the river that through centuries had slumbered
Woke to sob a song of woman's love and tears.

When she died among the Haidas in the land of Totem Poles,
And you yet may hear her singing to her lover-like companion,
If you listen to the river as it rolls.

But 'tis only when the pearl and purple smoke is idly swinging
From the fires on Lulu Island to the hazy Mountain crest,
That the undertone of sobbing echoes through the river's singing
In the Capilano canyon of the West.

FORMER LIBERAL RIDING TURNS OVER TO BORDEN COLUMN

Conservative Candidate Has Majority of 144 Over ex-Minister of Agriculture,

MAY BE PROTEST

Riding Has Returned Liberal Members Ever Since Confederation.

ST. MARTINE, Que., Oct. 13.—Chateauguay county, which since Confederation, 46 years ago, has been represented in Parliament by a Liberal, in the bye-election on Saturday elected James Morris, Conservative, a resident of the county, by a majority of 144 votes over Hon. Sydney Fisher of Brome.

The vote was probably the heaviest ever polled at a Dominion election, averaging at some of the polls upwards of 95 per cent. It is estimated that throughout the constituency over 80 per cent. of the electors on the voters' list cast their ballots.

The successful condidate motored through three of the principal villages of the riding after the election, and in an interview here stated he believed the result an approbation of Premier Borden's naval policy and record.

"The race cry which was touched on by speakers for my opponent," he said, "had no effect whatever on my French-speaking friends, who form two-thirds of the population of the county. I consider the men accompanying Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who hurled insulting epithets right and left as well rebuked by the electors."

Mr. Fisher said he considered the election one of the most corrupt in his experience. For two weeks, he said, he had seen evidences of crookedness and thought he would be thoroughly justified in entering protest.

Sir Rodolphe Lemieux said: "The loss is all Chateauguay's and all Canada's."

Majorities by parishes:—

	Morris.	Fisher.
St. Jean Crysostome	56	..
Chateauguay	19	..
Sturbain	..	13
Ste. Clothilde	..	20
Ormstown	[illegible]	..
St. Sacrament	2	..
St. Martine	39	..
St. Antoine L'Abbe	3	..
St. Philomen	..	16
Aggregate majority	198	49

Majority for Morris, 144.

The detailed vote by polls is not yet available, except in two or three instances. In three polls of Chateauguay parish, which even the Conservatives expected Mr. Fisher to carry by good majorities, Mr. Morris had a majority of 19, carrying Chateauguay basin and Woodlands respectively by 18 and 46, while Chateauguay village gave Mr. Fisher a majority of 45. In St. Martine at poll 19 Mr. Morris had a majority of 26 and at poll 20 a majority of 13.

MORRIS' VICTORY

The Mail and Empire of to-day says:

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier has lost Chateauguay. For the first time in its history that constituency on Saturday chose a Conservative to represent it in the House of Commons. Throughout the Dominion's twelve general elections, and in its own single previous bye-election, Chateauguay clung to the Liberal interest. Usually, too, the seat was won by large majorities, the balance in favor of the late member in the general election of 1908 being 305 votes. But in the general election of 1911 he had but 40 votes to spare. In the bye-election of Saturday not only was the Liberal majority wiped out, but the Conservative candidate was elected by a majority of about 150.

That it is Sir Wilfrid who is to blame for the loss of the seat will, we believe, be the mature judgment of his own party. The policy which cost him so many seats in 1911 and caused the downfall of his Government came near, as we have seen, to turning the odds against him in Chateauguay in that year. In the present contest—though almost from the beginning of it to the end of it he labored strenuously in the riding—Sir Wilfrid had the prudence to say practically nothing about that unfortunate policy."

Royalty Nearly Mobbed.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—King George and Queen Mary, who attended a command performance at a London music hall last night, had a narrow escape from being mobbed by suffragettes. The women, who had gathered in considerable numbers, made a lively dash for the royal carriage on its arrival at the theatre, shouting "Women are being tortured in prison."

They had almost reached the carriage when the police closed around, and, with defiant shouts of "Votes for women," were hurled back. The suffragettes were treated roughly by the crowd, but managed to escape arrest.

YOUNG GIRL'S DISAPPEARANCE

Syracuse Police Looking for Peterboro Girl

Special to Review.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Oct. 13.—Police Chief Cadin, of Syracuse has received a pathetic communication from Mrs. H. A. Jobe, of 599 Park street, Peterborough, Ont., requesting him and Syracuse police authorities to use their utmost efforts to locate her daughter, Hazel Jobe, aged 16, who has mysteriously disappeared from her home in Syracuse and who is believed to have been enticed away by white slavers.

Shipwrecked Men Picked Up.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Oct. 13.—Lost on the Pacific for two days without provisions, two Los Angeles men were picked up by the cruiser Buffalo early in the morning in the sailboat June Bug, twenty-five miles south of the Coronado Islands.

They gave their names as S. D. Pond and M. C. Lellan. They were turned over to the pilot's launch at the entrance to the harbor.

According to their accounts, they sailed from San Pedro for San Diego and lost their way. They were out longer than they had expected to be, and their meagre supply of provisions failed them.

London Globe Changes Hands.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The Globe, which claims to be London's oldest evening newspaper, has again changed hands. It has been acquired by a syndicate formed by E. D. Blumenfeldt, formerly of New York, later London correspondent of The New York Herald, and now managing editor of The London Daily Express.

The Globe is to be run in connection with The Daily Express. Like The Daily Express, it is ultra-Conservative and Imperialistic.

It was purchased five years ago by Hilderbrand Harmsworth for $430,000.

DEPUTY MINISTER OF INDIAN AFFAIRS RESIGNS

Frank Pedley is Succeeded by Duncan Campbell Scott

OTTAWA, Oct. 13.—It is officially announced that Frank Pedley, deputy superintendent-general of Indian Affairs since 1902, has resigned, and that Duncan Campbell Scott has been appointed to succeed him. The salary connected with the position is 5,000 a year.

Investigations have been under way for some time into the administration of Indian lands, and the reports made to the present Minister of the Interior, who is superintendent of Indian affairs, would indicate that officials in the service were interested in a syndicate which purchased certain Indian reserves which they had in charge.

Mr. Pedley has been deputy head of the Indian Department for many years and was subjected to severe criticism five years by George H. Bradbury, M.P. for Selkirk, and other Conservative member in connection with the surrender by the Indians of their title to the St. Peter's Reserve, near Winnipeg.

Hon. Dr. Roche, Minister of the Interior, declined last evening to comment on the rumor that Mr. Pedley's resignation had any connection with the interior report recently filed with the Interior Department by Special Commissioner T. R. Ferguson.

Mr. Ferguson was appointed some time ago by the Dominion Government to inquire into the administration of the public domain for many years back.

The transaction occurred some twelve years ago before Mr. Pedley was connected with the Indian Lands Department and when Mr. J. A. Smart was deputy minister of the interior. It is charged that the lands were sold to a syndicate which shortly after sold them at a profit of $80,000. There is no charge of dishonesty against any one, but it is believed that by greater vigilance a better price might have been obtained.

Duncan Campbell Scott, a son of Rev. William Scott, was born on August 2, 1862. He was educated in a Canadian common school and Stanstead College. In 1879 he entered the Canadian civil service and in 1893 he was appointed chief accountant in the development of Indian affairs, which position he held until the present time. Mr. Scott is a well-known Canadian poet, who has been for many years in the Indian Department, and his promotion is well deserved.

Mr. Scott's father by the way was in his time one of the most prominent Methodist ministers in Canada.

Restriction Shuts Out Two-Thirds of Charges, Says Edwards.

KINGSTON, Oct. 13.—As a result of the decision of the Government to restrict the prison reform inquiry to five years back, Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P. for Frontenac, says that this will prevent the hearing of two-thirds of the charges he has preferred against Deputy Warden O'Leary and Dr. Daniel Phalen. Dr. Edwards scored the Government severely for making the restriction, and states that the investigation held seventeen years ago under the old Government went into records of the officials twenty years back. Dr. Edwards avers that when the commission resumes its session to-morrow he will have something to say.

Dr. Edwards has made formal charges against H. H. Wilson, hospital overseer at the penitentiary, charging him with gross and wilful neglect of duty. Still another official is charged, but the name has not been given.

Evidence to be given by W. S. Hughes, inspector of prisons, will have to do with how his chief keeper at the prison for ten years. J. L. Whiting, K.C., Kingston, has been retained as counsel for Deputy Warden O'Leary and Dr. Phalen.

STEAMER MISSING

It is Believed That Boat and All Aboard Are Lost

Canadian Press Despatch.

EDMONTON, Oct. 13.—The Hudson's Bay steamer Primrose, with sixteen souls aboard, has not been heard of since September 17th, and it is believed she has foundered with all on board.

The tug ran on Lake Athabasca between Fort Chippiwayan and Fond Du Lac and also on Slave River.

She left Fond Du Lac with two scows loaded with supplies, Sept. 17, and the round trip usually occupies four days or a week at the most.

EDMONTON, (later)—Information brought down from the north this morning by Mr. Craig to Hudson Bay officials, is to the effect that the company's tug reported lost with sixteen lives, is drawn up on the beach at Fort McMurray for the winter. The report of the disaster was aroused, from the tug being delayed on her last trip by a broken propeller.

MISS SACKVILLE WEST IS MARRIED.

MR AND MRS HAROLD NICOLSON

The Honorable Victoria Sackville-West, the only child of Lord and Lady Sackville, was married in the beautiful fifteenth century chapel at Knole Park, near Seven Oaks, England, to Mr. Harold Nicolson, third son of Sir Arthur Nicolson, Permanent Under Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. The Bishop of Rochester officiated.

The engagement of the Honorable Victoria Sackville-West was announced by her in the midst of the litigation for the money left by Sir John M. Scott. It was reported at the time that a wedding was contingent on the success of Lady Sackville's legal efforts to sustain Sir John's will.

PERJURY IS USED.

KIEV, Oct. 13.—The first sensation in the trial of Mendel Beiliss, charged with the murder of the boy Ushinsky, occurred toward the end of the sitting Saturday night, when a woman witness directly charged the notorious Vera Tchaberik with trying to induce a boy witness to perjure himself and give false testimony against Beiliss.

The witness swore that on the first day of the trial, while in the witness-room, she heard Vera Tchaberik instructing the boy to say that when Eugene Tchaberik and Ushinsky were at play in a brick field Beiliss chased them, seized Ushinsky and dragged him away.

The boy refused to give such testimony, saying that he would testify to the contrary, and would tell the court what Vera had said to him. The witness declared that six other witnesses could corroborate her statement.

Several policemen testified to the finding of the body of the murdered boy in the cave, but showed lack of memory when pressed for details, or asked to reconcile their evidence with their statements made at the preliminary examination.

One of the policemen, Lesleinsko by name, was unable to identify a piece of cloth eighteen inches by six pierced in places as though by a sharp instrument, as having been cut from the murdered boy's clothing.

A newspaper writer, Ordinsky gave an account of a meeting in a restaurant between several newspaper men, a former detective named Vigrayoff and Vera Tchaberik, the alleged leader of a band of thieves who were reported in some quarters to have murdered Ushinsky for the purpose of causing a "pogrom" in Kiev. He heard Vera state that Ushinsky had been killed by relatives. "No one present," he said, "endeavored to persuade Vera to assume the guilt."

John Coughlin Charged With Stabbing at Kingston.

KINGSTON, Oct. 13.—John Merriott is in the General Hospital in a critical condition, the result of being stabbed, and his brother-in-law, John Coughlin, is locked up in the police station charged with doing the stabbing.

Merriott received several knife wounds. One cut in his back required seven stitches, and three stitches were necessary to close another wound on the forehead. A piece of the end of his nose was cut off by the knife.

The affair, it is alleged, was the climax to a family feud, which has been going on for some little time. Friday night, John Coughlin was at the police station and swore out a warrant for the arrest of his brother, Thomas Coughlin, charging him with assault and battery. Thomas was gathered in by the police on Saturday afternoon, and at ten o'clock that night the police were called to take in charge John Coughlin on the stabbing charge.

CREW WERE COWARDLY

Captain Had to Drive Them Back With Bevolver

LONDON, Oct. 13.—That the sailors of the Volturno behaved badly in the face of danger is revealed by the story of Walter Trintepohl, a German third class passenger who swam to the Carmania. He says:

"The captain behaved splendidly so did the officers, who were British. I am sorry to say the crew, who were Germans and Belgians, behaved very badly. The people rushed about wildly. The crew seemed to think that they ought to have first place, and instead of quieting them they made the panic worse. The first officer took charge of the first boat, but, although he wanted the women and children saved first, a majority of those in the boats were members of the crew. They lowered a boat and just as it reached the water it was smashed against the ship's side. The boat broke in two and all were drowned. Meanwhile others of the crew were attempting to launch a second boat. I cannot say who was in charge, but I know that after the chief steward had thrown some provisions into the boat he jumped in himself. There were more men than women and children in this boat. There was a big sea running. The boat was broken against the ship's side and all were drowned. These two boats were amidships. Three other boats, which were aft, were put out. The fourth officer was in one of them, but I cannot say which. All was confusion. The ropes broke and the occupants were thrown in the water and drowned or killed.

"When the captain saw what had happened he cut the tackle of the other boats so that they could not be launched. The firemen rushed up from below and refused to go back. The captain got out a revolver and drove them belong, but not long after, as the fire was spreading, they had to give up working the engines. As soon as the Carmania came in sight the captain made all the women and children go to one side and the men to the other side. He was compelled to leave the bridge and go aft because it was too hot."

Boy Falls From Loft.

TORONTO, Oct. 13.—While playing in a hay loft in a barn near his home at 160 Sackville street on Saturday afternoon, little Jimmie Lynch, aged 9, fell through a trap door to the floor below and sustained a fractured skull.

The little chap, together with several playmates, had been playing in the barn all day on account of the rain, and had several times climbed up into the hay loft.

The last time, however, he ventured too close to one of the hay chutes, lost his balance and fell. His life is despaired of.

THRILLING STORY OF RESCUE OF PASSENGERS ON ILL-FATED VESSEL

Over Five Hundred People Were Saved—List of Dead Numbers 136—Volturno Made Notable Rescue Four Years Ago.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Not since the Titanic sank has Europe been so thrilled as by a wireless message Saturday telling of the burning of the steamship Volturno in mid-Atlantic, with a loss, so far as is at present known, of 136 lives, and the rescued of 5[illegible]. The survivors are now aboard a fleet of steamers summoned by the Volturno's call for help, some of which are bound eastward and others westward.

The Volturno sailed from Rotterdam on Oct. 2 for Halifax and New York. According to the official statement, she carried 22 first-cabin passengers, 538 steerage and a crew numbering 96.

The rescue ships reached the scene of the disaster in plenty of time to save all, but for hours stood by the blazing vessel, impotent because of the storm, to reach the agonized men, women and children crowding the after part of the ship, and within a stone's throw.

All night long Thursday the lifeboats made a desperate effort to get alongside the Volturno but the waves beat them back again and again, and not until the storm abated, at daylight Friday, did the rescuers succeed in removing the survivors from the doomed ship. Even now only the fringe of one of the most thrilling tales of the sea is available. Exactly how the rescue was effected is not known. The Volturno was well equipped with boats, sufficient, the agents say, for a thousand people, but the boisterous sea or lack of boat drill, or panic among the passengers, prevented the successful employment of them.

The rescue ships were able to lower lifeboats, but apparently most of the boats launched from the Volturno were smashed or upset and the occupants drowned. Two of the boats, crowded with passengers, are reported to have got away from the ship, but a search for them has proved fruitless, and they have practically been given up as lost.

The steamer Carmania, bound from New York to Liverpool, was 78 miles away when the call for help sounded. Captain Barr, ordering full steam, in spite of the gale, drove through the seas at twenty knots an hour, and was first of the fleet to reach the burning vessel. She was followed by the Minneapolis, Rappahannock, Czar, Narragansett, Devonian, Kroonland, Grosser Kurfurst, and Seydlitz, at various hours throughout the day. But, try as they might, the rescuing vessels could get neither line nor lifeboat to the Volturna, the forward part of which was almost hidden by a dense cloud of smoke when the Carmania arrived.

The burning steamer lay in the trough of the sea, pounding helplessly, with her propellers fouled by the boat's tackle. The terrified passengers were huddled together as far as it was possible to get from the flames, while throughout the day the officers and crew fought desperately with whatever appliances were at hand to hold the fire in check.

But night came on, and the seas abated only slightly. The circle of steamers kept their searchlights playing and waited patiently within the danger zone for the first moment when they might again launch the lifeboats.

The hopelessness of the situation was manifested at nine o'clock in the evening, when a great explosion tore away part of the upper works, and flames burst from the engine room. It then became a matter of how long the Volturno would stay above the water.

Meanwhile several of the terrified passengers, wrapped in life buoys, dropped over into the sea. One of them was taken aboard the Carmania. It may be that others found a haven with other vessels of the fleet, but some undoubtedly were swept away.

When day broke the Volturno was still afloat. The gale had moderated and the seas had calmed down. From almost every one of the encircling steamers lifeboats were sent out, and into these the women and children were lowered first. Several trips were necessary before the survivors were removed to a place of safety.

It is pointed out as a remarkable coincidence that the Volturno about four years ago made a notable rescue in a great storm in mid-Atlantic of the crew of a French vessel, Captain Harrison, who then commanded the Volturno, was decorated by the French Government for his daring act.

No Canadians On Board.

NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—Indications are that there were no native-born Canadians or Americans on the steamship Volturno. A nearly complete passenger list received here from Rotterdam showed practically all on board were immigrants, Russians, Dalmatians, Poles and a few Germans, mostly bound for Canada.

HUERTA LETS THEM OUT

Arrest of Deputies Has Raised New Crisis

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13—State department advices from Mexico City late yesterday announced that the 110 members of the Mexican Chamber of Deputies who were thrown into prison Saturday night by order of President Huerta, were released yesterday.

Huerta's arrest of 110 delegates of the Mexican Congress, followed by the prorogation of both Houses of that body, has put administration officials here in a state of anxiety. No one attempts to disguise the view that the developments of the last 48 hours in Mexico City has precipitated what probably is the most serious situation since Huerta took office.

It was pointed out that conditions were similar to those immediately preceding the abdication of Porfirio Diaz.

With most of the troops in the north fighting the rebels Mexico City is left with a comparatively small garrison.

The situation is regarded here as warranting the United States in maintaining a considerable naval force at Vera Cruz and Tampico.

Huerta's action in suspending the sessions of Congress is regarded merely as preliminary to a declaration of martial law which will make almost unlimited his power over the capital and enable him to secure a strong and capable Parliamentary party to support Gamboa. Huerta's candidate for the Presidency at the elections on Oct. 26.

Mexico Is Anxious.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 13.—Provisional President Huerta's coup Friday night whereby he rid himself in a spectacular manner of the legislative bodies of the Government and constituted himself dictator of the Mexican Republic has left the city in a state of tense expectancy.

Workman Falls Seventy Feet.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Oct. 13.—William Roberts, a bricklayer, fell 70 feet from the roof of the Electrical Development Co.'s power house here Saturday afternoon. When workmen picked him up it was thought he had been killed, but after being unconscious for an hour it was found that he had sustained only a severe shaking up. A ligament in his left foot had been sprained and he was taken to the General Hospital.

YOUNG GIRL LURED AWAY

White Slaver Goes to Prison for Eighteen Months

CORNWALL, Oct. 13. — John White, a resident of Solvay, was sentenced to one and a half year's imprisonment in the Auburn, N.Y., penitentiary on a charge of white slavery, preferred against him by Mrs. Kate Martin of Milleroche, Ont., in the U. S. Court at Syracuse, N.Y. U. S. Immigration Inspector G. W. Wood of Cornwall, was in Syracuse in connection with the case.

Mrs. Martin's daughter, Pearl, aged 14 years, was induced to leave home during the first week in September by a Mrs. Auterne of Massena, N.Y., who is a sister of White's. The girl was promised fine clothes and a good situation if she would go to the States. Mrs. Martin had been searching for her daughter ever since, and only located her a few days ago. Mrs. Anterne became frightened of the part she took and helped the mother find the girl.

White eluded the officers for some time, but was arrested by Deputy Marshal Smith in Syracuse, and his sentence followed.

Charged With Drowning Man.

WIARTON, Ont., Oct. 13.—Emerson Darragh, Owen Sound, is under arrest here, charged with having thrown Charles Jones overboard from a launch in Colpoy's Bay, Monday evening. Jones was drowned and his body has not been recovered.

The information was laid by Thos. Finning, who was also in the launch. The charge will be heard here Monday, before Police Magistrate D. B. Miller.

MUCH INTEREST IN THE VOTE

For the first time since Confederation, Chateauguay on Saturday chose a Conservative member as a representative in the Federal Government. The outcome of the voting was eagerly awaited in this city, and when inquiries made at The Review were answered first by the announcement that Mr. Morris was leading, and later that the Conservative candidate had defeated Hon. Sydney Fisher, by a substantial majority, there were many hurrahs. Interest was not confined to the city, as there were a number of long distance telephone calls.

THE VICTORY OF CHATEAUGUAY

Chateauguay has done the wise thing. The result of this bye-election is a reply to Sir Wilfrid from his own people. There need now be no longer any doubt that if the Government went to the country for a confirmation of its policy, it would return to office with an increased majority, and still further shame would be heaped upon the head of the Senate for its ruthless and partisan rejection of the Government's loyal offer to the British navy.

TESTIMONY OF VALUE

Take it big and large the world in general is degenerating into a habit of kicking—that is fault finding. Nothing, it seems, is done as it should be done. Hence recrimination and objection, often senseless and unwarranted.

Amidst the general gloom and kicks of large velocity and amazing frequency comes a ray of sunshine in the declaration of Rev. Mr. Cragg, of Mark Street Church, who says he secured in and among the attendants of that church the best pastor's wife of the district. It will be observed that the testimony is unsolicited, hence of highest value. The added value is the thought that where Rev. Mr. Cragg garnered there may be garnishing for others, not necessarily for pastors, but for the professions and employments at large.

Still, the remark may be interpolated, is Rev. Mr. Cragg a thoroughly competent and capable judge. It may be asked, has he had experience with previous wives, and hence in a position to judge by contrast. Assuredly he is not. And Rev. Mr. Cragg is not as yet mature, and will improve with age. His views on good wives may change in the lapse of years and we will be glad to have his revised and revived impressions say, about the year 1938. By that time married life will have presented to his consideration many, if not all, varied aspects.

No doubt he is right as to the excellencies of the young ladies of George street Church, and he has done no less than justice in calling attention to such. He has done a thing that no George street church man would do unless he were guaranteed at least ten minutes' start.

WHEN IS AN EMIGRANT—?

"When is an emigrant not an emigrant?

Answer— "When he is an immigrant."

A reader goes one better in the following communication just received

Sir— Seriously, I should be much obliged if you would answer the following question:

"When does an emigrant cease to be an immigrant?

Yours, etc.,

"A TRAVELLER."

If our inquisitor is himself an immigrant, he may be still suffering from home-sickness, and the feeling of exile and has not yet settled down to Canadian life. If so we can understand his question and offer him our sincere sympathy, and recommend him to cheer up.

As for his question we would suggest that in his own personal case the answer is:

"An emigrant ceases to be an immigrant when he ceases to be 'A Traveller.'"

FIRE AND STORM

That the world is advancing in many directions, that men are cleverer, and are developing resources which were only guessed at less than a century ago, is beyond doubt. Nature herself is becoming more and more under the sway of man. But with all these advantages the modern world has taken upon itself grave responsibilities.

The terrible holocaust on the seas which, combined with the fury of the elements, rendered the most up-to-date apparatus useless on Thursday last, is an instance of the enormous power which man has to contend with.

It would seem that wireless telegraphy only served the purpose of bringing a host of spectators to watch with horror what a few years ago would possibly have been an unrecorded tragedy of the sea.

Fire, as we know too well on land, is an all-devouring fiend if it is not checked at once, and when its rage is fanned by the elements, the bravest men must fly from its fury. To flee from fire on land is a simple matter, but for five hundred souls to find themselves circumscribed by the bulwarks of the largest vessel, and with even the life-boats rendered useless for escape owing to the tumult of the waves, this is a predicament which might virtually be described as "between the devil and the deep sea."

If there is one thing that this latest horror of the sea makes plain, it is the helplessness of the best equipped ships in rough weather when anything goes wrong. But the chief lesson is not one of mechanics at all.

EDITORIAL NOTES

ties are encouraging the school children to keep in touch with their fellow-scholars in Canada by means of systematic letter writing. If the Yorkshire authorities succeed in this with the young ones they deserve great praise, for there is nothing that binds parted friends together like a systematic correspondence. When these youngsters have learned the art of faithful correspondence, perhaps they will teach their elders, for most of us are miserable failures in keeping in touch with distant friends.

The Rt. Hon. Herbert Samuel, the British Postmaster-General, introduced, some time ago, a bill facilitating the circulation of Dominion newspapers in the United Kingdom, and this has now come into operation. Any publication published within the empire will now have the benefit of the half-penny inland rate, provided such publication is registered with the British post office as a newspaper.

The London Financial News says that one of the most interesting features of President Wilson's work is that it gives Canada for nothing all that Mr. Taft promised in return for considerable sacrifices under Reciprocity. It goes on to say: "Those sturdy Canadians were amply justified who argued in 1911 that it was superfluous to make far-reaching concessions which might have an incalculable effect upon those precious ties that bind the Dominion and the Motherland.

EXCERPTS

The Claw of the Devil.

In the middle ages people recognized witches and possessed persons by seeking on their bodies for what was called the claw of the devil. It was a more or less extensive part of the skin in which the subject was insensible to any touch or prick. The expert intrusted with this work would close the eyes of the subject and, armed with a sharp needle, prick here and there the different parts of the body. The sufferer was to answer with a cry to each prick, and the claw of the devil on a certain spot was recognized from the fact that he did not cry when this spot was examined.—From "The Major Symptoms of Hysteria," by Pierre Janet.

Finding a Grave With an Egg.

The Miautsze, a little known tribe in Asia, are very superstitious about death and will not bury a man until they have first tested the ground with an egg. This operation is very curious. While the body is being prepared for burial a number of Miautsze, including the male relatives of the deceased, go out to the appointed spot bearing a large basket of eggs. Stooping down, one of the natives lets an egg drop softly on the ground. If it breaks it is considered an ill omen, and another spot is selected. In this way the party often wander for hours, breaking eggs over the ground until they finally strike a place where the shell does not crack.

If shoe polish has become dry from standing too long, moisten it with a little turpentine.

NEW HYMN BY PETERBORO POET

Sung at Harvest Festival at George Street Methodist Church

The Review has the unique opportunity of publishing a new hymn which has not only the simplicity and the singing quality necessary for congregational purposes, but combines with these depths of thought and feeling. A combination which comes only from inspiration. Many great poets have tried to write acceptable hymns and have failed. Another feature which makes this hymn interesting and valuable is that it is a purely Canadian production, and might be truthfully said to be indigenous of the soil.

The Methodist Church is at present in committee on the compilation of a new hymn book. Here is one which they certainly must not omit.

It was sung on Sunday at George Street Methodist church Harvest Festival services.

HARVEST HYMN

Come let us now uniting
Our thankfulness to prove Unto the Lord our Father
Sing a glad song of love—
Lift on the wings of music
Our hearts in rapturous praise
And thank Him for His goodness
In these glad harvest days.

Oh surely we should praise Him
Who His great love have shown
In joyous adoration
Bowing before His throne;
Beseeching still His blessing,
Who from His boundless store
Hath blessed our loved Dominion
From farthest shore to shore.

Each fertile hill and valley
Hath heard the Master's voice
And yielded forth its increase
That we may all rejoice;
The orchard and the vineyard
Have given their fruits again,
And harvest fields far-reaching Poured forth their golden grain.

Then on this day of gladness
Which doth His love proclaim,
Shall we, our vows renewing,
Honor and praise His name
Striving by all His blessings
His gift in us to prove,
Join in a cheerful service
And give Him love for love.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

Rumors are current and appear to be well-founded that the C.P.R. is going to make Woodstock an important divisional point.

The commission of five doctors appointed to examine into the sanity of George Smith, alleged bigamist, in jail at St. Thomas, pronounce him sane.

Five Chatham youths were arrested on a Pere Marquette train Saturday on suspicion of being implicated in the burglary at the Dresden Fair on Friday.

Timothy L. Woodruff, former Lieutenant-Governor of New York State, died last night. He had lain in a critical condition for nearly two weeks after a paralytic stroke.

Word was received last night of the death, at Uxbridge Saturday of Anson Button, in his 93rd year. Mr. Button was one of the best known men in Uxbridge and vicinity.

The fainting of a woman in a crowded synagogue at Chodorow, Galicia, caused a great panic. Hundreds of women, rushed to the doors and sixteen of them were crushed to death.

Three-year-old Elsie Sawdon, 63 Sydenham street, Toronto, is now at the Hospital for Sick Children, as the result of drinking liniment which was composed chiefly of carbolic acid. She will recover.

A party of suffragettes disturbed the service in St. Paul's Cathedral in London yesterday. They persisted in chanting appeals to the Almighty for their "sisters being tortured by forcible feeding in Holloway Jail."

Prince William Friedrich of Wied decided to-day to accept the nomination to the throne of the independent state of Albania, after he had had an interview with King Charles of Roumania, according to a special despatch from Bucharest.

An earth shock, accompanied by distant rumblings, was felt in Messina yesterday. The disturbance lasted about ten seconds. It caused considerable alarm, but no serious damage. The frequency of the shocks keeps the inhabitants in constant anxiety.

Animals of Canada.

Northern Canada is still teeming with animal life. From some notes in the United Empire we learn that the musk ox still lingers among the Arctic fastnesses of the far north. The polar bear and the walrus are still comparatively common on the Alaskan and Arctic shores. Geese, ducks, curlews and a host of birds are yet to be found in the comparative isolation of their hidden sanctuaries. But year by year these nobler forms of animal life are becoming more and more open to the attacks of irresponsible individuals who have no care for the future, and who still less believe that this wealth of animal life is worth preservation.

Wrinkle For Coin Collectors.

Coin collectors can find a new rarity in last year's pennies. Owing to the extraordinary demand for bronze, due largely to the deduction of fourpence from wages under the insurance act, the Mint was obliged to contract for a portion of the issue from a private mint in Birmingham. The Birmingham penny is distinguished by a small "H." in front of the date, and when new is of slightly larger diameter than the Royal Mint coin.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by subletting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

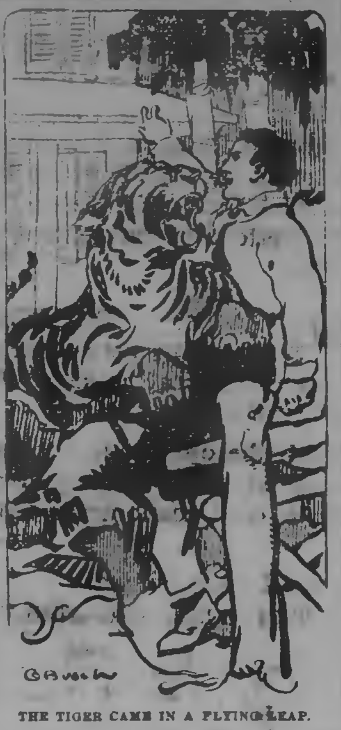
TWO YELLOW EYES

He Faced Them Bravely

By ADELAIDE BURNHAM



THE TIGER CAME IN A FLYING LEAP.

The Hendersons were writing a book on "The Fauna and the Flora of the Himalayas," and they were occupying a whitewashed bungalow on the edge of the jungle five miles beyond Simla. Sylvia Bradley, Mrs. Henderson's sister, was acting as private secretary to that talented lady, while Robert Orthman fulfilled the same duties for John Henderson.

Mrs. Henderson and Sylvia engaged themselves with botanizing expeditions, surrounded by a capable native guard, while the two men carried guns and notebooks into the jungle and met with several thrilling adventures. The book was progressing well in spite of the blistering heat that shortened the working days to minimum hours, when a little party of American friends who were touring India came up from Simla for the night.

"Bobby Orthman with you?" asked Mr. Delafield, as he strolled around the compound with his host after dinner. "Like him?"

"First rate," cried Henderson.

"They say he's something of a mollycoddle in spite of his six feet two bulk. Wouldn't stand for hazing at college and they say has a deadly fear of wild animals," said Delafield.

Henderson started ever so slightly.

"Doesn't look like deadly fear when he enters the jungle with me every day," retorted Henderson obstinately.

"Humph! Not much danger around here. The jungle has been pretty thoroughly beaten, they tell me, and, besides, your native fellows can take care of you."

"Shall we join the ladies?" asked Henderson abruptly, and so the conversation ended. But after the guests had departed the seeds of distrust sown by Delafield sprouted in Henderson's mind, and one evening Henderson confided the story to his wife and sister-in-law, hoping they would rout his suspicions with their warm defense of Bobby Orthman.

But Mrs. Delafield had been gossiping, too, and Maud Henderson and her sister, who were hero worshipers, had somehow changed their opinion of Bobby Orthman overnight. It wasn't a fair or loyal thing to do, but because they liked him so well, Sylvia especially, they were vexed at this flaw in their idol of young manhood.

They expressed themselves vigorously to this effect, and the idol of young manhood happened to be taking a siesta in his own room off the east veranda and heard every word of the conversation before he realized that he had been eavesdropping.

Then he jumped up, had a bath and got into clean linen clothes, and, leaving the compound by the west gate, he went up to Juppor hill to have it out with himself.

He sat down on the scattered rocks and stared at the sunset—an amber sea of clouds beyond the jagged peaks.

Bobby Orthman was proud, and his soul writhed when he remembered Sylvia's light laugh of disdain as they discussed him. His hands clinched until the bronzed knuckles showed white and his strong teeth bit hard into his lower lip.

Sylvia, whom he loved—he was only waiting a favorable opportunity to tell her—Sylvia thought him a coward! If she only knew!

At the compound gate he found his own servant, Mitti Tanduri, conversing excitedly with the other servants.

"What is the trouble, Mitti?" he asked.

"Ah, sahib, a tiger has appeared in the village beyond. Last night it carried away the wife of my Cousin Joona."

Bobby leaned, white and shaking, against the gate. He could have killed himself for this weakness. When he sat down at table his air was constrained, and after Henderson had heard the story of the tiger from Mitti's eager lips he understood what ailed his secretary.

"How dreadful!" shuddered Sylvia, with blanched lips. "I hope it won't come any nearer us. Can't you go out and shoot it, Jack?"

"I'll try," said Henderson grimly. "Anjar better strengthen the stockade tomorrow and see that the gates are locked after sundown. I suppose this is an end to your rambles for the present, Maud."

"It is!" returned Mrs. Henderson decidedly. "We can work on the book. There's enough to do at home until you exterminate that beast."

"And you, Jack—you will continue to go to the jungle every day?" asked Sylvia.

"Of course. How about you, Orthman?"

"Certainly," said Bobby gravely, but he knew that his face was like death and that his hands shook.

Sylvia thought him a coward, and he was too proud to explain to her that his childhood had been spent in India and that when but a tiny lad he had been carried away from his nurse by a tiger. Only his father's bravery had saved his life, but his arms and breast still bore the scars of savage teeth.

After dinner he sat alone on the veranda, for the others were gathered around the lamp in the living room reading papers from home.

There was a soft murmur of voices from the servants' quarters, and then silence broke now and then by the bark of a dog or the cry of some sleepy bird.

Bobby thought he was alone out there, but he had a companion near by. A queer thrill down his spine followed a movement in the shade of a deodar tree near the closed gate. Bobby was conscious of being watched. He glanced around at the wire screened window; neither Sylvia nor her brother-in-law had looked his way. He was alone on the veranda, but not alone in the compound.

Straight ahead, under the deep black shadow of the deodar tree, there shone two round yellow lights. They were, perhaps, fourteen inches apart and they moved slowly toward him in dreadful unison.

He struck a match sharply, and the eyes receded before the sudden flare of light. While he held the match to his empty pipe, he spoke hoarsely to the man within the room:

Thus calmly, Bobby Orthman, the coward, proceeded to throw himself in the way of a man eating tiger in order to save the girl he loved and the ones that she loved.

He went quietly down the steps, scratching matches as he did so; the eyes remained stationary under the deodar. Unless Henderson got his shutters closed in time and brought the gun the beast would soon lose his curiosity about the flaring matches and bring his prey to the ground. If Bobby Orthman dodged into the bungalow the tiger would rush the nearest open window or ravage the fragile quarters of the servants in the rear.

Henderson was slamming shutters.

The tiger uttered an earth shaking growl and leaped forward. Bobby Orthman dodged aside, but he heard the heavy thud as the beast's padded paws struck the ground beside him.

Bobby darted toward the deodar tree, knowing that the tiger must follow him across the streak of light from the hall window. If Henderson could get in his shot while the tiger crossed the lighted streak Bobby might escape.

In two bounds the tiger had regained the tree and Bobby was fleeing across the streak of light.

Suddenly he turned and waited. Henderson was too late. He might as well have it over with now. There would be no one to care and his honor would be vindicated. They could never call him a coward again. He smiled at the yellow lights creeping stealthily toward him. No one would ever know how he had accepted Henderson's offer to go into the jungle in order to face the jungle beasts and try to subdue that fear in his heart. Well, God knew, and he knew himself.

The tiger came in a flying leap that showed his huge body against the star spangled sky.

As he crossed the streak of light there came two shots in quick succession, and then there remained in the shadow a writhing mass that presently resolved into two quiet forms.

After that pandemonium reigned in the compound. Henderson and a white lipped Sylvia, with other assistance, found Bobby's unconscious form beneath the dead bulk of the tiger.

"Did you notice? His arms were folded!" sobbed Sylvia in Henderson's ear.

He nodded. "His face was toward the enemy, too," he said remorsefully. "He had the stuff in him, Sylvia, only we didn't understand him. God knows I am sorry."

Sylvia was caressing Bobby's blood stained face, and she was surprised when he opened his eyes and smiled at her with wonderful sweetness.

"Don't be too kind to me, Sylvia, if you don't mean it," he whispered. "I'm not going to die yet. I'm only scratched and bruised a little where the beast fell on me. Don't be kind unless you love me."

"I must be kind, Bobby, dear," whispered Sylvia, making amends for her doubt of him; "I must be kind to you because I love you so!"

"If you love me," grinned Bobby, "you may kiss a coward."

Not Very Impulsive.

Maud—So he's been calling on you regularly for ten years! Why do you suppose he hasn't proposed? Beatrix—Oh, you see, he's the sort of man who always does things on the spur of the moment!

Way of the Law.

Prisoner—It's hard to charge me with forgery. I can't even sign my own name. Magistrate—That point is immaterial. It's another man's name you're accused of signing.

No Proofs Needed.

Penley—I've written a new novel. Come up to my apartment and I'll show you the proofs.

Friend—Proofs! Why, old chap, I don't doubt your word in the least.

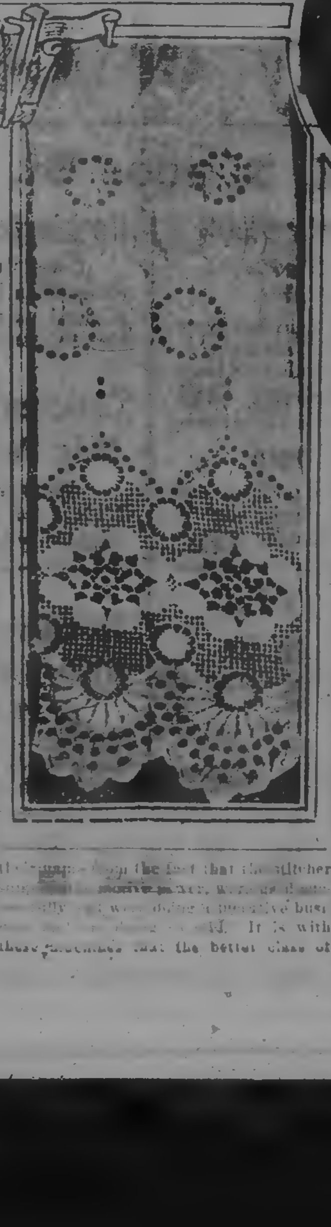
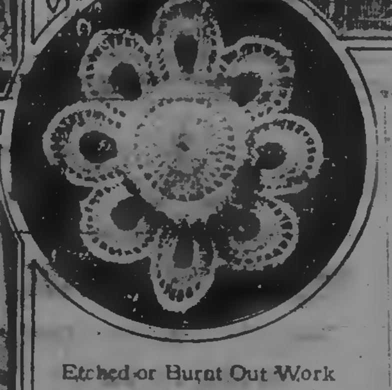
The Swiss Lace Makers of New Jersey

One of the Lace Factories

Collars Made on Hand Machines





Etched or Burnt Out Work

Is the commercial history of the United States to repeat itself in the case of its embroidery trade with Switzerland? Is the colony of Swiss gathered in New Jersey to be the cause of their mother country losing the greater part of an industry which seemed to it a birthright as it did the supremacy in watch making? Ten years ago Switzerland derided the thought, to-day the New Jersey colony is smiling and saying, "Give us more protection." In this case it is a country having its own people as competitors, while in the case of the watch making it was ordinary competition.

On the heights west of Hoboken, N. J., scattered throughout a number of small municipalities, a group of men, mostly Swiss, have been spreading the doctrine of embroidery, telling of its beauties and charms. It is curious that the growth of the industry here is reproducing in many ways the conditions as they are in Switzerland. As the trade there was first an industry of the home and of the small factory attached to the home, before the establishment of the large plants, so here it is first the home factory which predominates. Small factories are springing up seemingly over night, and, at the present time a building intended for this work can always be seen under construction—a large room holding the machines, with skylights at the rear, covering the lower part of the house and the living rooms of the owner above.

It is in New York city that factory conditions have been fostered. A walk through West Hoboken, Union Hill, West New York and North Bergen will be a great surprise to the uninitiated, for the little factories, some holding only one machine, will be met on almost every street, in some cases three are grouped in one block.

A part of the community but keeping aloof and mingling mostly with folk from home, those who are Swiss by birth keep up all the traditions of home, passing the secrets of the trade to the young generation. All the customs of home life, which consider first of all the practical side, are kept intact for many years after their arrival in this country, many of the manners of home adornment are continued in use, the cooking is Swiss and among the elder folk one can readily see that the cut of clothing is not American, although one can see a few hobble skirts among the young set.

Embroidery is a never failing topic of conversation; shop talk is always to be heard, due to the large percentage of girls and men who are connected directly or indirectly with the industry. The almost continual presence before the eye of the small workshops and other bits of Swiss local color tends to lend an air of embroidery to the neighborhood, similar in many ways to that in St. Gall, Switzerland, the embroidery centre of the world.

The first attempt to establish the present popular power embroidery making machines in New Jersey was in 1896 and in New York city a short time before, but the industry grew slowly. Many years before the introduction of the power machines, the hand machines, which [illegible] stitcher [illegible] the better class of work is done. At first, and in most cases with the hand machines, the pioneers in the industry in New Jersey were established in an ordinary dwelling house converted to suit their needs.

The presence of the embroidery frame throughout the eastern part of Switzerland is so insistent as to be almost part of the landscape. The picture of the fields, white with the webs spread out to bleach, is not more common nor more surprising to the stranger than that of the Appenzellerin seated before her embroidery frame in the shade and amid the flowers of her garden.

It can truly be said that many a woman of the Swiss Overland works her very life into the product of her deft fingers, for girlhood, middle age and old age are spent over the embroidery frame. It was in the district about St. Gall that the embroidery trade grew and prospered, and since the introduction of the hand and power machine its influence has been felt directly or indirectly throughout a large district. The popularity of the machines in no way prevents the production of the beautiful work made by hand, much of it being made during the months when the snow flies and it is uncomfortable to travel far from home. The growth of the industry can be seen in the number of machines. The power machine was introduced during the early '80's, and in 1906 the machines in operation numbered 4,051, while in 1911 the number was 7,169. The number of hand machines is almost double this number.

The embroidery may be roughly put into two classes or four varieties, each class having two varieties. In the first class would come the hand and hand machine embroidery, for their stitches are structurally the same; in the second class would come the ordinary sewing machine and power machine embroidery, for the same reason. It is the last variety that is making possible the general use of this decoration.

Hand embroidery is too well known to need a detailed description of its qualities and the methods of making it. The hand machine variety is structurally almost an exact duplicate of the former, for the stitches are similar in every way, the needle as in hand embroidery being passed by the machine entirely through the cloth for each stitch, the stitcher furnishing the entire motive power for the machine. It is with this machine that the better class of machine work is made, doing the most intricate designs with ease, and up to a few years ago designs requiring more than one color could be made only on this machine.

The essential difference between the hand machine and the power machine is the structure of the stitch in that the stitch of the latter is similar to that of the sewing machine. The stitch of the ordinary household sewing machine and its method of embroidery is well known. The power machine is simply a sewing machine with many needles, each needle duplicating the pattern which is placed on the end of the machine, the material to be decorated being passed about the point of contact of the many needles, this movement being governed by the stitcher at the end of the machine, he moving the end of a pantograph over a pattern which is six times the size of the completed work, each move of the end of the pantograph being reproduced by every needle in the machine.

As he moves over the pattern with the end of the pantograph, which is connected directly to a perfectly balanced frame holding the cloth, this cloth moves about the point pierced by the needle, receiving the decorating stitches. The delicacy of this machine is marvellous, an experienced operator being capable of governing the placing of the stitch to a small fraction of an inch, the completed work being so close an imitation of hand embroidery as to deceive most people until a close inspection is made. Most of the machines are set directly on mother earth, upon a firm foundation to prevent vibration, which would throw the stitch out of place. The mechanism of the machine is so simple as to astound the beholder at first, but when he is told the number in stitches capable in one day he is abashed. It is the duplication of needles which makes this possible, although the machine itself works at a low rate of speed. While the machine is capable of making 125 operations in one minute it seldom does so, and when it is considered that 680 needles are sometimes at work on the standard size machine it will be seen that 85,000 single stitches are made in one minute, or about 5,100,000 in one hour, the operator timing each move of the pantograph, which represents one stitch, to the moment when the needle is not piercing the cloth, as it is impossible to move it while the needle is doing so. Threads break while the machine is in full swing, but this is no deterrent to the girl watcher performing her regular duty of threading up the needle while it is moving full speed. Think of a woman threading up her sewing machine while it is moving!

Intricate designs and work upon filmy foundations are as easily made as a simple design on heavy cotton goods; work on spidery netting seems play. Silks, woollens, flannels, linens and cottons of various weaves are some of the materials used as foundation; silk, cotton and linen are used in working out the design. The variety of designs is almost innumerable, an expert estimating them at several millions, saying that the variations are endless and governed by the fashions of the day.

A variety of goods for which there is much demand and for which the demand is growing is the Swiss lace, which is also known as "burnt-out work" and as "etched work," getting the last two names from an operation used in its production. It is embroidery without the supporting foundation or supporting backs. The design is stitched in the usual way, generally upon a ground of very light weight material, after which this ground is destroyed by acid or heat, governed by the material used.

BILLINGTON GIRL WILL BE UNDER CARE OF THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY

Doctor Said Condition of Skin Indicated Very Sevre Strokes—Marks Were Numerous—Suspended Sentence for Mrs. Billington

Magistrate Dumble reserved judgment indefinitely in the cause of Mrs Alice Billington, charged at police court this morning with ill-treating her eight-year-old niece.

The girl will be handed over to the Children's Aid Society.

Mrs. Billington elected to be tried summarily through her counsel, E.V. McElderry. E.L. Goodwill acted for the Children's Aid Society, and R. E. Wood conducted the prosecution.

AGENT'S EVIDENCE

Geo. Cochrane, agent of Children's Aid Society, said he received calls to go to Mrs. Billington's home at 545 Sherbrooke street.

"I went there and found a concert going on in the house, and going into the rear of the house, found the little girl washing dishes.

"Mrs. Billington came out into the room. The little girl is Mrs Billington's niece and is living with her aunt on account of her father's death.

"I asked Edith, the little girl, if she had been hurt, and she said, yes. I asked her who did it and she told me it was her aunt."

"Whom did she mean by her aunt," inquired the Crown Attorney.

Witness- "Mrs. Billington."

"I then told Mrs. Billington that the matter would have to be investigated.

"Mrs Billington then got the girl ready, and I took her to the Shelter and phoned for Dr. Amys to come up and see her."

Crown Attorney—"Did you see any wounds or injuries on her?"

"Yes, there was a bad wound on her breast. Her right arm was bruised from the shoulder to the wrist. The arm looked to be inflamed."

"Anything else?"

"I can't tell where all the wounds were, for the body was badly marked. Her wrists were marked as if they had been tied together with something."

Magistrate Dumble — "Did you form any opinion as to when these had been made?"

"Recently. They had been caused by something about an inch or two wide."

Crown Attorney— "Did you see a wound on her head?"

"I did not notice any."

"Was the little girl crying?" asked Mr. McElderry.

"No."

Edith Billington, the eight year old girl, told how she had been living with her aunt since she was four years old.

Crown Attorney— "You remember how Mr. Cochrane went down to your aunt's place?"

Witness— "Yes."

The little girl then gave evidence to the effect that her aunt punished her for not hurrying home from the store, by using a leather strap about two feet and a half long.

Crown Attorney— "Why didn't you runaway?"

Witness—"I thought I had better stay and take it."

The injuries and bruises were then viewed by the court.

The little girl then explained how her aunt had tied her wrists to the bed on the Wednesday morning she was whipped. She had been tied before to the bed. Asked how her arms were, when she was tied, the witness stretched out her arms and said each hand was tied to the opposite bed-post.

Crown Attorney— "Where did she strike you with the dipper?"

"On the head."

Witness told of another occasion when she had been tied to the bed and whipped, which caused her to be sick for two or three days.

Mr McElderry — "About how many times were you whipped. Would it be more than four or five?"

"Yes."

"I don't think I got whipped unless I need it," continued the witness.

DOCTOR'S EVIDENCE.

Dr. Amys, who examined the little girl at the Shelter, said that the injuries and marks were so numerous that he took a statement of them. The condition of the skin indicated very severe and recent strokes. The chest, back, arms and underneath the right breast, it was cut, and the side of the left chest and left hip, left elbow and forearm were injected. In front of both thighs a one inch mark was very distinct. The wrists were marked as if tied by a cord. An old scar an inch and a half in diameter was found on the breast, that had been previously injured. Witness was of the opinion that the whipping was apparently beyond question according to the marks. The red marks indicated a recent whipping.

"Would several strokes cause those marks?" asked Mr. McElderry.

"You would have to hustle some," was the answer.

Edith Billington was recalled to the stand.

Crown Attorney—"What clothes did you have on when you were whipped?"

Witness—"Nothing at all."

Mr. Cochrane, recalled, described the strap used by defendant as a heavy strap with a keeper on the end. One blow of the strap would cause four marks. The strap was hard and heavy and was three feet long.

Mrs. Donaldson, a neighbor, was called, but knew nothing of the whipping administered to the little girl on Wednesday morning. She had heard her crying from other whippings.

Mrs. Watson, another neighbor, had often seen the marks on the little girl from other whippings.

Mr. McElderry—"Do you know anything about this morning in particular?"

Witness—"No."

Magistrate—"Do you consider the havior of the little girl good?"

Witness—"Yes."

Mrs. Harper, a resident of Sherbrooke street, said that the little girl had come to her home on several occasions and complained of brutal treatment.

THE DEFENDANT.

Mrs. Alice Billington, the defendant, said that the little girl had been with her for the last four years.

"I whipped her on several occasions with tears in my eyes, for I disliked to punish her despite the fact she told lies. If I asked her anything she would not tell me the truth."

"Is she habitually untruthful?" asked His Worship.

Witness—"Yes."

Magistrate—"What caused the marks on her wrist?"

Witness—"I don't know."

Witness then produced a short strap about a foot and a half long, which she claimed she used for punishing the child.

Crown Attorney—"Why did you take the little girl out into the shed when Mr. Cochrane called?"

Witness—"I took her out to have her clean her boots."

"Didn't you tell her not to say anything?"

Witness—"No."

Witness—"I went to get a light."

Crown Attorney—"Why was she washing dishes?"

Witness—"I told her to start then and that I would help her."

The witness denied whipping the child for anything else but lying. She also denied that the neighbors ever saw any bruises. Witness admited being up before for whipping the child. "The court told me to whip her," said the witness.

Mrs. Billington emphatically denied whipping the girl when her clothes were off.

Wm. Weese, a boarder at Mrs. Billington's two years ago said that he never saw the child whipped then. He was at Mrs. Billington's on Wednesday evening and the child seemed to be used well.

"You are not boarding there now?" asked the Magistrate.

Witness—"No."

Mrs. Weese said that she was there on the day the child was supposed to be ill-treated. She did not see anything wrong while she was there.

Witness declared that there was not 150 people in front of the house as represented by the papers. She understood the people, who numbered about 50, were listening to the phonograph.

The Magistrate remarked that the little child was apparently an innocent, well behaved little girl, and that Mrs. Billington is lacking in good judgments of the true intuition of a true mother. No doubt she wanted to cure her of her faults. It was a well known fact in the neighborhood that excessive punishment had been delivered. The child would have to be taken away from her.

SACRED HEART T.A.S. ADDRESS

To Rev. Fr. O'Brien Who is Spirtual Advisor

SERMON BY BISHOP

The Church of the Sacred Heart was yesterday the scene of several very interesting ceremonies ceremonies. In the morning at 10.30 His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., said Pontificial High Mass, assisted by Rev. J.J. O'Brien, pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, as deacon and Rev. J.V. McCauley as subdeacon and Very Rev. Dean McColl as priest of honor. In the evening His Lordship delivered an eloquent sermon on "The reasons for devotion to the Blessed Virgin." Rev. J. J. O'Brien gave benediction of the Blessed Sacrament assisted by Father McCauley and Father Meagher.

At a meeting embracing nearly every member of the Sacred Heart T.A.S. in the afternoon, Mr. N. Bibby, on behalf of the society, read an address of welcome to Rev. J.J. O'Brien, who has been made spiritual adviser of their branch. Father O'Brien made a very fitting reply thanking them for this token of their best wishes, and said it gave him courage and strength with which to begin his new labors. His Lordship also spoke a few words commending them for their good work in the past and urged them to continue this in the future. Bishop O'Brien closed by assuring them that although he had been raised to the Episcopate, he would still be a member of the Sacred Heart, T.A.S.

GILMOUR CHURCH

Local Pastor Preached Morning and Evening

The twenty-third anniversary of the opening of the Gilmour Memorial Church of which Rev. Mr McLaren is pastor, was celebrated on Sunday, when two large congregations assembled to hear Rev. F. A. Conner, of Park street Baptist Church. The services were enjoyed by all.

The anniversary will be continued to-night with an entertainment, at which neighboring pastors will give addresses.

St. George's Choral Society Executive Committee will hold an important meeting to-night at the home of the secretary, Mr. B. Read, Rubidge street, at 9 o'clock.

WOMEN WEAR "GALLUSES"

Braces Like Granddad's to Be Latest Fad.

THE NEW SUSPENDER DRESS.

The last word in women's clothes is "galluses," and these new suspenders look very much like the broad blue variety that granddad used to wear.

A French dressmaker is enthusiastic over women wearing "braces," as she calls them, and insists that they will keep the blouse from coming up out of the waistband, as it sometimes does and if carried out in the color of the skirt they make a charming line.

The illustration shows these "galluses" in a modified form applied to a gown of gray crape. The braces in this case are of black velvet, a combination that is always good with pale gray.

Braces are not the only masculine trend of fashion, however, for after a wave of decided femininity in frocks when puffs and frills and sashes and slashes and hoppings and hobbling have been in style, fashion has dashed to the other extreme, and we now have long waistcoats with cutaway coats large steel trousers buckles at the back of tweed skirts and a ponderous and portly watch chain stretched across the diaphragm.

Table Ferns.

The hardy fern with glossy leaves is a much better plant for the table than the delicate fern like ferns. It becomes a "life struggle" for any variety of fern in the dry and heated atmosphere of a house, and so one should select only the hardiest for table decoration.

It is well to be sure that there are enough holes in the receptacle in which the fern is planted to afford good drainage

Ferns thrive best in a moist atmosphere, and this congenial atmosphere can, with very little trouble, be procured for even the table fern. Have a case made of four pieces of window glass set in a wooden frame, sufficiently large to cover one or more ferns without brushing their sensitive fronds After sprinkling the leaves (do no pour water on the soil in this instance plentifully with water, place the case which has no bottom, over the fern and allow it to remain thus overnight In the morning take the fern out and place near an open window for a few minutes so that it may "breathe" the fresh air. A small glass showcase, a large glass bowl or an aquarium would, of course, serve the same purpose.

Joining Lace.

Clever needleworkers join lace by matching the design so skillfully that it cannot be detected. When joining narrow lace insertion, which is not easily matched, do not sew in a straight seam, but turn over the raw edges and join by tacking every quarter of an inch. When finished and pressed this will give an open appearance like the other portion of the lace

Colored Barrettes and Pins.

Various styles of rhinestone ornamented barrettes, hair ornaments and bar pins instead of being in tortoise or amber are made of light transparent colored composition in tones of blue, amethyst, green, etc. The effect is beautiful.

"PEBLO" GLASS

The demand for this High Quality Glass has increased so rapidly that we are forced to buy it in very large quantities. We have now the invoices for the largest quantity of unground glass that has ever come to this city.

This "Peblo" Quality Glass (for which we have the exclusive agency) is as near perfect as is possible to make glass. Lenses ground from it are hard and brilliant, and as clear as crystal. We use this High Quality Glass in all repair work as well as all new work, and while it costs us more to make "PEBLO" Lenses, remember, it costs you no more than you pay for the ordinary kind.

All our Lens Grinding is done on automatic machines and is in charge of Mr. C. A. Primeau, who has had 14 years experience in Lens Grinding.

We have one of the Best Equipped Optical Parlors in Canada, and all examinations are conducted personally by Mr. A. A. Fowler.

WHARF WILL BE GREAT ADVANTAGE TO BOATMEN AND PUBLIC GENERALLY

Stony Lake, Ont., Oct. 11.—Surveyors employed by the Government have located the new wharf for Kawartha Park. It is to be situated at the west end of Sandy Beach, in the very heart of the bay. When the wind is blowing hard from the south the steamers will be unable to land at it. This cannot be overcome, as it is the only place where the fifteenth concession line can be reached without encroaching on private property.

The above statement from the Toronto Star of Saturday, is not correct. The large new public wharf is placed in a most admirable position which was recommended after repeated soundings by the government engineer who found deep water all around, and it is in the most sheltered position. Moreover, it is not at the end of the Concession Line as stated, but it is in the curve of the bay. Owners of property nearby have signed a written agreement to give the right of way to the concession line. The wharf will be within easy reach of the Buckhorn Road and of the people of Clear and Stony Lakes. There are always people who want wharves built to suit themselves and there are other people who grumble because they dont wish a Conservative Government to do a proper thing, but this wharf has not been hastily located and it will be found to be of a thoroughly public character, built on public property and a great advantage to both boatmen and the public generally. It is also perhaps possible that there are persons who do not wish to see a wharf built there at all since it would mean that the public would have to go in other directions farther north.

ELECTIONS FOR CHIEF AND OFFICERS AT OSHKIGMONG

Two Nominations for Chief and Four for Constable

Special Correspondence.

Oshkigmong, Oct. 13.—Mr. McCamus, of Keene, the newly appointed Indian agent, presided at the council last Thursday night, held in the Chemong Town Hall. Before the regular transaction of business, the nomination for Chief and officers took place. Mr. Alfred McCue, whose term for chief expired June 30th last, declined to be nominated for the second term, and the candidates now are as follows:

Chief—Daniel Whetung, Jr.; Joseph Whetung, Sr.

Secretary—Alfred McCue, Samson Fawn.

Caretaker—Henry Taylor, James McCue, David Jacobs

Treasurer—George Johnson, Thos. Quenguish, Arthur Whetung.

Constable—Hiram Taylor, Peter McCue, Geo. H. Taylor, John J. David.

Bush Ranger—George Taylor, John W. Jacobs.

Organist—Miss Lovenia Whetung, Miss Daisy Whetung.

The day fixed for the election is Thursday, Oct. 16th from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Mrs. Ben Taylor is at Hiawatha visiting her father, Mr. Jerry Crowe.

LARGE CONGREGATIONS AT FAIRMOUNT ANNIVERSARY

Rev. T. J. Mansell Preached Morning and Evening—Church is Progressing Under Rev. J. R. Butler

Services of added interest were held at Fairmount Methodist Church, on Sunday, when the pulpit was occupied by Rev. T. J. Mansell, pastor of Charlotte Street Methodist Church.

The occasion was the annual church anniversary and the congregation morning and evening was very large. Rev. Mr. Mansell delivered two splendid sermons and special music was given by the choir. Mr John Marsh, of Springville, assisted with a solo at the evening service.

Rev. J. R. Butler, the pastor, took the services at Charlotte St. Church. He completed his first year at Fairmount last June, and under his guidance the church has made very rapid progress. The Fairmount congregation is to be congratulated at having so able a leader.

On Tuesday night, the annual fowl supper will be held.

LINDSAY WELL SATISFIED WITH WORK OF FOLEY AND GLEESON

Town of Scugogville Boasts of 38000 Yards of Pavement

As stated last week, paving operations in Lindsay have been completed, about 38,000 yards of pavement having been laid. The Lindsay Warder presents the following "bouquet" to Foley & Gleeson, the contractors, who are proceeding with similar work in this city:

The work done by Contractors Foley and Gleeson appears to be of a high standard, and the pavement looks to be durable in every respect, and if Lindsay is to continue the present policy of "getting out of the mud," no doubt Messrs. Foley & Gleeson will get a goodly share of the work. They rushed the work through while in town and in pulling up stakes last evening and leaving for Peterborough, they take with them the good opinion of the citizens.

ODD AND ENDS.

Rugs made of cotton wash well. These are inexpensive and are often just the thing for the kitchen, as well as other parts of the house.

Soapsuds form a very valuable manure for bushes or young plants. Therefore instead of throwing them all down the drain put some of them on your garden.

Many people dislike stoning raisins because of the unpleasant stickiness. This can be prevented by rubbing butter on the fingers and on the knife before beginning.

A siphon of soda is an excellent fire extinguisher, as the carbonic acid gas in the soda water helps to stifle the flames. The siphon can be tilted, and the fluid will carry to a considerable height, such as the top of a blazing curtain.

A Record Trial.

Thirty seconds was the time occupied by the Birmingham (Eng.) magistrates in hearing a case. A man was charged with being drunk, but it was explained that he had taken his passage to Canada, and had only ten minutes in which to catch his train for Liverpool. In a shade less than half a minute the prisoner had been fined, had paid the money, and had left the court-room at a run.

RHEUMATIC PAINS GO SWOLLEN JOINTS VANISH

RHEUMA—Greatest Remedy for Rheumatism, Gout and Sciatica Only 50 Cents and Money Back from Warne Drug Co., If It Doesn't Satisfy

Thousands of persons during the last year freed themselves from the bondage of Rheumatism; rid themselves of the torturing pain; reduced the swollen joints; threw away canes and crutches, and from helpless beings became able to work and be of use to themselves and their families.

They took RHEUMA, the modern enemy of Rheumatism, which is also sure to cure Lumbago, Sciatica, Arthritis, Gout, Chronic Neuralgia or Kidney disease.

Don't be skeptical about RHEUMA. You will know in a few hours after beginning the treatment that the poisonous Uric Acid is leaving your system through the natural channels. You will feel better in a day; you will know you are are going to be cured in less than a week.

Don't think because RHEUMA is sold for only 50 cents a bottle that it won't bring you back to health. There is no guess work about it. RHEUMA is better than any remedy at ten times the price. Ask the Warne Drug Co.

A SERVICE FOR THE CHILDREN

In the Anglican Churches Next Sunday

Children's Day will be observed next Sunday by the Anglican Church throughout Canada and arrangements are being made for Children's Day in the local Anglican Churches.

NO NEED TO NAME HER.

The Relative Who Never Abandons One Afflicted With Insanity.

"It's a funny thing about a lunatic's relatives," said the superintendent of an insane asylum. "There are reliable statistics about the way a lunatic's relatives stand by him.

"The relative who stands by a lunatic least, who stops visiting him in the asylum first of all, is a brother. The next relative to drop off is a wife. That sounds hard, but it's true. Don't count on your wife if you are going to become a lunatic. Next husbands drop off. A little truer than wives husbands are, but only a little. Next fathers abandon the lunatic, next sisters.

"One relative never abandons him. Till she dies, or he dies, she comes regularly on visiting day, bringing underwear and ties, cakes and tobacco—provided, of course, that the lunatic's a male. If it's a female this relative is equally faithful. And even though as sometimes happens, the poor, mad creature hates her, curses her, tries to strike her when she visits him, she still remains faithful. When her visits cease they cease for only one reason—death.

"Nor do I need to tell you which relative this one is."—New York Tribune.

Made Use of Her Gowns.

Some divorce agreements have contained the odd stipulation that the wife should be provided with a spring and fall dress suitable to her condition. A case is known where the husband stipulated to pay a certain sum (alimony) every week, but demanded that whenever his wife discarded her gowns for good they should be turned over to him. He was called a "tight-fisted" man by those who mildly disliked him and a "contemptible old miser" by out and out enemies. He resold the gowns to second-hand buyers.

To the Lover of Good Coffee

We wish to advise you that we have installed in our store a new

Royal Electric Coffee Mill

manufactured by the A. J. Deer Co., of Hornell, N.Y. This machine is equipped with steel knives which cut the berry into fairly uniform, clean cut particles, instead of grinding and crushing it, as by the old method.

All Coffee Mills heretofore used will only crush the berry mutilating the minute oil cells, allowing the Coffee Oil to evaporate, thus impairing the strength and flavor, and in a short time the coffee becomes rancid, sour.

This is one reason why a pound of coffee cut in this Mill will make more cups of full strength coffee than will any coffee ground the old way.

Another feature about this Mill is that you may have your coffee cut as fine as the finest sand and it will still be practically free from that fine dust which is produced by the old method of grinding. You will, therefore, always have a clear cup of coffee instead of a muddy effect a result of using the old style mills.

ROYAL CUT COFFEE is also adaptable for percolators or French Drip Coffee Pots.

Try a pound of our Coffee cut on a Royal Mill and we know you will be pleased with the results.

Yours truly

WHEN FATHER LEFT

BY FRANK FILSON.

March the forth its going to be a misserable birthday for me on the fifteenth i guess. Last year we had two ducks stuffed with sage and unions and I had a birthday party and a lot of other boys and girls but this year there isnt going to be anything. We never have duck now anyway because since father died mother has been so darned poor Im sure I dont blame her would you.

March the sixth i find on looking over my diary that i didnt explain the circumstances—mother says thats the way it ought to be spelt. I must tell you first that father used to be in the secretary of states office at washington. We live near washington but weve moved into a smaller house since father died. It was a pity he died so young because father and mother had a bad folling out about a girl the night before and he didnt have a funeral or anything. It was a girl father used to know before he was married and mother said there wasnt any harm in that but why did father have a date with her at the Monument. Father said he didnt have a date but both happened to be there and if mother hadnt come snooping around all would have been well. Mother said she wouldnt stand for such langwidge and the next day father died.

We moved into a tiny house after father died. The last house had two bathrooms and a big kitchen and three maids and a dog but this house has only one bathroom and kitchen and only one maid. Susan is a colored maid because it makes her cheaper. I wish i had a new father.

March the ninth im going to write to the president to get me a new father. The president thought a great deal of father and mother used to go to his receptions but she hasnt been to any since father died. its odd how different it is after you havent any father. Mother never goes Any where now and she doesnt see any of her old friends except Susan. Last night mother read my diary about father having died after their falling out and it made her cry. I asked her if she would get me a new father and she cried awfully hard. Still im sure the president will get me one if i write to him because he got me the last one. Mother met father at a wite house reception she told me so. She fell in love with him because she didnt know about the Creature then. The Creature is the lady that had a date with father at the monument.

March the Fifteenth; This is My Birthday.

March the eleventh i wrote to the president yesterday about a father. i told him how awful it is to be without one and i explained that he wouldnt have died if he hadnt met the Creature. I didnt show mother the letter or tell her anything about it because she always cries when i tell her about a new father. But i guess if the president sends one along shell take him in all right because she took a tramp yesterday and he went off after dinner and said he didnt feel like sawing wood after eating her pie. I dont blame him because i had three pieces myself and they felt awful heavy. we are going to have duck for my birthday dinner after all.

March the thirteenth no anser has come from the president. i guess he is looking up a father for me. It isnt easy to choose the right kind of a father. Susan says maybe hell send a long a black one and then well have chicken for dinner sure. shes promised not to tell mother about my letter to the president. I asked her what my father died of and she looked at me awfully queer. I guess it was the Creature killed him because mother said she had broken a lot of hearts in her time and it was a good thing she was getting old and losing her power.

March the forteenth i must write this down at once before i forget all the circumstances. we are going into washington tomorrow to have my birthday party with mrs gregory thats the lady who introduced mother to father at the wite house reception she wrote a letter to mother yesterday and said she hadnt forgotten that the fifteenth was the Little Fellows birthday—thats me. she said what a shame it was that his sturdy littel lims should be cooped up in the country when he might be running all round her parlor. mother asked me if i would like to go and i said yes. afterwards i heard her talking it over with Susan. She tells Susan everything because shes black and faithful. She asked Susan if she thought there would be any danger in taking me into washington and Susan said no and it was a shame i was to be hidden away in the country when mother had so many loving friends in town and so were going in to have a dinner with mrs gregory as ive mentioned above.

March the fifteenth this is my birthday. Mother gave me a spotted rocking horse and a pair of roller skates and Susan gave me a pie and im to eat it when i have time but in neednt say Any Thing about it to Some Body because she thinks too much pie isnt good for Any Body. I must lay aside my pen now to say that i have to put on my best clothes and shoes and i must wash the back of my neck extra speshle because we start for mrs gregory immedatly after breakfast and she hopes i will behave myself and there wont be any need for a dose of Some Thing in jam tomorrow like last year if i dont eat too much pie.

no letter from the president.

March the sixteenth i take my pen in hand to inform you of the astonishing events of yesterday. we arrived in Washington on the eleven five and went straight to mrs gregorys house. mrs gregory is a nice old lady with silver hair and when she saw mother they both began to cry. I stood by shepishly and presently mrs gregory said so this is the Little Fellow how he has grown. I said Yes Mam. Mother said dont you pity me. You poor thing, said mrs gregory from the bottom of my heart i do. Then they began to talk earnestly and Some How i knew that they were talking about my new father. So i said Mrs gregory i wrote to the president for another father and i guess he has spoken to you, hasnt he. What she cried, starting up, so that was You. Mother was furious and told me to run away into the garden to play. i played till i was tired and went back into the house round the back way. When i got outside the parlor door i heard a sound of sobbing and suddenly a well remembered voice cried in tones that froze the blood in my veins Where is the Little Fellow Phyllis I must see him at once. The door flew open and who do you think was there. My father—the same one. And he hadnt died at all but only gone away. I never saw mother laugh and cry together as she did then and they wouldnt stop kissing me. They said the credit lay between Me mrs gregory and the president and that the Creature has married and gone away.

we had two ducks for dinner.

Turned Down.

"An apt retort!" said Senator du Pont in a tariff argument. "As apt a retort as the pert young girl's.

"This young girl repulsed very haughtily the proffered attentions of a young man. He, wounded to the quick, exclaimed:

"'Ah, well, you're as full of airs as a hand organ.'

"She tossed her head.

"'Maybe I am,' she said, 'but, all the same, I don't go with a crank.'"

Representative Longworth at a dinner in Cincinnati said of a defeated candidate for congress: "Well, after all, it's a great consolation for a man's conscience to tell him, when he is left, that he is right."

A MISTAKE

A Story For Labor Day

By DORETHA HALE

Little Mamie Swift was taken very ill in the night, and her father was called up to go for the doctor. Swift feared the child would die and began to trot. From trotting he increased his pace to a run.

He heard footsteps behind him, and they were gaining on him. But he thought nothing about it, for his mind was on his sick child. Suddenly the pursuer clapped a hand on his shoulder and handcuffs on his wrist.

"What's this?" he asked, astonished.

"You're wanted," replied a policeman.

"Let me go. My child is sick, and I must get a doctor."

"Oh, the doctor racket has been worked too often. It's no good."

Swift was in agony, but could do nothing. He was taken to a police station, where a complaint of burglary was entered against him. A woman came to the station, looked at the prisoner and said, "That's the man," and went away.

Meanwhile the mother waited for the return of her husband with the doctor. Morning came, but neither Swift nor the doctor came. As the sun rose the child died. Then to complete the mother's agony word came from her husband that while running for the doctor he had been mistaken for a burglar and arrested.

During the day the toils tightened around Swift. The rogues' gallery was ransacked for his picture, and the photograph of a criminal named Jack Dowlen, who was the image of Swift, was found. The woman who had identified the prisoner the night before looked at him again and was sure it was the man she had caught opening her bureau drawers and, on being discovered, had run.

There was never a clearer case against a man. Had he been a gentleman he could have proved that burglary was not in his line, but he was a plain workingman and could only prove that his name was on the rolls of the Carpenters' union in good and regular standing. But this did not save him. He was convicted of burglary and sentenced to six years in state prison.

The day he was sent up his wife came to see him. She knew he was innocent and had sworn that he had been with her five minutes before the alleged burglary had been committed and that he had left her to go for a doctor to attend their sick child. The story would have elicited sympathy if it had been believed; but it was not. What was the testimony of a burglar's wife worth? Nothing.

"Well, Tom," she said to him, "this is hard, isn't it?"

"Yes, Mary, it is."

"Why don't they find a way to avoid such mistakes?"

"I don't know. I suppose they can't."

"Maybe some day the union will have persons whose business it will be to ferret out such cases as appear among their members."

"I hope it will."

"Well, Tom, keep up a good heart. I'll work for the children."

The convict was too disheartened to make any response to his wife's hopefulness. All he said was if he'd been let go on for the doctor the child might be alive now.

Swift had served a year in prison when one night a burglar was caught red handed in a burglary. He happened to be taken to the same station Swift had been taken when arrested on his way for the doctor. The man at the desk looked at him in surprise.

"Great Scott, man," he exclaimed, "I hadn't heard of your breaking jail!"

"I haven't broken jail," said the man sullenly.

"You were sent up a year ago—that I'll swear to. What's your name?"

"Oh, I'm Patsy Wolff. I might as well own up. I've been before the court so many times I couldn't fool anybody. Besides, my mug is in the gallery."

The sergeant looked puzzled.

"Take him in and lock him up," he said. "I'll find out about the matter in the morning."

The next day he learned that Thomas Swift, the man he supposed Patsy Wolff to be, was at the penitentiary. The picture in the rogues' gallery was examined, and it was found that it might be the likeness of either one of the men. It began to dawn on the police that they had made a mistake.

A month later, after a great deal of red tape had been untied, on the morning of Labor day, Tom Swift was discharged from prison, and, having reached the city where he had left his family, he saw his companion laborers marching. He stood for a moment watching them, muttering to himself:

"You've lots to do, boys, besides getting better wages. You've got to see that when one of your number gets into trouble with the law and is innocent there'll be detectives to find out where the guilt lies."

When Tom reached home he found that his wife had about come to the "end of her rope" and could not have carried the burden any longer.

"How did they get you out, Tom?" he asked.

"The governor pardoned me."

"And will they punish those who put you there for not taking more care?"

"No. They'll be punished in another world, and maybe they're not to blame. I don't know."

Too Much.

Observing his pensive expression, Aunt Sarah kindly asked, "Tommy, won't you have some more doughnuts?"

"No'm!" the poor lad replied with feeling emphasis, "I don't want them I got now!"

His Humble Desire.

"Will you object to my weighing myself?" said a meek-looking man to his wife as they stood near a weighing machine on the platform of a railway station.

"What do you want to weigh yourself for?" she asked sharply.

"Only to see, dear, if you would allow me to have my own 'weigh' for once!"—London Answers.

The First Corset.

The first corset—not counting ancient modifications of Grecian bone and girdle—was introduced into France by Catherine de Medici. It was a strange affair and fashioned after the style of a knight's cuirass. The framework was entirely of iron, and the velvet, which decorated the exterior only, served to hide a frigatrial and cumbersome article of torture.

Deceitful.

Burglar (who is suddenly interrupted by the owner of the house) Well, if that isn't the limit! What do you mean by writing on your door, 'Out of town until Sunday'?"

CALLS BANANA PERFECT FOOD

Invaluable as Medicine, and, Weight for Weight, It Beats Beefsteak, Is Assertion of Authority.

"My doctor has ordered me a pint of beef tea daily," a weakly woman remarked six months ago. "Rubbish," was the answer, "eat bananas instead." She stared incredulously. Nevertheless, after a few question upon her part she agreed to give the suggestion a trial. Today she is living monument to the virtues of the banana.

It is only ignorance which keeps this marvelously nutritious fruit from being even more widely used than it is today. Bananas, besides forming a pleasant addition at dessert, are invaluable as a medicine. Weight for weight they beat beefsteak. In the countries where the fruit is grown it forms the staple diet of the laborers. The banana is absolutely pure, which fact, perhaps, in these days of jungle horrors and tuberculosis meat, will appeal more strongly than any other.

Perhaps the most striking triumph of the banana has been achieved in California, which recognized as one of the fruit gardens of the world. The fruit does not grow there, so, considering that almost every other kind does, it was thought scarcely worth while to introduce it. However, during the "off" season some one made the experiment, when, to the amazement of all, "caught" immediately. Now trains loaded with nothing but bananas are sent from the ports on the eastern coast to California. Meat is bad for rheumatism; bananas are an antidote for that as well as for gout and liver complaints.

Indeed, there is no other food, either animal or vegetable, even including the many valuable cereals, which surpasses the banana. It is good alike for old and young, and is beneficial, both in sickness and in health. The exact meaning of the scientific name of the banana means "food of the wise man."—Cincinnati Inquirer.

Are You Still Insurable?

The main secret of success is seeing and seizing the opportunities that are continually offering themselves to every man. Many men are not wide-awake enough to detect and utilize chances to improve their condition, and this explains the great number of those who have made failures of their lives. A man who cannot perceive the thing which he should do is to be pitied, but blame only is deserved by one who deliberately ignores opportunity. In this latter class must be included those who know they should insure their lives for the benefit of their families but do not do so. Thousands while they were in good health and could easily secure policies, have deferred this sacred duty until disease has laid its cluth on them and the very last opportunity for becoming an insurant is lost. In 1912, 50,000 applications in the United States for life insurance were rejected because of bodily ailments. Five thousand persons missed getting insurance because of hereditary taint. These could never have been insured at all, but the 45,000 others who were in ill health might have passed a medical examination if they had applied for it in time. Of these 10,000 were five years too late, 10,000 three years too late, 10,000 one year too late, 5,000 six months too late and 10,000 only two to three months too late. It is to be hoped that the army of lost opportunity in life insurance will be smaller in 1913 than it was in 1912.

The Sun Life of Canada has plans which should interest all who propose making provision for their family in the event of death, or if living, for old age.

Dignified French Paper Describes Latest In Canine Fashions.

Fashions for dogs seem to be receiving almost as much attention as the proper adornment for the fair sex in Paris. Recently there was a long serious article in one of the most dignified papers of Paris on the subject, What Elegant Dogs Should Wear. Quite seriously, the writer avers that leather collars may still be worn, but that they must be the same color and material as the leash. He continues to say that the most fashionable collars are of brass or silver, many of them mounted with precious stones, turquoises, sapphires and rubies.

Artistic combinations for dogs is dealt with at length. For instance, he says that dark brindled bulldogs should have a red leather collar with silver gilt mounting, while a white brindled dog looks much more chic in a white collar with turquoises.

The big bristle collar, once so popular, is now a thing of the past, and is not tolerated in the most exclusive circles of the dog world.

He says that for Pekinese, Japanese and King Charles spaniels collars should be of worked silver, very light and supple, and of fine mesh, fastened with a tiny padlock. Patent leather collars make a very striking effect, but what the writer calls a "ravishing combination" is obtained in the use of dog harness for Poms, encircling the neck and breast. Greyhounds look best in light-colored coats with stripes to match, we are told.

For motoring, dogs should wear English stuffs and fur coats. Plaids of dark shades are considered most suitable. What must be an awful blow to the over-solicitous woman dog owner is the statement that for the smart dog it is no longer considered fashionable to have their coats made to contain a pocket for a handkerchief. Sweaters are most chic for the seaside, especially for short-haired dogs, and the rainy season has brought out, so the writer prettily puts it, "dainty canine mackintoshes artistically gathered in at the neck and legs."

He has refrained from expressing any opinion on diaphanous or slashed skirts for dogs, but he concludes by saying that every well-bred dog of any social position worth while should have at least two pairs of boots and a pair of "Wellingtons" for outdoor wear. Also velvet or satin pumps for use indoors.

IDENTIFYING DEAD SOLDIERS.

Many Methods Adopted by Various Countries.

Turkey is the only European country which takes practically no trouble to see that its soldiers killed in war shall be identified. Every other country makes its fighters carry "identities," "cards," or in some other way provides that its dead soldiers will be recognized.

Each Bulgarian soldier, for instance, carries no fewer than six identification plates, each of which has on it his name, number and corps. These plates each man is directed to fix away in various parts of his clothing, so that however badly he may be wounded, there will be at least one plate by which he can be identified.

It is because of the terrible effects of modern artillery fire that soldiers should carry several means of identification if killed. During the Boer war, for example, soldiers had an identification card sewn into some portion of their clothing.

After Spion Kop no trace could be found of Capt. Hicks, of the Lancashire Fusiliers, and for months he was supposed to be in the hands of the Boers. It transpired, however that he had been blown almost literally to atoms by the explosion of a shell and his identification card destroyed.

The vast majority of the hundreds of thousands of Japanese and Russians killed in the Russo-Japanese war were identified. After the battle of Sha-ho river, for example, over 13,000 Russian dead were buried by the Japanese, practically everyone being recognized by means of the little metal ikons, or sacred picture images found on the bodies. On the back of these ikons was stamped the name, regiment and rank of the wearer.

Each Japanese soldier carried a tiny aluminum tag worn inside the waist-belt and bearing a number corresponding with his number in the regimental list. So terrible was the fighting and so many soldiers were literally blown to bits by hand-grenades that orders were issued that the tags should be placed inside the soles of the boots. It was found that even if a shell actually struck a man and blew him to atoms his boots were always found intact.

Germany, like Bulgaria, has more than one way of identifying its dead after a big battle. Each soldier carries three metal discs about the size of a half-crown, stamped with his number and corps. One disc is sewn inside the collar of the great-coat, another in the waist-band of the trousers, and the third in the heel of the right boot.

How well this system works was shown at Vionville and Gravelotte, two of the worst battles of the war of 1870. These battles were fought in front of Metz on Aug. 16 and 18, the Germans losing over 40,000 officers and men. Yet complete casualty lists were received in Berlin two days later.

If Austria does decide to fight, her soldiers will be recognized by an elaborate brass locket which each one wears. This locket contains a number of leaves of parchment on which are written full particulars of the owner, his name, age, date of enlistment, the town or village where his home is and other particulars.

HE BLESSED MANKIND

LORD LISTER'S WORK SCARCELY KNOWN TO THE LAYMAN.

In His Recent Biography of the Great Discoverer of Antiseptic Surgery Dr. Wrench Tells of the Horrors of the Early Days In the Hospitals—Lister Made Operations a Matter of Safety.

The layman does not realize what he owes to Joseph Lister when he has got a compound fracture and recovers from it, when he undergoes an operation and straightway goes forth and forgets it, when he is alive to-day and should have been dead yesterday, when he can "go into hospital" without the eighty to one chance of coming out in a coffin. For such a dramatic figure was reached before the great searcher of germs, the dreamer of vitality, put research and imagination together and found what we laymen call the antiseptic mode of treatment. It is just the preservation of the patient's vitality by excluding the exterior and accidental assailants.

Lister was Quaker-born in London, but he married into the Church of England, brushing aside, we may imagine, such small differences to achieve his happy married life. His career was mainly—as the crow flies—from London to Glasgow, from Glasgow to Edinburgh, and from Edinburgh to London and the triumph of a man over prejudice. The law of cleanliness was always in Lister's mind. "The wound in hospital invariably became infected." And you are advised by the author to skip the ensuing pages, which account young Lister saw in the Glasgow Hospital unless you have a strong stomach. For James Simpson had discovered the anaesthetic which enabled the patient to undergo operations without discomfort, and the surgeons had fallen upon the patients and cut and hacked and sliced because the patient knew nothing about it. But the patients died even more regularly under the hands of the skilled surgeons. They were hardly more trained in cleanliness than Sir Astley Cooper who went—after an operation on His Majesty George IV.—to see him in yesterday's shirt with blood on the wrists.

Dr. Wench in his recent book on Lord Lister has given the history of the movement that has turned the hospital from the inlet of death to the gate of life, statistics as to the hundreds of thousands that have been saved by the Quaker boy who worked until a hospital is now one of the safest places in which the cleanly surgeon will avoid the putrefaction that was almost inevitable in 1865. He has told us of the coming of Lister to London, as Professor of Clinical Surgery to King's College Hospital. He demanded separate wards, his own assistants, nurses and attendants. The terms were accepted. They were "wholly without precedent, but so too, was Lister." That call to London came in 1877. It was then that Lister had won over his conservative colleagues, who rather resented the appointment of a "foreigner." In these days there is not a medical student or a wounded man who has not benefited by that Quaker Londoner who went to Scotland and returned as a native to London.

The triumphs came at last, and Dr. Wrench draws out with horrors and comforts the reform that Joseph Lister produced. There are stories about pus which you may skip or struggle through—as Lister did. Yet one would have welcomed—as a layman—something more about the personality of the man who never lacked high spirits. "He joined his friends in the usual adventures of student life, on one occasion sallying forth to take down the flaunting wooden board of a quack doctor and returning to burn it with ceremony before the infirmary"; and climbing Cat's Neck he tumbled and was consoled by his nurse.—"I ay kent something would happen wi' yon English whustlin' on the Sabbath Day." But in the later days, "though out the years in which his doctrines was meeting friend and foe he showed neither temper nor impatience, but an indomitable will and energy, a quiet irony towards his opponents, an invariable courtesy to friend and foe alike." The author of "Rab and His Friends" said of him: "You have only to look at his face to see how uninjured he has been in his walk through life."

Lister was always imperturbably courageous. He made a successful experiment on Queen Victoria, who was suffering from a painful abscess. Lister was summoned to Balmoral by Sir William Jenner. Lister came from Edinburgh and applied his carbolic spray appartus.

"During the brief operation a slight touch of carbolic passing the shoulder touched the Queen's face. She complained to Sir William Jenner. 'Madame,' he replied in humorous excuse, 'I am only the man who works the bellows.' The Queen looked at Lister's grave face, and smiling asserted that she liked the smell of carbolic, and Lister was by her gentle tact enabled to proceed."

But Lister was not satisfied. There were complications. He went for a walk in the grounds of Balmoral and thought it out. He came back with the idea of indiarubber tubing. And he made his first experiment, kill or cure, on Queen Victoria.

It is only here that Dr. Wrench gives us glimpses of the personality of Lord Lister, whose main desire, if we may judge from the published records, was to secure public benefit. We have here and there [illegible] instances of his disregard for money, his treatment of poor patients gratuitously, his curious modesty in relation to colleagues and authorities. And probably his worst moment was when his master, Pasteur, publicly embraced him on a French platform. He had his own methods of courtesy as he grew older. "He was one who was wont to presuppose a goodness in other men of like kind to his own," writes his biographer.

CIGAR BOXES.

There Is a Tremendous Trade In These Cedar Wood Receptacles.

Cigar boxes are a negligible quantity to the average smoker who stands before a tastily dressed showcase, and buys a "five cent straight" or a "three for a quarter." Few of even the most inveterate smokers ever stop to think of the number of these boxes used in the United States during a year, or from where they come.

Thirty millions is the total number of boxes supplied to cigar manufacturers in the United States. Many millions more enter the country filled with foreign rolled cigars from Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines. Manufacturers declare that the boxes made from Spanish cedar, a wood which is rarely seen outside of Cuba, is the best for packing the seductive weed.

Various woods have been tried, but wherever used connoisseurs have protested that even the best of cigars were spoiled by putting them in boxes made from other wood than Spanish cedar. This wood always retains the flavor of a good cigar, and some assert that it greatly improves the flavor. The reason given is that the Spanish cedar grows only in that soil which produces the finest quality of what is known as Havana tobacco.

Amazing Disrespect.

The reigning bore in Edinburgh at one time was Professor L., and his favorite subject was the north pole. One day he met Jeffrey in a narrow lane and began instantly to talk of the north pole. Jeffrey in despair and out of all patience darted past him, exclaiming, "Hang the north pole!" Shortly after Professor L., boiling over with indignation, met Sydney Smith. "Oh, my dear fellow," said Sydney, "never mind! No one minds what Jeffrey says, you know. He is a privileged person. He respects nothing, absolutely nothing. Why, you will scarcely credit it, but it is not more than a week since I heard him speak disrespectfully of the equator."

"The people who lived on the earth before it was inhabited were a very low order of savages."

"Samuel Johnson was a well known English writer. He wrote several heavy books."

"Henry IV. of England met his death by starting to pray and having a fit and died from effects."

"A penitent is one who earns his living by his pen."

MORNING TRAINS WERE DELAYED

Tender of Light Engine Left the Rails

No. 10, freight train from Lindsay to Belleville, was delayed this morning for one hour and a half. The delay was caused by the ditching of a light engine, en-route from Lindsay, about a mile from Best's Station. The rear wheel of the tender left the track and ran along the ties a short distance, causing the rail to be crowded out.

Help was soon secured and the rail replaced.

The Toronto Flyer was also delayed.

THE PERIL OF ABUNDANCE

Eloquent Sermon by Rev. R. G. Peever

Harvest Festival Services were held at George Street Church yesterday. The services were well attended, both morning and evening. At the evening service the church was well filled.

Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., pastor, occupied the pulpit both morning and evening. In the evening Mr. Peever preached from a text in Deut. 8: 20, and his subject was "The Danger and Discipline of abundance."

Mr. Peever said that from his personal knowledge of many countries he believed that Canada stood out more for sobriety and a higher average intelligence than any country on the globe.

Canada was to-day prosperous and was blessed above other nations, and if the future was marred it would be the work of man and not of God, for God had given us abundance in almost every kind of wealth.

Herein lies the danger of this abundance, if we allow our possessions to possess us, and we do not possess them, then our prosperity will be turned into a curse instead of a blessing.

In no part of the world are men making money faster than they are in Canada to-day, men who were a few years ago comparitively poor, have now more wealth than they know what to do with. These men are in imminent peril of forgetting God. When they were poor and struggling they were religious men who attended their church and took a prominent part in the religious life of the community, but when God gave them riches they forgot the giver.

"Plenty is putting a great strain upon us which it is not easy to bear." But if we can control these resources, what a mighty lever for good our wealth may become. If these things control us then though we may be rich in goods, we shall in reality be miserably poor.

We are too apt to measure ourselves by what we possess; the true measurement of a man is the measurement of his character. Very impressive were the words of the preacher when he said: "If we are using these things as a couch of ease, we are recreant to the trust God has put upon us."

"We need," said Mr. Peever, "more consecration of talent in business and professional life, more of the spirit of Stewardship, the sense that we hold this wealth as a sacred trust for which we will have to render an account."

It was a very eloquent and incisive sermon. Mr. Peever is already making his influence and personality felt in his pastoral work, and as a preacher he is slowly unfolding his great powers.

The musical part of the services were beautifully rendered by the splendid choir under the direction of the organist, Prof. Renwick.

A special Harvest hymn written by Mr. David Moore, was sung by the congregation with great effect. The service closed with the singing of the National Anthem in which the whole congregation joined with heart and voice.

Millinery Styles FOR AUTUMN AND WINTER

You will be surprised at the picturesque style of these Hats. Our workroom has spared no pains in making these the most exclusive creations at the prices they are marked. Every one is of this season's popular design. Shapes are admired for their becomingness combined with these qualities: A rich appearance, smart trims of feathers or ribbon and one that will see that fashion presents a hat that at once satisfies the demands of good style, yet keeps within the bounds of economy.

ANY VICTIMS IN THIS CITY

Peterboro Included in Calling List of Confidence Men

A GOLD MINE

Dear Sir—I am engaged in an important criminal case against a pair of clever confidence men who defrauded a client of mine by means of a mining swindle. We arrested one of the pair in June, 1910, and among the things found upon him was a pocket map of Ontario with 30 cities marked by means of circles in lead pencil. We have already learned of attempts made by the swindlers in a number of these cities, and presume from what we have learned that each city was marked after an attempted swindle, in order to be avoided in future. Your city was one of those so marked and I would therefore request that you kindly inform me whether you have any knowledge of any attempts having been made to swindle any of your citizens.

The game consists of one swindler posing as an Arizona miner, inducing victims to make a trip to another city to purchase a gold mine from his confederate who poses as a San Francisco mine owner. The two swindlers have been working the same game for over ten years.

Our case is still in the courts and I am seeking evidence an information on other operations of the swindlers. If you know of any attempt ever having been made in your city, kindly let me hear from you at once, and I will forward photos for identification.

Awaiting your reply, I am,

Yours respectfully,

JOHN S. WURTS.

"THE SHEPHERD OF THE HILLS"

Gaskell and MacVitty announce for production at the Grand Opera House on Saturday next, Oct. 18th matinee and night, Harold Bell Wright's dramatization of his very popular novel, "The Shepherd of the Hills." In making the dramatization Mr. Wright was collaborated with by Elsbery W. Reynolds.

"The Shepherd of the Hills," is a story of humor and pathos told in a simple, direct manner, of love, mystery and heroism, with its scenes all in the Ozark mountains, southern Missouri where the author lived and preached for some years. There are several exciting incidents including the night ride of the splendid heroine over the hills through a storm, an attack upon the shepherd and the moral victory of a man when a panther is about to spring upon his rival, but there is no melodramatic touch to the play.

PURITANS AT THE OPERA HOUSE

A Pleasing Little Scotch Comedy

At the Grand Opera House, on Saturday, the Stratford Limited produced a comedy in three acts, entitled "Bunty Pulls the Strings," by Graham Moffat and staged under the direction of A. J. Edwards. The cast of characters was excellent, and a very entertaining evening was spent.

The scene was laid in Scotland and the characters were all of the highland village type. The story centres around an incident in the life of the Biggar family. Thomas Biggar is a butterman and a widower with stern Puritanical principles, who sets his son and daughter to study sermons and the catechism religiously every Sabbath and thrashes his son, Rab, if he as much as whistles on the Lord's day.

Rab is growing into manhood and and is getting a little out of hand, he hates the catechism and begins to hate his father for his over strict discipline. He kicks over the traces and threatens to to run away.

Bunty is a charming creature with a very practical turn of mind, and she pulls the strings. She is engaged to a big, simple carpenter, Weellum Sprunt, who has been recently made elder in the kirk.

Trouble is caused by the coming of a maiden aunt of Weellum Sprunt's. She tries to get herself married to Mr. Biggar, but another lady comes on the scene who has a prior claim upon the widower. Bunty manipulates the strings successfully, and after much ado in the kirk and in in the home, the family settles down to a new lease of happiness to the tune of wedding bells.

Daway McNaughton made a charming Bunty. J. McEwan was an ideal Puritan. John MacFarlane as "Weellum" was most cleverly foolish and played his part well. Wm. Sheafe and Esther Forde were a happy and entertaining pair of young lovers. The Scotch accent was as rich as the real thing but was quite understandable.

FOUR HUNDRED MINERS MAY HAVE LOST THEIR LIVES

Explosion Follows Shortly After Operations Start for the Day

MANY ARE IN THE FIRE ZONE

Canadian Press Despatch

CARDIFF, WALES, Oct. 14— Over two hundred Welsh miners it is believed perished this morning in the Universal Colliery pits near here when a terrific explosion shattered the works shortly after 740 men had been let down the shafts.

About five hundred men had been recovered up to noon, but at that time fire broke out in the galleries hindering the work of rescue.

Canadian Press Despatch.

CARDIFF, Oct. 14—The day shift of 740 men went into the mine at five o'clock. An hout later a deafening explosion was heard and people on the surface running to the pit mouth found the ventilating and hoisting machinery blown to atoms, and a man working twenty yards distance, decapitated by the force of the blast.

Rescue parties were soon ready and though the well known "firey" nature of the mine afforded little hope, and entrance was found through an adjacent shaft and rescuers soon brought to the surface 327 miners who had taken refuge in galleries near the entrance, with the bodies of six who had been killed by being dashed against timber supports.

The search was continued in the more remote galleries and at noon altogether five hundred had been brought out alive.

Pathetic scenes were witnessed at the mouth of the pit, relatives of the entombed miners gathering in thousands, clamoring for news of those still below. An explosion occurred in the same pit, thirteen years ago when 120 miners were lost and only one was rescued.

Nearly all the rescued miners are suffering from burns and shock, and some are not expected to live. All the rescued were found in the east galleries where ventilation remained fair. Little hope is held out for those now remaining in the mine who are in the west galleries where afterdamp and fire which followed the explosion have, it is feared, made further rescue impossible.

CARDIFF, (Later) — It is now feared that over four hundred miners perished in the explosion at the Universal Colliery this morning. Instead of 740 there were 930 in the day shirt, and at four o'clock 418 were still in the workings on the west side where the mine is on fire.

Grand New Eight Piece Orchestra Instrument Will be Installed — To be in Operation for Thanksgiving Day Morning

The new orchestra instrument purchased some time ago from the Williams' Music Co., by Manager Clayton, of the Royal Theatre, has arrived in the city and will be installed and in operation for Thanksgiving Day morning, Oct. 20th.

No doubt next Monday the many patrons and music-lovers of this city will be surprised when they hear and enjoy the various high class programs rendered by this wonderful musical instrument which will be new in every detail to all theatregoers in Peterborough.

The Royal Theatre under the capable management of Mr. Clayton has left nothing undone for the comfort and enjoyment of the patrons of this popular picture and vaudeville house, having made an expenditure of $2,500 alone to the musical department and being equipped with two of the best picture machines and capable operators. The Royal will be one of the few strictly modern theatres in Canada.

TELEGRAPH SERVICE

The call for a better telegraph service has not been in vain as Mr J. L. Murphy, local manager of the G. N. W. Telegraph Company informed The Review to-day that the office on George street, commencing Wednesday, October 15, would remain open till eleven o'clock p.m., on all days except Sunday, when the hours will be 9 to 10 a.m., and 5 to 6 p.m.

HAD A PROTECTED BIRD.

And So Warden and Taxidermist Pay a Fine

GALT, Oct. 14.—A novel case was tried at police court to-day. The local game warden came into possession of a rare specimen of insectivorous bird. Another warden discovered the bird at the taxidermist's and traced back the ownership. He promptly laid charges against both the officer of the law and the expert stuffer. The former's plea was that he had found the bird dead in the woods, which plea seemed to the police magistrate reasonable enough, it sometimes happening that a shooter picks up his game dead. The man employed to mount the prize thought he was safe, seeing that his customer was a game warden. Falling proof of actual shooting of the bird by defendants, they were convicted on the lesser charge of having it in possession, and both were fined.

British Soldier Best, He Says.

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 14.—Lt.-Col. W. S. Buell, who accompanied the Canadian officers on the trip with Hon. Col. Sam Hughes, to England and the continent, has returned to Brockville. He speaks in high terms of the Swiss and French soldiers, the French cavalry being especially fine, but the British soldier excelled in all the manoeuvres.

Col. Buell stated that the chief general topic of the hour in Great Britain was the Irish situation, and the unanimous opinion was that the condition of affairs was most serious, indeed.

FACES AS IN DANTE'S INFERNO

Miss Bick, a young American woman, said she couldn't persuade herself that the scene was real when she looked over the Carmania's rail and saw a great company of men and women and children huddled in the afterpart of the Volturno.

"It was like a nightmare," said Miss Bick. "We got as close to the Volturno as twice the width of a street. We had to look. There was an awful fascination that gripped us. In the forepart of the ship the flames were leaping high. It looked as if they would certainly spread to the stern. Even in a momentary glance we could see the terror of the Volturno's passengers. The faces of the men were distorted beyond description. Dore has drawn such faces in picturing Dante's Inferno. We saw the white faces of women and girls, some of whom were on their knees praying. We saw mothers with children at their breasts who strained their babies to them and reached out hands to us, appealing for help. That night these horrors were revealed by the searchlight. Once when the beam of light wheeled and fell on the miserable souls at the stern of the burning liner we saw right in the light a baby who was laughing in the mother's face. Somehow that seemed to me the most dreadful bit of the whole scene."

All Lost In Wreck.

NOME, Alaska, Oct. 14—The gasoline schooner Nora, which sailed from St. Michael's a few days before the big storm of last Sunday, having on board Herbert Quisler, his native wife and three boys, and several others unknown, was wrecked on the beach at Simrock and all lost. Four bodies have been found.

CLOSE EYE ON HUERTA

United States Will Remain on the Alert

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—After a conference between President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan yesterday it was announced at the White House that telegrams had been despatched to both John Lind, at Vera Crus, and Charles O'Shaughnessy at Mexico City, to make representations to the Huerta Government that the United States would look with displeasure upon any injury to the Mexican deputies now under arrest.

It has been left entirely to Mr Lind's discretion whether he should return to Mexico City to impress those views on the Mexican authorities, but Charge O'Shaughnessy has been directed to address himself to the Minister of Foreign Relations and make it plain that the United States attaches "the greatest importance" to the arrest of the deputies and is keenly interested in what will be their fate.

President Wilson told callers yesterday, that with the present state of affairs, he did not see how a constitutional election could be held in Mexico. So far as the immediate policy of the United States is concerned it was made plain by the President yesterday that there would be no departure from the original position that the Mexicans should settle their own affairs. There are no plans for any increase in the number of American warships in Mexican waters.

The Government here has practically abandoned all hope of seeing an election or treating any further with Huerta as an individual. There is a disposition in administration circles to await the course of events, with the hope that the factional lines will be so tightly drawn as to bring about a natural adjustment without outside interference.

HE MUST FACE JURY

Emmerson Darragh is Charged With Pushing Man Into Bay

WIARTON, Oct. 14.—Emerson Darragh was committed for trial on a charge of manslaughter yesterday. Last Monday night Emerson Darragh, Stewart Haskell, Charles Jones and Thomas Fanning, Owen Sound, came into this port in a launch about 10 o'clock and left for Hyatte Point about two a.m., where their fishing grounds were located. Three of them, Darragh, Fanning and Haskell, had been drinking heavily. Jones, according to evidence given in court yesterday, was sitting at the cabin door with Fanning, and remarked that Darragh, who was at the tiller, was steering the boat all over the bay, and went back to take the tiller.

Fanning gave evidence that when he got there and was seated in a hunched position, he saw Darragh shove Jones overboard. This occurred at Four-Mile Point, and is a run of less than twenty minutes from Wiarton. Haskell last saw Jones sitting down, but being busy with the engine could not see what was going on, but heard some loud words. Fanning shouted to Haskell that Darragh had thrown Jones overboard. Darragh got up, looked around, told Haskell to run ahead and then turn around, which they did, but all they could see was Jones' hat. Jones could not swim. They remained there about ten minutes and called for Jones. It was very dark. They then returned to Wiarton and reported the facts to the chief of police.

Darragh, who was immediately arrested, was tried before Police Magistrate B. B. Miller here yesterday afternoon.

The trial will take place at the Fall Assizes in Owen Sound. Bail was granted. No defence was offered by Darragh. A few years ago he was manager of the Wolverine Fish Co. He, Haskell and Jones own the launch.

German Ship To Go To Mexico.

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—The Foreign Office here reached the conclusion last evening that the existing situation in Mexico is such as to necessitate the presence of a German warship in Mexican waters.

The cruiser Hertha, which is now being used as a school ship, will be selected as the most available warship for duty along the eastern coast of Mexico. She is now cruising in New England waters.

A cruiser from Europe scarcely could be chosen for this work, as the German squadrons have been depleted by the withdrawal of cruisers for the service in the Mediterranean owing to the recent hostilities in the Balkans.

Inventor Leaves Nothing.

BERLIN, Oct. 14.—Messages from Munich to the Berlin newspapers report that Rudolph Diessel, the famous inventor of the oil engine, who mysteriously disappeared from a steamer, between Antwerp and Harwich, has left his family in a desperate financial plight. It is alleged that Diessel's money was invested in a number of manufacturing enterprises that have not proven successful, and that realization of his position was responsible for his disappearance.

ENGLISH BOBBIES ARE REPULSED BY MILITANTS

Sylvia Pankhurst is Arrested, But Fierce Onslaught of Her Companions Forces Police to Let Her Go Again—Militants Plan to Disturb Wedding of Prince Arthur of Connaught.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—After a fierce struggle the police arrested Miss Sylvia Pankhurst at Bow Neaths, in the east end of London, last night, where she was making a speech. But when they got her outside the building, with the intention of placing her in a taxicab and rushing her to Holloway Jail, the militants attacked the police so savagely that they had to let her go and she escaped.

Miss Pankhurst, who has an uncompleted term of imprisonment to serve, was not recognized until she threw aside the disguise which enabled her to elude the police and enter the building. She was warmly applauded as she stepped on the platform, but had been speaking only a few minutes when detectives, accompanied by a body of uniformed police with drawn truncheons, entered the hall and made a rush for the platform.

The audience rose to their feet, and chairs began to fly through the air, the invaders being the objective point. Some of the people in the galleries even dropped benches on their heads. The police gained the platform, and for ten minutes a desperate battle waged, the officers using their clubs freely, and those on the platform utilizing chairs as weapons.

The police succeeded in dragging Miss Pankhurst down to the floor of the house while reinforcements cleared the hall. Outside, the struggle was renewed with greater fury. Men and women were thrown down and trampled upon. Concentrating the attack on the policemen who had the militant leader in their grasp, the women, with the assistance of several men succeeded in tearing her from their grasp, and she slipped away. Some of the women afterwards complained of having been thrown down and kicked by the police, and many, after the fracas were seen nursing bruises. Miss Zella Emerson of Jackson, Mich. whose imprisonment caused such a furore several months ago, was one of those injured. Mrs. Lee, who presided at the meeting and took a conspicuous part in the attack on the police, was arrested.

Miss Pankhurst later announced her intention to address a meeting at the Poplar town hall to-night.

To Interrupt Royal Wedding.

LONDON, Oct. 14.—"Every effort will be made to call attention of the notables at the royal wedding on Wednesday, to tortures which the women of England has suffered for the enfranchisement of their sex."

In these words the militant suffragettes at a meeting last night promised to take advantage of the wedding of Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duchess of Fife "for the good of the cause."

Miss Annie Kenney, one of the noted leaders of the militants, who has been on hunger strike since her arrest on Oct. 6, was released last night after threats bad been made at a meeting of the militants in the afternoon that if she was not freed the militants would bombard the Home Office and camp on the Rt Hon. Reginald McKenna's front steps until they could find some way of getting at him.

PASSENGER CARS MUST GO TO THE SCRAP HEAP

Better Passenger Service Must be Given on the Belleville Line

TORONTO, Oct. 14.—A deputation headed by Mr. Sam Sharpe, M.P., from Uxbridge, Markham, Campbellford, Hastings, Stirling, and other points on the Midland division of the Grand Trunk Railway, scored a point over the company at yesterday's session of the Dominion Railway Board in the City Hall.

Mr. Sharpe declared that abominable conditions characterized this section of the G.T.R. system. The roadbed was dangerous, the railway coaches antiquated, there was discrimination of freight rates, late delivery of freight, and a poor railway service. The people objected to the coaches on the ground that they were "cast-offs," which would not be tolerated on other points of the road.

Chairman Drayton ordered the company to relegate the coaches to the scrap heap, and instructed Engineer Mountain of the board to gather information respecting the other complaint of the deputation.

Johnson's Bail Estreated.

CHICAGO, Oct. 14.—Forfeiture of Jack Johnson's personal bond of $30,000 was ordered by Judge Carpenter yesterday, effective next April if the negro prize fighter, who is reported to have taken out citizenship papers in France, does not appear for trial under the Mann white slave act, which he is accused of having violated.

Prominent Citizen Dead.

BRANTFORD, Oct. 14.—The death took place early yesterday morning of one of Brantford's most respected citizens, in the person of W. N. Hossie, brusar at the Ontario School for the Blind. Mr. Hossie, who was 82 years of age, was born in Sterlingshire, Scotland, in 1821, and came to Brantford in 1873. During his residence here he took a particular interest in church and Sunday school work and at one time occupied the position of president for the Brant Sunday School Association, in addition to being a prominent member of the provincial association. Three daughters and a son survive.

Duty on Print Paper.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Oct. 14.—Customs officers throughout the country were notified yesterday by the Treasury Department to collect countervailing duties on all printing paper valued above 2 1-2 cents a pound imported into the United States. Since the passage of the old Canadian reciprocity act print paper from Canada when valued under 4 cents a pound has been admitted free of duty. The 2 1-2 cents value is now under the new law. Yesterday's order will result in the assessment of 12 per cent. plus the countervailing duty imposed by the country of origin of the paper above 2 1-2 cents a pound.

VOLTURNO'S SURVIVORS OWE LIVES TO TANK SHIP

Further Details of Mid-Ocean Tragedy Show That the Vessels Round About Had Given Up Rescue Work in Despair Until the Oil Steamer Narragansett Was Called.

FISHGUARD, Oct. 14.— Arthur Spurgeon, who Monday sent Trintepohl's graphic story by wireless and described the rescue work around the burning vessel, supplemented his despatches with additional details yesterday.

"The story of what took place on board the Volturno before the arrival of the Carmania," he said, "probably will not be known until Capt. Inch makes his official report. Some say the boats were launched in an orderly manner; others declare that a panic took place, resulting in the taking over of the boats by the fear-crazed crew after the fire got out of control. It seems to be agreed that there were 120 souls in these boats, all of whom were killed or drowned. The Carmania passengers were told that not more than one-third of those in the boats were women and children.

"The night aboard the Carmania was one never to be forgotten. No one got more than snatches of sleep. Some prayed for the souls in peril. All were racked with heartbreaking anxiety. Our utter helplessness was appalling. The finest fleet of liners that ever gathered in one spot in the Atlantic were practically impotent, even with their splendid equipment, to render aid on account of the great waves.

"At daybreak the gale moderated, and then a miracle occurred. It resulted in the salvation of the Volturno's crew and passengers. When Capt. Barr sent out a call for a tank steamer there came back a reply from the Narragansett: 'We will be there with the milk' (the sea name for oil).

"On the arrival of the tank, huge quantities were pumped around the Volturna, making it safe for the life boats to approach. It was a stirring spectacle when the great liners put off their boats, which danced over the shimmering, oil filmmed waters to the work of rescue. And soon the Volturno was left a derelict."

T. T. Watson of Philadelphia, another of the passengers on the Carmania, said that the chief credit for saving those on the Volturno was undoubtedly due to the oil ship Narragansett. "Only a few good swimmers," he declared, "would have survived from the ill-fated ship had not the Narragansett made free use of oil to calm the terrible waves.

"When the Carmania arrived, Capt. Barr recognized at once that it would be almost a hopeless task to attempt to save the Volturno's human cargo without the use of oil, but with a daring amounting seemingly to foolbardiness, he instructed First Officer Gardiner to lower a small boat. This after terrible buffeting regained the Carmania with only three oars intact. After this miraculous escape Capt. Barr did not again attempt to launch a single boat. Hence, our ship saved only one passenger, who swam to her.

"Shortly after we arrived the Carmania tried both fore and aft oil sprays, but without effect on the mountainous waves. Then the captain sent out wireless calls in all directions for an oil ship, and his efforts were rewarded by an answer from the Narragansett. The Grosse Kurfurst and other liners got in as close as possible and lowered lifeboats. They took aboard several persons who had jumped from the Volturno, and the work was greatly facilitated by the steam pinnace of the Grosser Kurfurst, which had stayed out all night. At once the Narragansett began to spray oil about the doomed ship, and the waves subsided as by magic. Soon the small boats were enabled to run alongside the liner and take the clinging people from the ladders. The rescue work was over in a very short time. Eleven liners formed the boundary around the film of oil, and the survivors were hoisted aboard the various steamers without trouble."

La Touraine Has Forty-Two.

HAVRE, Oct. 14.—A wireless despatch from La Touraine, which is expected to reach here at eight o'clock this morning, was received yesterday by the agent of the French Transatlantic Line, saying that ten children, several without parents, two women and three of the crew are among the forty-two survivors of the Volturno on board.

Those saved by La Touraine were composed of 16 Austrians, 12 Russians, seven Germans, two Italians, two Dutch, one Bulgarian, one Roumanian and one of unknown nationality.

BABE IS BURNED

Four Other Children Escaped From House

ST. THOMAS, Oct. 14.—During the absence of the parents, who were both away from home working yesterday morning, Charlie, the two-year-old son of Albert Agar was burned to death in the house, which was completely destroyed by fire.

Five children, ages ranging from a five-months' infant, were left in charge of the eldest, a boy of 12. When he discovered fire in a storeroom by the crying of one of the children, he got all the children outside to safety with the exception of Charlie, whom he could not find in the dense smoke. Neighbors arriving early on the scene also made heroic efforts to find the child, but the fierce flames drove them back. The little charred body was later found in the smouldering debris.

The family came from England to St. Thomas five years ago, and yesterday lost everything they had gathered together since their arrival.

HIGHWAY COMMISSION TO CONFER ON ROADS

Representatives From Petboro to be Heard at Belleville

TORONTO, Oct. 14.—The Provincial Highways Commission is about to embark upon a series of meetings throughout Ontario in an effort to sense the pulse of the good roads movement, and to learn the individual demands of different localities. Six cities have been settled upon as the convention centres of older Ontario, and here it is the desire that the surrounding counties will assemble their delegaes for instruction in the proposed program. It is possible that the commission will in this way gain the necessary material to permit of the House taking action when the Legislature re-opens in the spring.

The motive of all sessions will be educational, and they will be held both morning and afternoon and in the evening if necessary.

Ottawa Oct. 28, representatives from the municipalities in the Counties of Carleton, Prescott and Russell, Dundas, Stormont and Glengarry, Lanark, Leeds, Grenvile and Renfrew will be heard.

Belleville, Nov. 4, representatives from municipalities in the Counties of Frontenac, Lennox and Addington, Hastings, Durham and Northumberland, Prince Edward, and Peterboro.

FIRE RANGERS DROWN.

Two Men Are Victims of Rapids In Nepigon Country.

TORONTO, Oct. 14.—The waters of the Nipegon River, in northern Ontario, claimed the lives of two members of the provincial fire ranging force on Saturday afternoon last, details of the tragedy reaching the Department of Lands and Mines yesterday. Walter Scott Burns, a young man from Toronto, and Deputy Chief I. D. Copley were the victims, and although strenuous efforts have been exercised the bodies have not yet been recovered. A large staff of men is now employed under the direction of Chief Bliss, dragging the river.

WALTER S. BURNS.

According to the tale received at the Department, the tragedy occurred while a party of rangers who had completed some telephone work up the river were en route to camp. Their canoe upset in the rapids and Copley and Burns instead of clinging to the craft tried to swim ashore.

PARLEZ VOUS FRANCAIS ?

That the result of the Chateauguay bye-election came as a surprise to Liberals all over the country is to mildly state the facts. So concerned by this sad turn of events is the Globe that it is seriously asking itself questions and wondering if after all Sir Wilfrid represents anyone but himself. The Globe commenting on the result asks:

> "Did the election in Chateauguay turn upon public issues? Does the result in this Quebec constituency, in which almost three-fourths of the electors are French-Canadians, indicate approval of Mr. Borden's policies, and especially his policy respecting naval defence? Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Mr. Fisher, the Liberal candidate, an able and experienced Parliamentarian at home on the platform in French, Mr. Lemieux, and Hon. Geo. P. Graham, speaking authoritatively for the Liberal party, placed frankly and fully before the electors their platform regarding naval defence. They stated that Liberals stand firmly by the policy to which both parties gave adhesion in 1909 by a unanimous vote in Parliament—the defence of Canada's coasts and commerce by Canadian vessels manned by Canadians and under the control of the Parliament and people of Canada."

This is practically an admission that the Liberal party had a fair field and that the people voted on a clear issue.

> "Sir Wilfrid realized that this bye-election meant much for him; and he therefore threw himself into the contest with fiery energy. It was remarked that his old amiable manner was laid aside, and that he spoke with unwonted bitterness of opponents. But that could be forgiven. Hard words break no bones. What cannot be passed over as the utterances of party heat are his wicked appeals to race and religion. All the skill, all the art this past master in that most mischievous business has acquired in his long political career he employed as dexterously as he knew how in Chateauguay. We hope that the failure of that mode of appeal may have an influence to correct his bad habit in this particular. We hope also the result of the election will show him that his naval policy is as bad politics as it is bad patriotism."

If Sir Wilfrid and his followers will take the lesson to heart and recongise that they have, at least, made a mistake on the naval question as they did in their reciprocity proposals, something profitable might come of the combining of forces in bringing about a settlement of these party differences on on vital questions.

The hope of Sir Wilfrid lay in the French vote, these surely would not desert him. The Dominion had spoken its convictions in plain English; it has now spoken in the French tongue, and with more emphasis than politeness.

ROGERS THE OMNIPOTENT

According to certain of the Liberal press a man named Rogers is fooling the whole country. What a wonderful man this Rogers must be!

What a lot of fools these Liberals must be in Chateauguay to allow themselves to be drugged and bribed into voting for the Borden Government!

All these years of Liberal education have gone for nothing. After such an upbringing to turn out a lot of drunken sots and corrupt dupes of a man named Rogers!

Who is Rogers? Why, he is the man upon whom the Liberal press lay the blame for all their defeats.

But what of when the Liberals win? O that is, of course, a vindication of Sir Wilfrid, a tribute to a great and picturesque personality. Furthermore it is a display of Liberal sagacity.

But why don't the Liberal Party get one of these Rogerses? The Liberal Party, my friend, is far above—in fact, what the Liberal Party want is "not office," but Power."

Then why don't the Liberal party get power? Because Mr. Rogers has it all.

THE ORIENTAL QUESTION

It is reported that Japan has asked for a new treaty with the United States Government to the effect that Japanese shall possess equal rights with any other aliens in the United States. This would enable Japanese to purchase land anywhere in the States, while at the same time no citizen of the United States would be permitted to purchase land in Japan.

This raises the question of the compatibility of the Oriental and the European races. Kipling says:

"East is east and west is west
And never the twain shall meet"

The Christian attitude toward life is essentially one of Brotherhood to all men. But these theories do not often work out in practice, and the most voluble preacher who calls the Chinaman his brother would not permit the celestial to come into his social circle any furthr than to starch and iron his collar.

The Oriental question as it affects Canada is becoming a very serious one, especially in the west and British Columbia in particular. The tendency is for each race to form a colony of its own, and the Oriental becomes a sort of Helot. Even the Italian, who is a semi-Oriental, does not mix with other Europeans and seldom takes any part in the life of the community, more than to make our roads or clean our sewers.

It may be, of course, that in years to come a process of assimilation will have more or less merged the different races of Canada, but there is little sign of that to-day for Kipling's diction holds good even in Peterboro

"East is east, and west is west,
And never the twain do meet."

EDITORIAL NOTES

Mrs Pankhurst has sailed from France to America. The French people might say: "What is our loss is your gain." If there is one thing that will secure Mrs. Pankhurst a free passage into the States it will be the desire for an interview with her.

"We always thought Chateauguay rhymed so well with Laurier," sighed the Globe after hearing of the result on Saturday. It is living in the hope that this is an alternate rhymed stanza.

The Globe complains of someone accusing Sir Wilfrid Laurier with being a protectionist. "They do not appreciate the gravity of the charge," says the Globe. In the sense of protecting Canadian Industries Sir Wilfrid is certainly no protectionist. He is a free-trader in the sense of giving trade away free gratis and for nothing.

A youth in New Jersey is said to have sold the family cow in order to get enough money to pay his way into the world's championship baseball games. Milk is a mild sort of diet compared with an exhilirating draught of baseball. But one wonders who thought he had the most for his money next day, the man who bought the cow or the youth who bought the baseball match!

> "The liftiest drames and works of literature are visualised upon the film. The moving picture illustrating symphonies and other orchestral music. The existence of clubs in which the world's news will pass before one's eyes as in a newspaper. The use of the moving picture in all schools."

The latest development of the pictures, it is said, is the elimination of the screen to have upon the stage at one time real persons and moving picture people.

THE CHURCH AND MARRIAGE

The evening sessions of the Church Congress at Southampton were given up to the discussion of marriage in its various aspects, upon which a series of important and useful papers were read.

The Bishop of Lewes, discussing the Christian ideal, described the ideal Christian marriage as the union of one man and one woman, a union which was permanent and lifelong. The object of the ideal Christian married home was the cultivation of a noble and pure fellowship between two souls working together with God in the fashioning of their lives. Marriage was a holy vocation, as pure and chaste as celibacy or virginity. The religious and sacramental basis so clearly laid down as the foundation of a Christian marriage raised an ideal for the practical life of Christian married people which has had tremendous and far-reaching effects wherever its doctrines have penetrated. It has given a consecration to married life, and made it for thinking Christians a solemn vocation like ordination for the ministry. They know that God gives grace to those who faithfully marry in the Lord, and He gives the grace of orders to His ministers. They know that marriage is holy ground; that they are called to be fellow-workers with God; if He so grants it, instruments of creation, destined to carry out his purpose for the race. No Christian lightly enters upon such a vocation. Meditation, prayer, communion, these are the entrance gates through which the Christians pass to their great act of lifelong choice.

The Rev. T. A. Lacy, dealing with the Church's law, said the Church had its proper marriage law. But it had much more than a conventional code of manners. It was the Guardian of the Divine oracles. The State also had its own proper marriage law. There was a vague notion that Church and State are still but two aspects of a single society within which marriage is controlled no longer by the clerical order, but by Parliament and the King's Courts. Those who think thus must be made to see that their doctrine is a corrupt following of a mediaeval corruption. Facts must be faced. Church and State are distinct societies and each must have its own marriage law. There may be awkward clashing, and we must put up with it. Many persons are simultaneously members of both societies, which therefore cannot merely stand apart. But the aims of the two societies and their methods are different; neither should intrude on the functions of the other. It is difficult, but it does not pass the wit of man to make a delimination.

Moslem Prayer Rugs.

Prayer rugs were evidently invented for the purpose of providing the worshipers with one absolutely clean place on which to offer prayers. It is not lawful of a Moslem to pray on any place not perfectly clean, and unless each one has his own special rug he is not certain that the spot has not been polluted. It does not matter to these followers of Mohammed how unclean a rug that is on the floor may be, because over it they place the prayer rug when their devotions begin.

MONEY LENT FREE.

Funds For Helping Tradesmen Clergymen and Students.

It is generally supposed that money-lenders are a rapacious and usurious lot. Some, of course, are but many are not, and there are a few cases where men can even borrow money free from all interest and charges.

A total sum of $26,000 is available this year for loans in Leicester, Eng., to people under thirty-five years of age who fulfil certain specified conditions. They must be "of good name, good fame, and good condition," whatever is exactly signified by that clause; also they must not be "tipplers"! This large amount, available for Leicester residents to borrow, comes from three old charities bequeathed to the Midland town, and the money is lent for nine years in sums of $125, $150 or $500. It is both interesting and surprising to learn that for the past forty years there has never been any borrower who failed to repay the loan fully and punctually.

The City of London also possesses similar bequests of money which it can lend to tradesmen within the famous square mile, in sums of $50 to $250, as agreed. This money comes, too, from old bequests left to certain City companies, of which the Skinners' is one, for this express purpose, and it has many a time and oft served to keep an ambitious and hardworking but temporarily hard-up tradesman from having to shut up his shop, owing to lack of capital at a critical moment. The times when these loans become open for tradesmen, and their amounts, are duly advertised in the chief newspapers.

Of similar nature, though for use in a rather different way, are many large sums of money held in trust by colleges and schools.

One or two well-known societies for helping candidates who wish to be ordained as clergymen in the Church of England have also money in hand which they lend without interest in similar fashion, to men requiring it for the purposes of study, maintenance, or for livelihood immediately after ordination. Indeed, it is surprising to those in the know about such things how many candidates for the ministry are thus financed. And the Church gains greatly thereby, for many an excellent young fellow would be precluded from entering its ministry, owing to lack of means when in college, were it not for the trust money thus available, from which he can borrow without interest.

One Cambridge college is quite famous for the extreme generosity of its chief Don in the matter of lending money free to men who have distinguished themselves at the university and need such useful and valuable assistance at, perhaps, the most crucial periods of their lives. This money comes from the Don's own private purse, and is neither a trust nor a right. It is simply a grand and splendid effort (wondrously appreciated by those who have profited from it, as so many have!) to assist the men of that college to high place and work in the world.

WHAT PAULINE LEARNED

She Was an Apt Pupil

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Waving aside an obsequious attendant Pauline Fenn passed between rows of glass inclosed desks to her father's private office. She tapped before opening the heavy door and found him sitting in grave meditation before a wood fire on the hearth.

He turned his head as his youngest daughter entered and sat down in the opposite chair.

"I've done it at last, father," she said, rather breathlessly.

"Done what?" he asked in a startled tone.

"Broken my engagement to Roger."

"My dear!" He jumped up and paced the floor thoughtfully, now and then his keen eyes searching her young face. "Are you wise?"

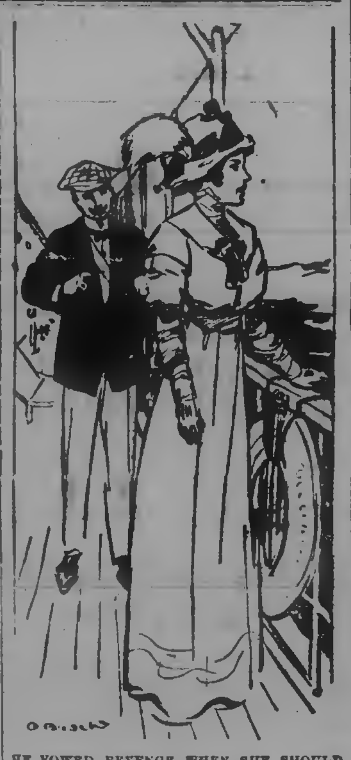
"It is best."

"I thought you were fond of Roger—loved him, in fact."

"I—I did." She was speaking nervously now. "But, you know he is in no position to marry now; the doctor has ordered him to go west and live in the open for five years, otherwise he predicts a total nervous breakdown. I had a note from him this morning. He has sold his seat on the exchange and is going to buy a ranch in Montana. He wanted me to marry him at once and go with him."

"And you have seen him?"

"I went to his office. I told him what you said—that if he must give up business, why, you would back him with money to any extent and when we were married we could live in the same style to which I am accustomed. I could go with the same people and enjoy the same amusements of my set. I simply couldn't give up all those things and sort of grub along, now, could I, father?"



HE VOWED REVENGE WHEN SHE SHOULD BECOME HIS COUNTESS.

He frowned thoughtfully.

"I thought you could, Polly, but it seems I am mistaken. Roger Dale went into Wall street when he was nineteen. For fifteen years he has worked like a steam engine, but the engine has been overworked; it is a fine piece of mechanism, and if it continues to work without rest and repair, why, it will go snap some day and one of the cleanest and squarest men I know will spend the remainder of his days in the madhouse."

"Father!"

"Ah! That is the plain truth. I had Roger here yesterday and offered to do anything for him that money and friendship can do; he was engaged to my daughter and I wanted to help him for that reason, as well as because I admire his pluck. He refused point blank to accept any help. Said the sale of his exchange seat would set him up on a paying sheep ranch in the west, and he also declared that he had an old fashioned notion that he wanted to provide a home for his wife with his own hands."

"But mother would be broken hearted if I married Roger now and went on to a ranch. It is a primitive life at the best, and I would be shut out of the society of my friends, and the other girls would be so mortified. They have married so well, you know. Mother never did approve of my engagement to Roger," she explained hurriedly.

"No, she did not approve of it," he returned coldly. "Your mother and I began life humbly; your mother worked in a millinery store and never had a pair of kid gloves until she was married. Now she has married three of her daughters to penniless but titled foreigners, and the fourth she withholds from an honest American. I should think two countesses and a princess quite enough glory for one plain American family to acquire and quite all I can afford," he added grimly.

"I thought you'd be rather glad," said Pauline uneasily as she arose to go. "Under the circumstances, I wonder if you care if I go abroad with Helen."

"Just as you please, Polly," he said sadly. "All I live for is to make you happy."

When he was alone John Fenn drew his chair to the hearth and gazed long into the fire of apple tree wood. A close observer might have noticed that something very like tears glittered in his fine blue eyes.

* * * * * * *

Six months afterward Pauline Fenn stood on the steamer at Southampton and watched the passengers coming aboard for the homeward voyage. Her lovely face was a trifle thinner and there was an air of restlessness about her that disconcerted the dark little monkey-like man who stood at her elbow, chattering.

"Mademoiselle, ah, yes, tees a gay scene—like Cherbourg—but England ees what you call tame, dead!"

"Do you think so, count?" murmured Pauline indifferently.

"Ha! There is no country like France, no city like Paris!"

"You have never seen America or New York," said Pauline over her shoulder.

"I go the happiest of men now to interview mademoiselle's papa," grinned the count delightedly, for it was quite true that Pauline's sister, the Countess de Laon, had arranged a match between her beautiful sister and a money hunting little patrician, Count Servan Lagres. Helen was accompanying her sister to New York, and Lagres had taken passage on the same steamer.

She tried not to regret the step she had taken in breaking her engagement, but every hour of her stay abroad had been spent to the accompaniment of burning remorse and useless regret. She had not given her promise to Lagres. She had not even encouraged him, but Helen was pushing the affair in her high handed way, and Pauline was meekly being led. She blushed when she thought of what her father would say when he saw this fourth foreigner presented as a possible son in-law.

"Mademoiselle is weary. Come and sit down and I will send a cup of tea," twittered the count at her elbow.

"Please go away!" cried Pauline crossly.

Pauline moved slowly along the rail until she could look down upon a little group of second cabin passengers.

Two were separated from the others, a pale, anaemic looking man and a little pink and white roly poly woman. The woman was speaking despairingly.

"George, I don't know 'ow it 'appened; I 'ad the purse sewed tight in my skirt and now it's gone, every shillin' that I've scraped and saved for this goin'!" Her voice broke suddenly and the man's thin hand gripped her shoulder.

One day during the voyage Pauline found them out and heard their story. It was a simple one. They had been engaged for many years. George Marston was butler and Sally was upper housemaid in the same noble family. George's health had deserted him, and a brother in Canada had offered him land on which to build a home and plenty of work if he would come to the northwest.

When Pauline left them they were riotously happy. Her generous pocketbook had replaced the contents of Sally's wallet, and they were to repay her when they could. They were independent.

The remainder of the voyage Pauline went about with shining eyes. Helen could not understand the new mood, and the count broke through his conventionality and proposed outright and was refused.

He proposed again and was refused, and yet again with kindly but monotonous regularity. When they reached quarantine he borrowed funds from Helen and morosely decided to take the next boat home without that important interview with John Fenn.

* * * * * * *

Roger Gale stood on the veranda of his ranch house and looked away over the slopes where his sheep were crowded, huddled flocks of dusty gray against the green grass. From the flocks and the rippling hills his eyes turned to the winding trail that led from town.

A light buckboard was approaching the ranch, and he saw that while the outfit was his own and one of his men was driving there were two passengers in the rear seat. One was a citified looking man; the other was a girl dressed in blue. Now, Roger Dale was not in the habit of receiving girl visitors, and his interest was quickened at the sight of the newcomers. He stepped into the house to make anxious inquiries of the Chinese cook.

When he passed through his sitting room to the front porch Pauline Fenn was standing there looking at him with wet, wistful eyes.

"Polly!" he cried, with unbelieving eyes.

She nodded. "Roger, I have come. Father came with me. I cannot be happy without you. I want to be a rancher's wife"— She never finished her confession, for Roger's arms were around her and his bronzed cheek was against hers.

"You are sure, sure you won't regret it, love?" he asked over and over again.

And Pauline clung closer to him and whispered softly what George and Sally had awakened in her heart.

"I won't regret anything so long as we are together," she said.

GREATEST HEADACHE CURE IN THE WORLD

SHANLEY, ONT., SEPT. 23 rd. 1910

"You certainly have the greatest Headache Cure in the world. Before "Fruit-a-tives" came before the public, I suffered tortures from Headaches caused by Stomach Disorders.

One of your travellers called on me when I had one of my raging Headaches and had my head almost raw from external applications. He insisted on my trying "Fruit-a-tives".

I did so with what I would call amazing results. They completely cured me and since then (nearly six years ago) it is only necessary for me to take one occasionally to preserve me in my present good health."

A Mutual Admiration Society

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Mrs. Middleton-Tranby is a sort of Mrs. Leo Hunter, in whom Dickens satirized a woman ambitious to shine as a literary star and to entertain literary stars, though Mrs. Middleton-Tranby was not the caricature Mrs. Leo Hunter was and lived in the twentieth instead of the nineteenth century.

Among the literary salons given by Mrs. Tranby (the whole name is too long for repetition) was one where a professor of German literature in a prominent university was to address the company. The professor, who was as unpretentious as his name, which was Brown, did not know when he accepted the invitation that he was to speak to a mutual admiration society. His address was to be in the afternoon, and half an hour before he was to appear on the rostrum he stepped into a trolley car which would carry him direct to the residence of Mrs. Tranby. He seated himself, took a newspaper from his pocket and began to read.

Presently two ladies entered the car, sat down opposite the professor and began to chat. There were various noises connected with the journey, such as the conductor's bell ringing and vehicles rattling over the stones without, and the ladies found it difficult to modulate their voices.

"Have you read Mrs. Middleton-Tranby's latest poem in the —— Magazine?" asked one lady, who wore something like a muff for a hat on her head.

"Yes. Isn't it lovely?"

"Beautiful! But it doesn't compare with your 'My Rover.'"

"Don't you think so? It's awfully good of you to say so."

"I love dogs, and the close of your poem, when your dog looks up at you so expressively before he dies, is just too lovely for anything."

"Thank you ever so much. Have you been writing anything?"

"Nothing in verse. I have a story I'm going to read at the next meeting of our literary society. I've spent a lot of time over it, which I fear may have been wasted. When I write a poem I dash it right off without thinking, and it's better than when I take pains."

"That's genius. I wish we were going to listen to your story this afternoon at Mrs. Middleton-Tranby's instead of having to listen to that professor. I think our meetings when we read our own papers are so much more interesting."

"So do I. I don't care for German literature. There is so much philosophy mixed up in it."

"Mrs. Engleheart's paper on Goethe, read at our last meeting, was very good."

"Good! It was delightful! But then we are all so familiar with the opera of 'Faust' that Goethe has a special charm for us."

"What's the name of the professor who is to lecture this afternoon?"

"Brown, I believe."

"Brown! He isn't the Professor Brown whose loose ideas on marriage have excited so much comment? I believe the trustees of his university asked him to resign—Cuthbert Brown, professor of something or other, I don't remember."

"I think that's the man who is to speak this afternoon, but I'm not sure."

"If it is I shall not remain for the lecture."

"You'd better be careful. You know Mrs. Middleton-Tranby has her fourth husband, all the other three still living."

"I didn't think of that. Ever so much obliged to you for mentioning it. Of course it wouldn't do to offend a hostess. Besides, I rather like to hear what horrid theories people will promulgate."

"I can stand a bit of spice myself. If this man Brown doesn't advocate positive free love I rather think I shall hear him out. But, since he is to speak on German literature, perhaps he won't mention his peculiar ideas."

"Possibly not, but so long as he holds them and we have to listen to him it would be disappointing to have him stick to his dull subject."

By this time the car had reached a cross street leading to Mrs. Middleton-Tranby's residence, and the ladies alighted. They were followed by Professor Brown—Charles, not Cuthbert, Brown and a husband and father of six children—who tagged behind them, so that when they entered the Tranby residence they did so without having noticed that he had followed them.

"Let's go right into the lecture room," said one, "and get seats where we can hear. I'm a little deaf."

They took seats in the front row, and when the room had been filled behind them the lecturer, with Mrs. Middleton-Tranby, passed down an aisle, and they mounted the platform together.

"It is the man who sat opposite us in the car."

"We must go."

"How can we? It's impossible. We have got to stay it out."

The lecturer, having been introduced by the hostess, cast one meaning glance down at the ladies directly beneath him, then delivered his lecture. It was considered rather dry by his audience. It contained no reference whatever to marriage, experimental marriage or any of the substitutes which theorists are suggesting for the good old days of domestic love and large families.

Drydock a Dutch Invention.

A correspondent in Holland draws our attention to the fact that the construction in that country of a floating dock of 14,000 tons for Soerabaya harbor, in the Dutch Indies, should remind us that the floating drydock is a Dutch invention, and that many floating docks of this type are built on Dutch ways and towed to their destination. Drydock towing is a specialty and many foreign built boats are towed to their destination by Dutch tugs.—Scientific American.

Grandma.

Grandma used to be an old lady who would throw a shawl over her shoulders and sit in a rocker and knit stockings all day. But nowadays she puts on a nickel's worth of prepared chalk, a straight front and a tight hobble and follows the crowd.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Impertinent.

Speaking of a man noted for his impertinence, an acquaintance said:

"Blank's impudence was second only to that of a waiter I heard about the other day.

"'Look here, waiter,' said a guest, 'this fish is not cooked properly.'

"'I know it, sir,' said the waiter, 'but you told me it was for your wife.'

"'Well, what of that?' asked the surprised guest.

"'Why,' said the waiter, 'I knew that if the lady was your wife she couldn't be very particular'."

HELIODOR, THE NEW GEM.

Experts Say It Ranks With the Ruby and the Emerald.

A new gem, given the name of "heliodor," and found in German South Africa, has taken its place among the jewels. The German kaiser recently gave one of the stones to the kaiserin.

The discovery of the new stone was made by the governor and director of the German colonial society while he was traveling in German South Africa. In the sand near the railway between Swakopmund and Windhuk he found a large crystal, rough and unpromising in appearance. He carried it with him to Germany and had it cut and polished in a diamond cutting factory. The result was a surprising clear, pale aquamarine of great brilliance.

The German colonial office immediately took possession of the ground upon which the crystal was found, and a great number of the crystals are now making their appearance upon the German market. Experts agree that the new gem is entitled to rank with the ruby or emerald.—Popular Mechanic Magazine.

Chicago's Funeral Motorbuses.

The high cost of dying is to be lowered in Chicago with the advent of motorbuses, each large enough to contain the coffin and a funeral party of ordinary size. The funeral bus will have a compartment to the right of the chauffeur's seat for the coffin and above it a place for flowers. Near the driver will sit the minister and the undertaker, and there will be accommodations for twenty-seven mourners. One of the principal items in the cost of funerals is transportation. The funeral bus, it is said, will reduce the cost by $30. Ten of the buses are to be in operation soon.

Dublin Ahead of the Times.

They are a little ahead of the times in Dublin. You may buy there colored postcards bearing pictures of King George and Queen Mary opening the new Irish parliament. One card shows them driving up in a carriage with postilions to the steps of the parliament building, at the entrance to which flies a flag bearing the words, "Welcome to Erin!" The interior view represents the king and queen on the dais, with most of the members of the house looking in the other direction while the gallery is packed with women.—New York Sun.

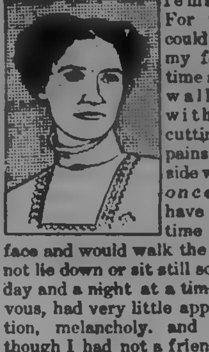
MELANCHOLY WOMEN

Should Profit by Mrs. Hurley's Experience—Her Own Story Here Told.

Eldon, Mo.—"I was troubled with displacement, organic inflammation and female weakness. For two years I could not stand on my feet long at a time and I could not walk two blocks without enduring cutting and drawing pains down my right side which increased once a month. I have been at that time purple in the face and would walk the floor. I could not lie down or sit still sometimes for a day and a night at a time. I was nervous, had very little appetite, no ambition, melancholy, and often felt as though I had not a friend in the world.



"After I had tried most every female remedy first, without success, my mother-in-law advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and gained in strength every day. I have now no trouble in any way and highly praise your medicine. It advertises itself."—Mrs. S. T. HURLEY, Eldon, Missouri.

Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For sale everywhere.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means have failed. Why don't you try it?

ST. JOHN'S

Men's Association for Promotion of Interest in Church Work

A meeting was called at the Rectory of St. John's Church last night, by the Rev. Canon Davidson, with the object of establishing an association of the men of the Church for the promotion of general interest in church work. The following officers were elected:

President—Mr. G. L. Cameron.
Vice-Pres.—Mr. W. E. Conway.
2nd Vice Pres.—Mr. F. Ebbs.
Treasurer—Mr. C. G. Graham.
Secretary—Mr. W. C. Ackerman.
Chaplain—Rev. Canon Davidson.

These officers in conjunction with Dr. Holloway, Mr. C. P. Fee, Mr. F. Roy and Mr. Frank Linton were elected as an executive committee. It was decided that a meeting of the executive would be held on Tuesday, Oct. 21st, to arrange for the detail of the work of the association.

LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN

Public Meeting at Public Library Wednesday Oct. 22

The Local Council of Women will hold a public meeting in the Assembly Hall of the Public Library building, on Wednesday, Oct. 22nd, at 3.30 p.m. A large attendance of representatives and members is desired as matters of importance are to be discussed. Mr. Spence, Sanitary Inspector, will address the meeting. Any society of women in the city which desires affiliation with the Local Council may elect representatives before that date.

HIGH COURT SITTINGS ARE NOW IN PROGRESS

Mr. Justice Middleton Presides—Grand Jury Return True Bill

The Fall Assizes opened this afternoon at the Court House at 1.30 with Justice Middleton presiding.

The Grand Jury is as follows:—
Wm. Collins, Foreman.
J. W. Bennett.
W. Coulthard
S. Corlye.
T. Hooper
A. G. Carruthers
A. Cunningham
B. Desautel.
E. Woodburn
W. Milburn
W. Oliver
J. Walker

The petty jury is:—
A. Buchanan
D. Coughlin
S. Adlam
E. Fitzpatrick
E. Roseborough
J. Cower
Jas. Girven
John McCauley
John Devlin
Oliver Beebee
W. Humphries
H. Weir.

The Grand Jury brought in a true bill in the King vs. Parcels case, in which the defendant is charged with committing rape.

The first case was that of B. Johnston versus Sidney Armstrong, in which the plaintiff claims damages to the amount of three thousand dollars and costs of action from defendant, who it is alleged, wrongfully seduced plaintiff's daughter, Lilac Mabel Johnston. It is further alleged that in consequence, the girl in question gave birth to a child on the fourth of January, 1912, and that the plaintiff has been put to considerable expense for medical services and nursing.

The parties to the action are farmers and reside in the Township of North Monaghan. Peck, Kerr and McElderry are acting for the plaintiffs, and Ruddy and Burnham for the defendant.

BREACH OF PROMISE

Ellen E. Smart through her next friend Alfred B. Owen, is suing Charles E. Jarrett for $1,000 damages and costs for breach of promise. The plaintiff was during part of the years 1912-13 employed as a domestic on the farm of one Sanderson in the Township of Cavan. It is also stated that defendant who was also employed with Sanderson during the course of such employment agreed to marry the plaintiff. This, it is said, he later refused to do.

R. E. Wood is appearing for the plaintiff.

No appearance has been entered to the writ of summons, therefore interlocutory judgment has been duly entered, with damages to be assessed.

CORDOVA MINES

The Northern Electric Company of Toronto has entered action against the Cordova Mines, Limited, to obtain judgment against defendants for the sum of $802.53, and to have a mortgage set aside that was made by the defendants, Cordova Mines, Limited, to the defendants, W. G. Mackenzie, a physician residing in Marmora, and William Hughes, a lumber dealer, for the sum of $60,000. The defendants named in the action are Cordova Mines, Limited, Peter Kirkequard, William Hughes and W. G. MacKenzie. It is alleged that the said mortgage is illegal and is a fraud as against the plaintiffs and other creditors of the defendants. The action also calls for an order and judgment requiring the defendants, W. G. Mackenzie and William Hughes to account for and repay all moneys received by them under said mortgage.

The defendants in their statement of defence admit the legality of the amount claimed and owing by the Corova Mines Company to the plaintiff. They deny that the defendant company is insolvent, although it has not the funds in hand to pay its debts in full. The defendants allege that the property and assets of the company are quite sufficient to meet all liabilities and would have done so had not the operation of the company been suspended by reason of litigation in connection with the mortgage given by the company.

Johnston, McKay, Dodds and Grant of Toronto, are acting for the company, and Kerr, Bull, Shaw and Montgomery for defendants.

ALIMONY CASE

Mary Kearns has entered suit for alimony from her husband, Frank Kearns, a mail carrier residing in Peterborough. The plaintiff who was married to the defendant on the 15th dya of November, 1910, claims that defendant abused her and threatened to kill her and compelled her to escape on several occasions from him by going to the neighbors.

The plaintiff claims alimony from the defendant, and also interim alimony sufficient under the circumstances. The plaintiff also claims a declaration and judgment that the defendant is a trustee and holds for the benefit of the plaintiff, a house and lot in Peterborough, as prescribed in the claim. The defendants deny the allegations.

G. N. Gordon is appearing for the plaintiff and Stewart and O'Connro of Lindsay will appear for the defendants.

NO ABATEMENT OF THE NUISANCE AT GAS WORKS

Company Will Again be Asked to Put a Stop to the Smoke Nuisance

Once again the Peterborough Light and Power Co. will be asked to supply a remedy for the complaints of people residing in the vicinity of the gas works.

It is claimed by the Sanitary Inspector the Company gave assurance that when improvements were completed the nuisances complained of would be done away with. Now the improvements have been made and the residents continue to suffer.

"They are just as bad as ever," said the Inspector, in speaking of conditions before the Board of Health this morning. He said one lady had her washing ruined, and life generally was misery. One man had been driven away on account of his health suffering.

Dr. McPherson pointed out that the smoke nuisance was in evidence at the Y.M.C.A., Collegiate Institute and the Court House, where soft coal is burned. Complaints had been made.

"If you get after one, you will have to get after all of them," he said.

THE COMING LOCAL OPTION CAMPAIGN IN ONTARIO

The office of the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance is a busy place at the present time. The fall and winter Field Day Campaign has begun. The Alliance is supplying speakers for an average of one hundred Sunday services at which the movement for the suppression of the liquor traffic is forcibly advocated.

The staff, of more than thirty clerks, is kept busy attending to correspondence and other details, in addition to the men who constitute the office and Field Secretary staff.

No effort or expense is being spared in the great battle being waged for the extinction of the bar rooms in Local Option voting to take place in the beginning of 1914.

Up to the present time campaigns looking toward voting on January 5th have been launched in forty-eight municipalities. Of these places one is a city, thirteen are towns, fourteen are incorporated villages and the remainder are townships. There are eleven of the forty-eight which have not before voted upon the question of Local Option; there are ten in which majorities were polled against Local Option in former contests; there are twenty-six in which Local Option by-laws were defeated by the three-fifths requirement; and there is one in which a Local Option by-law was carried and subsequently quashed upon a technicality. [The list of the places is as follows]

PLACES NOT BEFORE VOTING.

Towns—Brockville, Prescott and Wiarton.

Villages—Jarvis, Marmora and Springfield.

Townships—Dunn, Marmora and Lake, Ross, Russell and Tiny.

PLACES GIVING MAJORITIES AGAINST LOCAL OPTION.

Towns—Tillsonburg.

Villages—Delhi, Merrickville, Morrisburg and Woodbridge.

Townships—Alnwick, Bayham, Bexley, Mara and York.

DEFEATED BY THREE-FIFTHS.

City—Sault Ste. Marie.

Towns—Arnprior, Aylmer, Barrie, Cobourg, Meaford, Napanee, Oakville, Picton and Thessalon.

Villages — Bradford, Burlington, Grand Valley, Kemptville, Port Rowan and Sutton W.

THE QUASHED BY-LAW.

The municipality in which a Local Option by-law was carried and subsequently quashed, is Bastard and Burgess.

Points for Mothers

Mother's Clothes.

No matter how juvenile the schoolboy, he is pretty sure to have decided ideas about the hats and gowns of the feminine members of the family. No small boy likes to have his mother wear a hat that doesn't make her face look nice, as one eight-year-old put it. It doesn't make any difference to him if it is the most costly Paris creation; if it is not becoming it is worse than nothing.

Not only must the hat or gown be becoming and in good taste, but it must look right. The schoolboy has confessed to suffering agonies of torture for fear lest his mother and sisters won't appear as well dressed as the other fellows' families when they come up to school on a special occasion.

Some people think that the small boy's powers of observation, no matter how acute they seem, are confined to turtles and fishing tackle, baseball mitts and such articles of interest. They are really quite amazed when young Tom looks up and makes critical remarks about mother's skirt and shirt waist, which do not make proper connections, or about his sister's over powdered cheeks or carelessly arranged hair.

The schoolboy is at heart an affectionate creature, and it is really his genuine love for his mother that prompts him to resent any opportunity for the other fellows to think her dowdy or giddy. He wants his mother to be a person of understanding, who dresses well and is particular about her hair and hands, who knows about lessons and sports, and, above all, treats his friends as fellow human beings of intelligence and not as escaped nurseryites. Boys are merciless critics of each other's feminine attachments, but mothers and sisters don't always think it necessary to bother to "dress up" for them.

Another point. This critical young male creature, plugging along through the comedies and tragedies of schooldays, is very likely to become a husband and father when he grows up, and if he has always been accustomed to seeing neatly and carefully dressed up to date women about him he won't be nearly so likely to complain at the bills for the good clothes he wishes his wife and daughters to appear in.

Children's Toilet Articles.

Do not let children become lax in toilet niceties. Cleaning the teeth, manicuring, proper care of the hair and complexion should all be insisted upon from earliest childhood until such matters are inculcated as habits and are practiced voluntarily.

A point which falls upon the mother to attend to, unless she has a competent nurse, is the question of towels, face cloths and toothbrushes for the individual members of her family.

As soon as the child needs toilet articles—that is, from the day of its birth—it should have a separate supply. A scarcity of towels and face cloths is inexcusable, but many mothers are thoughtless in the matter of towels and face cloths. It is a good idea to have initialed towels for each child, the girl being taught to do the letters in cross stitch as a pleasant task.

Baby's Traveling Bed.

If it is necessary for you to travel with a baby try fixing up a wicker telescope for baby's bed in the following way: The lower part can be arranged ready for a bed, while into the upper part can be strapped baby's other belongings. When on the train put the lower half into the upper half and tuck baby in.

Hearing Is Postponed.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 14.—The hearing of Harry W. Jones, secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers, before U. S. Commissioner Young was postponed yesterday until Nov. 5. His bond of $10,000 was continued. The charge against Jones is conspiracy to transport explosives illegally.

Jones was taken into custody here following the arrest and confession of George Davis, alias George O'Donnell, an iron worker, in New York. Davis was brought to this city, and it is expected will repeat his confession before the United States grand jury, wh[illegible] enes here Nov. 11.

To the Lover of Good Coffee

We wish to advise you that we have installed in our store a new

Royal Electric Coffee Mill

manufactured by the A. J. Deer Co., of Hornell, N.Y. This machine is equipped with steel knives which cut the berry into fairly uniform, clean cut particles, instead of grinding and crushing it, as by the old method.

All Coffee Mills heretofore used will only crush the berry mutilating the minute oil cells, allowing the Coffee Oil to evaporate, thus impairing the strength and flavor, and in a short time the coffee becomes rancid, sour.

This is one reason why a pound of coffee cut in this Mill will make more cups of full strength coffee than will any coffee ground the old way.

Another feature about this Mill is that you may have your coffee cut as fine as the finest sand and it will still be practically free from that fine dust which is produced by the old method of grinding. You will, therefore, always have a clear cup of coffee instead of a muddy effect—a result of using the old style mills.

ROYAL CUT COFFEE is also adaptable for percolators or French Drip Coffee Pots.

Try a pound of our Coffee cut on a Royal Mill and we know you will be pleased with the results.

Yours truly,

LICENSE BOARDING HOUSES

The Recommendation of the Sanitary Inspector

PUBLIC MENACE

At the Board of Health meeting, this morning, Sanitary Inspector Spence recommended that all boarding houses be licensed, so that they could be governed by the health department.

The inspector said that conditions in some boarding houses were a menace to the public health. He particularly referred to the congregating of the numerous Italians.

One night, he explained, he visited one place where the air was absolutely poisonous. "These conditions cannot be tolerated in this century," remarked the inspector.

"I think you will find the same conditions in some private houses," added Mayor Bradburn. Dr. McPherson and the Inspector gave ready assent to this statement.

No action was taken at the meeting this morning.

ENTERTAINED BY THE GUILD

Social Evening at St. Paul's Lecture Hall

About 250 people were entertained last night by the Young People's Guild of St. Paul's church. Mr. William Hill, president of the Guild, occupied the chair, while the pastor Rev. Robt. Pogue welcomed the guests, who included about 150 of the Normal Students.

An excellent musical program was rendered. Miss Lora Logan delighted the gathering with two violin solos in her usual talented manner. Mr. Wright also rendered several solos in an accomplished manner, while a piano solo by Miss Adams showed a rare ability as a pianiste for one so young.

After the program refreshments were served and the evening was brought to a close.

THE C.P.R. BRIDGE

Public Should not Take Chances at This Point

Notwithstanding the fact that it is unlawful to walk across the C.P.R. bridge, there are several who are in the habit of taking a chance when the officials are not in sight. The public are reminded that it is for public safety the C.P.R. have been trying to stop this practice. At present the construction gang have all the top iron work off the east bridge and if any person is walking along there and a train is coming along a very perilous position will loom up.

THEY ELECTED A NEW MAYOR

Mr. Thos. Shields Was Chief Magistrate for One Night

The Epworth League of the George Street Church last evening at their regular meeting took upon themselves the responsibility of electing a new Mayor for the City of Peterborough. The honored one was Mr. Thos. Shields of the Epworth League of George Street Church. The evening's entertainment took the form of a mock election and as result the above gentleman headed the polls for the first citizen of the city. Four contestants participated.

The feature of it was that before his nomination each candidate was forced to make a speech proclaiming the good results that would be derived from his term of office.

Mr. Harry Coon acted in the responsible capacity of City Clerk.

At the next meeting the League will hold a mock trial.

A Sweater Coat for the Boys 59c
In the Well-known "Penman" make

THE PROBABILITY IS THAT AS SOON AS THE WEATHER BECOMES COLDER, or when he wants to go skating or tobogganing, the boy will feel the need of a warm, close-fitting garment like these Sweater Coats. And this "Penman" line is one of the best purchases our Annex buyer has made in a long time, because the Coats are all $1.00 and $1.25 lines, the heavy wool yarn of which they are made being most comforting in chilly weather, to say nothing of the durability of such a good class of Knitted Coat. About half of them made with high button collar, the remainder being—some with reversible turn down collar and others with the V-shaped neck, so well adapted for wear beneath the boy's ordinary coat. There is an excellent selection of colorings, popular choice generally resting upon garnet and grey; grey with fawn or navy; and castor with brown. Your attention is directed to the Window Display, which will reveal at a glance the extraordinary purchasing power of 59c in the buying of these Boys' Sweater Coats.

ALD. DUNCAN IS CHAIRMAN

Of Board of Health for Remainder of Year

SEVERAL CASES

Under Treatment at the Isolation Hospital

The Medical Health Officer reported at this morning's meeting of the Board of Health that the Isolation Hospital had been opened again.

Three cases of diphtheria and one of scarlet fever are being treated. All patients are from points outside the city. They are all pay patients.

The financial statement showed a balance of $800 in the appropriation for the year. The balance must do for the remainder of the year.

On motion of Mayor Bradburn and Dr. McPherson, Ald. Duncan was appointed acting chairman for the remainder of the year, Dr. Young having left the city for Saskatoon.

DON'T EXPECTORATE.

"Do not spit on the sidewalk, it is unlawful," read a sample of a sign from J. J. Turner and Sons. The size is 8 x 12 inches, and the price $1 each in lots of 50, and 90 cents in lots of 100. Campbell and Best sent a sample size 10 x 9 1-2 inches at 50 cents each in lots of 100. The Peterborough Hardware Co. sent a sample of the sign used in Toronto.

The matter was left over for next year's Board.

1. The tenure of appointment as Adjutant of Major D. Walker having expired, Captain A. P. McLean is hereby appointed Acting Adjutant October 10, 1913.

A. P. McLEAN Capt.
Acting Adjutant.

PROPERTY COMMITTEE AFTER GARBAGE CONTRACTORS

Ald. Duncan has called a meeting of the Property Committee for tonight, and it is likely that some recommendation will be made in regard to the collection of garbage, as the work of the contractors, according to the Sanitary Inspector is not satisfactory.

It is claimed that they shirk work that should be done according to the agreement. For instance if a receptacle has large dimensions, it is too heavy for the men to handle. They have also other excuses to offer. The contract price is $6700.

POWDER MAGAZINE

The Committee has also to deal with the protest of North Monaghan Council regarding the storage of explosives in the magazine located in the township. The township council claims the city has not lived up to its agreement to stop the storage of explosives.

Millinery Styles FOR AUTUMN AND WINTER

You will be surprised at the picturesque style of these Hats. Our workroom has spared no pains in making these the most exclusive creations at the prices they are marked. Every one is of this season's popular design. Shapes are admired for their becomingness combined with these qualities: A rich appearance, smart trims of feathers or ribbon and one that will see that fashion presents a hat that at once satisfies the demands of good style, yet keeps within the bounds of economy.

"PEBLO" GLASS

The demand for this High Quality Glass has increased so rapidly that we are forced to buy it in very large quantities. We have now the invoices for the largest quantity of unground glass that has ever come to this city.

This "Peblo" Quality Glass (for which we have the exclusive agency) is as near perfect as is possible to make glass. Lenses ground from it are hard and brilliant, and as clear as crystal. We use this High Quality Glass in all repair work as well as all new work, and while it costs us more to make "PEBLO" Lenses, remember, it costs you no more than you pay for the ordinary kind.

All our Lens Grinding is done on automatic machines and is in charge of Mr. C. A. Primeau, who has had 14 years experience in Lens Grinding.

We have one of the Best Equipped Optical Parlors in Canada, and all examinations are conducted personally by Mr. A. A. Fowler.

WRECK OF THE 10:10

BY HAROLD CARTER.

It was a slack evening in the office, I remember, and a group of us were sitting chatting around the reporters' table farthest from Dunning, the night editor, who had looked around rather frowningly once or twice, as if the conversation disturbed him. He was always busy enough; he was the kind of man who made work, silent, uncommunicative, though rather, I think, from shyness than owing to any unsympathetic quality.

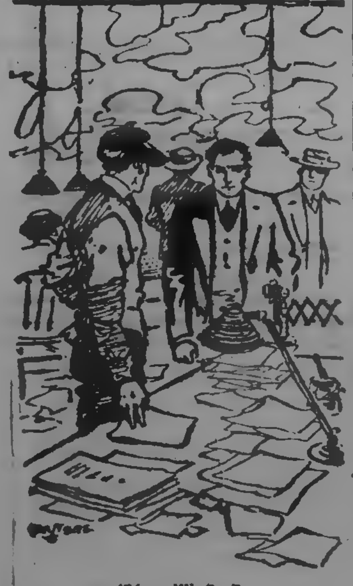
Broad's fiancee was to arrive that evening on the 10:10 from Washington, and Broad, who had been celebrating in honor of the event, was telling us all the details of their recent quarrel and reconciliation. She had gone down to the capital to visit a sister, and they had parted without saying good-by, for some cause flimsy enough, but very serious in the minds of two lovers. Then she had written forgiving him, and so—that evening they would be united again. That was all, but Broad was telling it with a whole wealth of detail.

"Dunning is a Washington man too," said Broad, flourishing his hands expressively. "But he doesn't care. If he knew that I must get off tonight, likely as not he'd pick a special assignment for me out of spite. But I don't bear him malice—poor old Dunning! I hear his wife and he fight like dogs and cats."

"Sh-h!" said some one; and just then a boy entered with a late edition of the "Planet," wet from the press, and handed it to Dunning. We saw him glance at it, then suddenly rivet his attention on the staring black letter that covered one-third of the front page. He looked round, and his eye searched our ranks.

"Mr. Broad!" he said sharply, and then, changing his mind, left his seat and hurried toward us. "Mr. Broad, I want you to go out to Crayfield instantly. The 10:10 from Washington has been wrecked outside the station. Hurry, and telephone all the news. And say, try to get a list of the dead."

"My God!" said Broad, and sank down into his seat. He buried his face in his hands and his shoulders shook convulsively. Somebody explained the situation in a few words, and Dunning's face took on an expression of intense sympathy. He placed one arm about Broad's shoulders and drew him to his feet.



"Yes, I'll Go."

"Too bad, old man," he said. "But I guess you'll be crazy now unless you get to Crayfield as soon as possible, so perhaps it would be the kindest thing to let you cover the assignment. You had better take a taxi from the office and you ought to be there in three quarters of an hour."

"Yes, I'll go," cried Broad, pulling himself together. There was no longer any trace of the influence of liquor about him. "You're right, Dunning. I'll go at once and telephone you all particulars. You'll have a good story, no matter—what happens."

He pulled his overcoat from its hook and clapped on his hat. As he was nearing the door Dunning called after him:

"Don't forget to telephone a list—a full list of the casualties," he said. "That's the main part, I think. There'll be many half crazy people in town tonight until they know. The 'Planet' says that 14 were killed. But it may be exaggerated." And he went back to his seat, while Broad disappeared through the doorway.

Then, one after another, he detailed us; one to the railroad offices, another to the president's house, another to catch the general manager at his club. I was among the few not assigned and, retreating to my desk, waited.

It was Dunning's custom to throw the papers upon the floor, when he had glanced over them, but on this occasion he folded the "Planet" carefully and laid it away in his desk. This act seemed strangely significant to all of us.

"Do you think her name is in the 'Planet's' list?" asked Kemp, the newest reporter. "Good Lord! If it were—would he have let Broad go there on an assignment?"

We did not like to think about the subject. It was too ghastly for conversation. There was nobody but liked Broad, big, generous-hearted, free-handed. Even his occasional lapses into insobriety had never affected his status with the paper. And some of us had met Miss Phayre. She was just the kind of girl who would make a proper wife for Broad and keep him straight. I had seen her at dinner with him; the thought of that fragile, high-spirited girl crushed under the wheels of the Washington Flyer seemed too sickening to contemplate.

Three-quarters of an hour elapsed. Dunning sat stiffly at his desk, writing indefatigably, glancing over flimsies and casting copy aside. His face was blanched; the situation seemed to have affected him as much as any of us. Once in a while the telephone would ring, but it was always local news or a report from some of the men on assignment. There was no word from Broad.

"If she's among them," began Kemp—and we knew he meant the dead—"Broad won't telephone."

"O yes, he will," I answered confidently; and at that moment the telephone rang so sharply that somehow I knew it was Broad calling from Crayfield. Dunning took up the receiver and held it to his ear a moment. Then he called me.

"It's Broad," he said. "He's calling and says he has a good story. Don't go into a booth; take it down here. I've told him to go slow. And say," he added, "don't let him get away without giving you the list of the casualties."

I took up the receiver and at the first sound I knew that Miss Phayre was safe.

"How is she?" I called. "Fine," answered Broad's voice. I thought there was the suspicion of a sob in it. "Are you ready? O, Miss Phayre? Just a trivial injury, thanks, old man. The 'Planet' story was incorrect. Now then." I began taking down the story, while Dunning looked over my shoulder.

"The 10:10 train from Washington to New York was ditched on the far side of Crayfield at 10:02," I wrote. "A broken rail is believed to have been the cause of the accident. The engine and the first three cars plunged down an embankment; the remaining cars left the metals, but did not overturn. The passengers all escaped with minor injuries except one unidentified man who—"

Suddenly Dunning pitched over and fell to the ground. He had fainted. Kemp ran to raise him, and, temporarily diverted from the telephone by the occurrence, I found myself glancing at the copy of the "Planet" in Dunning's half-opened drawer of his desk. On the page facing me I read, among the list of the dead:

"Mrs. George Dunning of Washington."

(Copyright, 1913, by W. G. Chapman.)

Keeping Him Waiting.

She is a most irritating specimen of humanity. Even the best of men lose their temper when, time after time, they are kept waiting by their sweethearts. Twenty minutes, half an hour, and even more, have they to wait patiently till her ladyship appears with just a slight apology for having been so long getting ready.

But, really, the time flew so! She had no idea it was so late, and it took her so long getting on her new hat. Somehow she couldn't arrange her curls to suit it.

The patience of man in this respect is most marvelous, and he does not get a quarter of the praise he deserves. And what girl would wait patiently for her lover, even five minutes, without preparing a good scolding for him for daring to keep her waiting? And should he, as the reason for his tardiness, blame business, why, should exclaim as if he had acknowledged to a most dreadful faut!

Save one or two turkey wings. They are the best brushes in the world to use around a stove and splendid for sweeping closet shelves. Weight the wing tip with iron until it dries.

HO, THE COLLEGE GIRL!

Coat She'll Need For School Term.

NATTY SPORTS COAT.

A coat of warm lightweight wool, belted, generously pocketed and trimmed with buttons, is just the thing for the college girl when she defies the campus winds.

In bright green wool this coat is thought to be exceedingly chic and sporty looking.

Wash the Specs.

Do you ever give your eyeglasses a bath? If not, give them a surprise and see how you like the result.

Especially in summer, when dampness and dust form a gummy combination on the eyelashes, the wearer of glasses or spectacles will find his vision apparently much improved by giving them a thorough washing daily with soap and warm water, followed by drying and polishing with tissue paper. The gummy substance which collects on the lenses in hot weather cannot be removed by a mere rubbing with chamois or tissue paper, and the more humid the day the more necessary becomes the eyeglass bath.

An oculist, who knows the importance of well washed lenses, carried in his pocket a vial of alcohol. It takes but a moment to moisten the corner of a handkerchief and remove the combination of dust and moisture from his glasses. Another business man has the case of his glasses interlined with a folded bit of soft tissue, such as is used for copying letters in offices. This is so soft that it is easily folded into the small space of the spectacle case. No dust collects on this, as it does on the velvet lining, and the tissue interlining is renewed every day or two.

New Velvet Suits Are Charming.

If you would be in the mode this winter you must have a velvet walking suit in one of the new colors, preferably mordore brown, which is a shade with high lights of gold in its depths.

IN MORDORE COLORED VELVET.

The suit illustrated is of this color, and the long cutaway lines of the coat are extremely smart. Buttoned boots of patent leather with gray cloth tops accompany this costume.

Two Better Than One.

An amusing story is told of Dr. Chavasse, the Bishop of Liverpool. Dr. Chavasse is the father of two sets of twins, and soon after Mrs. Chavasse had had twins for the second time a curate from a neighboring parish was asked to preach the Sunday morning sermon in Dr. Chavasse's church. By an extraordinary coincidence he chose as his text the words, "Two are better than one." A quite audible giggle came from one or two members of the congregation, and quite ignorant of the cause of his hearers' amusement the curate gazed at them in shocked surprise. Then, fearing that there might be something amiss with his surplice he tried to examine himself. Finding nothing amiss he looked sternly at the congregation and repeated his text in a loud clear voice, "Two are better than one." As he now seemed to be calling attention to his little joke the entire congregation quivered with suppressed mirth.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

An Oily Skin.

An oily skin means that the diet is not what it should be. Avoid all fatty foods, strong coffee and rich viands. Eat fruit early in the morning and drink mineral waters. Green salads are good. Stimulating and astringent washes are needed to restore tone and vitality to the relaxed glands. The use of bay rum, alcohol, camphor and ammonia is to be deplored, as these are all too drying. The astringent wash will be found most excellent not only as a means of removing oil from the skin, but for whitening the surface and refining the pores.

Deaf Aged Man Killed.

GUELPH, Oct. 13.—Eli Stout, an old man of 80 years, was instantly killed while walking on the G. T. R. track near Rockwood Saturday morning, when he was struck by the passenger-train which leaves Guelph at 9.40. Mr. Stout, who resided at Rockwood, where he at one time conducted a hardware business, was fond of walking, and at the time the train struck him he was crossing the bridge near Rockwood, and as he was very deaf, apparently, did not hear the train coming. The deceased was a prominent man in Rockwood and well known in the district. He leaves two daughters, Miss Eliza and Mrs. Coran.

Must Raise the Wind.

"Press agents are all very well," said Alfred Noyes, the English poet, at a picnic luncheon at Nahant; "but a press agent won't advance you to success unless you have the real qualities of success within you."

The eyes of the poet twinkled and he resumed:

"Before the press agent blows the trumpet of fame for you, you yourself have got to raise the wind."

LONG DISTANCE WIRELESS.

The Big Problem of Putting a Girdle Around the Earth.

According to Professor J. A. Fleming several of the most powerful wireless stations are now generating ether waves, having a length from crest to crest of about four miles, and these disturbances can be "detected" at distances up to 6,000 miles from their source. That is, four such stations would suffice to girdle the earth. Obviously, however, the ability to "detect" the signals over this vast distance, presumably under favorable weather conditions, is a very different thing from the power to maintain commercial communication along the route. As yet the wireless service available to the public covers but a third or at most half this distance.

There is as yet no means of determining the practical limit of wireless communication. Improvements in apparatus, perhaps even some new discovery as to methods of stirring up the ether, may revolutionize the art and upset all present standards. But at present even the most successful systems get into serious difficulties when called upon to maintain constant communication over a line about 2,000 miles in length. A recent British wireless commission was able to secure but one demonstration on a line a thousand miles long, although several companies declared their ability much to exceed this distance in a continental installation.—New York Post.

Village Nearly Destroyed.

LACROSSE, Wis., Oct. 13.—A violent wind storm which swept over southeastern Wisconsin Friday night caused the death of several persons and heavy property damage.

A report from Tomah, Wis., said the town practically had been wiped out and several persons killed. Other towns reporting damage to property were Mauston, Union Centre, Hillsboro, Wonewoc, Lavalle, Elecro, Friendship, Arkdale and Beloit.

Elecro suffered heavily. Mauson sustained damage to buildings that will exceed $200,000, it was reported.

JOHNSON NOW A FRENCH CITIZEN

Chicago, Oct. 14—Jack Johnson, negro champion heavyweight fighter, has become a naturalized citizen of France, according to a letter received here by a negro friend. In consequence, it is expected, the government will order forfeited the $30,000 bonds given in the white slavery charges which will be called here to-day. In the letter Johnson stated he was doing well in vaudeville. Next week, he said, he will open a nine weeks' engagement in Vienna.

"My home hereafter will be Paris. Never again will I set foot on American soil," he wrote.

FENCING A HEALTHY PASTIME

Graceful Accomplishment, Writer Thinks, Is Not Accorded the Position Which It Should Hold.

Fencing as a pastime has much to recommend it. It is convenient for men who work in town or country, does not consume as much time as golf, and is never stopped by bad weather.

Hitherto the expense has been against its popularity. On the other hand, were there more students of fencing the high subscriptions charged by school would show abatement. In France, for instance, where the art is an almost universal accomplishment and a compulsory subject, so to speak, for army men, expenses are quite moderate. The lowest estimate for a fencing outfit is $1.50. This includes a pair of foils, jacket, mask and glove. A pair of small swords costs from $3.50 to $5. This last weapon is more easily managed than the foil, which calls for a preliminary training with the sword. Practically all fencing equipment comes from France.

It is suggested that fencing clubs be established on the lines of similar institutions of golf and boating. Good fencing masters can be secured on the continent of Europe for ten dollars a week, which it is the custom to supplement by private lessons. French teachers are best, not on account of their nationality, but because they are carefully taught to teach.—Harper's Magazine.

NAMES THAT STUCK.

"Blarney" Is Now An Everyday Word In Our Language.

It is surprising how largely proper names figure in our language as words to describe particular actions.

Blarney is a place which became notorious as the result of the deeds done within its borders. So far back as the reign of Queen Elizabeth, Macarthy, an Irish chieftain, held Blarney Castle against the Lord President Carew, and when he could no longer keep out the besieger by force of arms he offered to evacuate the stronghold if he were allowed a few days' armistice to arrange matters with his followers. When the armistice expired he made excuses for prolonging it, and this operation was repeated so often that Elizabeth and her Ministers received the Lord President's frequent announcement of the postponement of the Irishman's surrender with the comment that Carew had been "blarneyed again." So "blarney" came to be the synonym of cajolery.

The royal burgh of Jedburgh gained an evil reputation from the summary methods adopted within its borders in the administration of the law. "Jedburgh justice," explains a writer in The Morning Advertiser, was the process by which a man was hanged first and tried afterwards.

Notoriety was given to Brentford by an old farce written by a duke. The Duke of Buckingham's play, "The Rehearsal," turned upon two rival claimants to Brentford's throne. When they had accommodated their differences by some absurd compromise, they appeared hand in hand, and the stage managers of the period to heighten the absurdity, made them enter smelling the same flower. Hence the saying "Like the two Kings of Brentford smelling the same nosegay."

The word "boycott" is, as all the world knows, the name of one of the early victims of the Irish Land League, and it signifies the peculiar kind of persecution to which he and his family were exposed. Capt. Boycott, fell foul of the League. Forthwith he was placed under a ban. His servants and laborers were intimidated, and induced to leave his employment. He and the members of his family had to do the work of the farm under police protection, and those who held communication with him or supplied him with the necessaries of life were warned that the same treatment would be meted out to them if they did not "leave him severely alone." While this tyranny was at its height, one day a speaker at a Land League meeting was denouncing someone who had transgressed the terrible code of that organization, when a voice called out, "Boycott him." The phrase caught the ear of the people, and has lived

TWINKLING OF THE STARS.

It Is All In Your Eye and Not In Any Outside Influences.

Prof. F. W. Eldridge-Green of London has made claim, that if nothing else spoil our old favorite poem of childhood days which begins, "Twinkle, twinkle, little star," for the professor says the stars do not twinkle at all. In fact he says the twinkle is all in our eyes, and he means it literally. Of course he doesn't say it in quite this manner. In fact he is rather technical about it, but he is a noted savant and has made many ponderous reports to learned British societies, so it is to be expected. His claims are interesting nevertheless.

The "twinkling" of the stars is not due to something in interstellar space nor to the earth's atmosphere, says the professor, and to prove his point he rigged up artificial stars in a dark laboratory and also adduced as evidence the well known phenomenon of "seeing stars" when you are struck a blow on the head. He placed a small light in a dark room. A bullseye lantern five and one-half inches in lens diameter at 1,000 yards was equivalent to his little light at 20 feet distant. If this is looked at in a dark room without moving the eye the light will twinkle exactly like a star.

In this experiment you will notice that pale bluish violet circles start at the outside and gradually contract at the centre. On reaching the centre the light brightens. Another simple experiment be used to show that it is your sensitive retina and not the outside which causes the "twinkling" was to open your eye as you awake in the morning, then to look at the ceiling. At first a star-shaped, irregular black spot will appear. On closing the eye again a bluish violet circle appears, spreads, contracts, and then, after breaking up into a star-shaped figure, it becomes brighter, disappears and is followed by another contracting circle.

If you open your eye as the star figure is formed in the centre it will appear as a rose-colored star, much brighter than any other part of the field of vision. If, however, you wait until the star has broken up and disappeared before opening the eye it will be found that only a black spot is seen in the centre. Many psychologists confirm these discoveries of the British investigator, and certainly there is no proof that star figures appear in the outside world.

Indeed, we know that the distant stars as well as the distant earthly lights are round or globular, not star-shaped as they appear in the "twinkling of an eye." Venus, the evening star, looks "star-shaped" until it is enlarged by looking through a telescope. Then you become convinced that it is big and round.

"Find" at Drury Lane.

Among the large number of pictures at Drury Lane Theatre, London, which have been used as "properties" there has been discovered a genuine George Morland. It is a small canvas, about 12x8 inches, depicting a sailor in the costume of the period taking farewell of his sweetheart on the seashore, and is presumed to have been painted about 1790.

"One of our scenes in the autumn drama," said Mr. Arthur Collins, the manager of the theatre, to an interviewer a few days ago, "is an exact replica of the famous auction-room at Christie's, and naturally we require to show many pictures. I invited Mr W. W. Sampson, the art dealer, to attend a rehearsal and give us a few hints. I noticed his attention seemed to be riveted on one canvas. Chaffingly I offered to do a deal with him, and, much to my surprise, he said, 'Very well, I'll buy that picure.' I sold it to him.

"To-day he announces to me that the picture is a very fine example of the work of George Morland. I understand it is worth a considerable sum, and it has already been insured for over four figures."

No Judge of Scenery.

"Hell's glen, between Glasgow and Inverary, is one of the most picturesque and rugged pieces of scenery in all Scotland. A miner once drove through the glen in a coach, and, while his companions went into raptures over the wild, weird, awe-inspiring features of the place, the miner yawned over his cigar and newspaper.

"Don't you like Hell's glen, sir?" the driver asked, at a particularly precipitous and striking spot.

Won Aerial Derby.

The "Aerial Derby," an aeroplane race with a 95-mile course which formed a complete circuit of London, was won by Gustave Hamel, an English aviator. He was awarded a $500 gold cup and $1,000 in cash. Of the 11 starters W. L. Buck was the only American. He finished sixth, being the third to start. The other competitors were two Frenchmen, a Swiss and seven Britons, including Hamel.

The order of departure was based on the comparative speeds of the machines, which ranged from 56 to 90 miles per hour. There were 30,000 spectators assembled at Hendon, the starting point.

A Broad Hint.

Fred—Last night as you stood in the moonlight I couldn't help but think how much I would like to kiss you.

Freda—Well, the poet says, "The thought of yesterday is the action of to-day."

Pleasant.

"Tommy," said the young man to his prospective brother-in-law, aged five, "will you be sorry when I marry your sister?"

"Yes," answered the little fellow; "I'll be sorry for you."

BAZAARS OF CAIRO

Where Time Is Without Value and Sales Wait on Patience.

BARGAINING AS A FINE ART.

Polite and Loquacious, the Oriental Shopkeeper Will Haggle Over the Price of an Article From Dawn Until Dark—A Sample Transaction.

He is the selfsame fellow still, the Cairene merchant, as in the days of Haroun-al-Raschid. He squats in cross-legged contentment as of yore, amenable only to the loquacious system of bargaining dear to the heart of the oriental. The western tourist, foolishly regarding time as of value, will lose all equanimity long before he has completed the smallest transaction. If his knowledge of the east and his patience suffice and he begins negotiations early enough in the day not to be driven forth as the merchant sets up his shutters at nightfall he may obtain the article he seeks at a just and equitable price. If he gains possession of it in less than the accustomed time he will certainly have paid more than its market value.

Vagamundo, the western traveler, experienced in the ways of the east catches sight during a stroll through the bazaars of an Arabic blade that takes his fancy. It hangs high at the top of the open booth, on the raised floor of which serenely squats the proprietor, with folded legs. Vagamundo as from the merest curiosity, pauses to run his eye over the countless articles, suggests with a half stifled yawn that the scimitar looks like what might be a convincing weapon in the hands of an enemy, ventures to hope that the merchant is enjoying fine weather and strolls leisurely on. The shopkeeper continues to puff drowsily at his water bottle until the westerner is all but out of earshot. Then he appears suddenly to awake and drones out a languid invitation to return. Vagamundo pays no heed to the summons for some moments, gazes abstractedly upon the wares displayed in another booth, then wanders slowly back. The merchant hopes that the traveler is enjoying the best of health, invites him to squat in the bit of space not already occupied by himself or his wares, offers a cigarette and falls to discussing the state of the cotton crop in the delta. By the time the second cigarette is lighted be turns the conversation deftly to the scimitar and remarks that though it is hung among his wares rather for ornament than for sale it is possible he may some day tire of beholding it and part with it for—perhaps 1,000 piasters. Vagamundo, puffing reminiscently for a time, recalls having heard a friend express a desire to obtain such a weapon for, say, 75 piasters or so and wonders, after all, why that friend should care for so useless an article. The shopkeeper regrets that the two prices named do not more nearly coincide, trusts that the inundations will not be so late this year as last and reaches again for the tube of his narghile. Vagamundo expresses his delight that the khedive has recovered from his recent attack, thanks the merchant for his disinterested hospitality and saunters away.

The shortest instant before he is finally lost from view in the surging stream of bazaar loungers he is called back to learn that the merchant is of the opinion that the new land tax will work more effectively than the old that the scimitar is probably worth only 780 piasters and that some of the eucalyptus trees in the Esbekieh gardens are to be removed. With all due respect to Cromer Pasha Vagamundo doubts the practicability of his latest scheme of taxation and hopes that his friend may somewhere run across such a scimitar at 100 piasters.

Thus the transaction continues; a third, a fourth, even a fifth time Vagamundo returns. By the sixth visit he has dropped the fiction of a friend and openly offers 225 piasters for the blade and the shopkeeper arouses himself sufficiently to take the weapon down for inspection and expresses a willingness to part with it for 275.

Over newly rolled cigarettes the negotiation proceeds, now touching upon the prevalence of ophthalmia, again skirting the matter of scimitars, their manufacture and price. Speaking of scimitars, the merchant suspects that for the one in hand he would be satisfied perhaps at 250 piasters. Vagamundo lays that sum—which both recognized from the beginning as the just price—on the mat between them, grasps his newly acquired property and, amid protestations of lifelong friendship from the merchant, takes his departure.

Manchester business men and Chicago captains of industry, scorning such childish methods, have dived into the maelstrom of the bazaars of Cairo with the avowed intention of "doing business" after the manner of today and the west; but all in vain. The Cairene shopkeeper will [illegible] in his transactions for no mortal. Let the pulsating westerner press his mercenary suit too forcibly and he discovers to his surprise, and perhaps even to his dismay, that the merchant of the east displays his wares and squats by day among them merely as a recreation and amusement and that the notion of selling anything is farthest from his thoughts.—Harry A. Franck in Century.

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Oct. 13.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 335 cars, comprising 7577 cattle, 683 hogs, 1444 sheep and lambs and 451 calves.

Exporters

Butchers

Good to choice butchers' steers, $6.75 to $7.10; medium butchers, $6 to $6.60; common butchers, $5.50 to $6; good to choice cows, $5 to $5.65; common to medium cows, $4.50 to $4.80; canners, $3.50 to $4; bulls, $4.50 to $6.25.

Milkers and Springers

A moderate delivery of milkers and springers sold at about steady prices ranging from $50 to $75, and one extra quality cow brought $110.

Stockers and Feeders

Prices for good to choice heavy feeders, 1000 to 1150 lbs., were firm, at $6.40 to $6.65; steers, 900 to 1000 lbs., $5.60 to $6.25; steers, 700 to 800 lbs., $5.25 to $5.75; eastern stock heifers, $4.35 to $4.80.

Veal Calves

Receipts were moderate and prices firm. Choice calves, $9 to $10; good calves, $8 to $9; medium, $7 to $8; common, $5 to $6.50; rough eastern calves, $4.50 to $5.

Sheep and Lambs

A liberal run of sheep and lambs sold at about steady prices. Sheep, light ewes, 100 to 130 lbs., $4.50 to $5; ewes, 140 to 160 lbs., $4 to $4.25; lambs, ewes and wethers, $7.25 to $7.50; bucks, 75c per head less.

Hogs

Prices for hogs were 25c per cwt. lower. Selects, fed and watered, $8.60, f.o.b. cars, $8.25; weighed off cars, $8.85.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Oct. 13.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market, receipts of live stock for the week ended Oct. 11 were 5000 cattle, 4500 sheep and lambs, 2000 hogs and 1800 calves. For sale this morning, 3800 cattle, 3700 sheep and lambs, 1100 hogs and 1300 calves.

Today's market was strong, and an advance of 25c per 100 pounds was shown. Trade was active, with sales of full carloads of common bulls at $4.25 to $4.50; and canning cows at $3.50 to $3.75 per 100 pounds. Indications are that the American buyers will clean up the market of the above class of stock.

There was no important change in the condition of the market for butchers' cattle, prices being firmly maintained under a good demand, but choice steers were scarce: in fact, there were none to be had. Sales of full loads of good steers were made at $6.85, and common steers at $5.75, while picked lots of good stock brought as high as $7 per 100 pounds. A few choice, heavy bulls sold at $5.50 to $5.75, and good at $5 to $5.25 per 100 pounds.

Altho supplies of small meats were large, a very firm feeling prevailed in the market, owing to the fact that there was a brisk demand from local buyers for sheep and lambs, as most of them are now providing for their winter requirements, and consequently an active trade was done.

Some of the drovers were asking an advance of 25c per 100 pounds for lambs, but they failed to establish it.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.25 to $7.50; do., medium, $6.25 to $7; do., common, $5 to $5.70; canners, $3.50 to $4.50; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5.75 to $6; do., medium, $5 to $5.50; do., bulls, $5 to $5.75; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $80; do., common and medium, each, $65 to $70; springers $55 to $60.

Sheep, ewes, $4 to $4.25; bucks and culls, $3.75 to $4. Lambs, $6 to $6.75.

Hogs, f.o.b., $8.75 to $9.

Calves, $5 to $15.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 13.—Cattle—Receipts, 6200, fairly active, good to choice, 15c to 25c lower; common 25c to 50c lower; prime steers, $8.75 to $8.85; shipping, $8.25 to $8.60; butchers, $7 to $8.55; cows, $3.50 to $6.75; bulls, $5 to $7.25; heifers, $5.75 to $7.55; stock heifers, $5 to $5.25; stockers and feeders, $6 to $7.25; fresh cows and springers steady, $35 to $87.

Veals—Receipts, 900; native calves active, 5c lower, $6 to $11.70; Canada calves slow, $3.50 to $5.55.

BATHING A PRINCE.

Thomas Smoaker "Seen His Duty and He Done It."

George IV. while prince and residing in his Brighton palace kept in his bedroom a portrait of Mrs. Gunn, an old bathing woman who used to dip him into the sea when he was the little Prince of Wales. A picture book much prized by children in England in those days showed the old lady bathing the little fellow. Beneath the picture was this stanza:

> To Brighton came he,
> Came George the Third's son,
> To be dipped in the sea
> By the famed Martha Gunn

A companion portrait to Martha Gunn's was that of Thomas Smoaker, who had charge of the horse which drew the bathing machines into and out of the sea. One day the little royal highness, having learned to swim, swam out farther than Thomas judged to be safe. He called to him to come back, but the self willed boy struck out with more rigor. Thomas went after the prince, overtook him, seized him by an ear and drew him to shore.

"Do you think," he replied to the boy's angry words, "I'm a-going to get myself hanged for letting the king's heir drown hisself just to please a youngster like you?"—Pearson's.

The First Reporter.

The modern reporter harks back to the reign of Queen Anne and to the unknown scribe who attempted to tell the public the secrets of her parliament. He had a hard time of it, for parliament wished to keep its secrets to itself. In 1728 an order was passed "that it is an indignity to and a breach of the privilege of the house for any person to presume to give in written or printed newspapers any account or minute of the debates or proceedings; that upon discovery of the authors, printers or publishers of any such newspapers this house will proceed against the offenders with the utmost severity." During the famous Wilkes case in 1772 the reporters won the victory which they have since held without dispute.—New York American.

NATURAL PLACE FOR PLUMBING INSPECTION WITH BOARD OF HEALTH

The Opinion of Dr. McPherson Who Would Place That Work Under Supervision of Health Department —An Assistant for Sanitary Inspector

Dr McPherson, Medical Health Officer, suggested at the Board of Health meeting this morning that the matter of plumbing inspection be placed in the hands of the health department; that the Sanitary Inspector be given an assistant; that the issue of building permits be also placed under the hand of the department, and that the Inspector have the milk vendors' licenses under his supervision.

By supervising the building permits, it was pointed out, the Inspector could warn any person against erecting, say a stable that might, in the future, be a menace to public health. Mr. Spence said that in the south end a stable was being erected four feet from a house, and the odors would penetrate through the house.

Mayor Bradburn explained that the Inspector could look over the building permits in the City Clerk's office, and he could give the necessary warning.

"The natural place for plumbing inspection," said the Medical Health Officer is under the control of the Board of Health." It could be combined with sanitary inspectorship, and Mr. Spence could be given an assistant.

The Sanitary Inspector claimed that there were cases of plumbing where the closets were placed in an unsanitary position and the ventilation was poor. He could point out the defects and have them remedied.

FOUR HUNDRED MINERS TO BE ACCOUNTED FOR

But There is Some Hope That Loss of Life Will Not be so Heavy as Feared---Rescuers in Touch With Twenty-nine Men in One Gallery.

Canadian Press Despatch.

CARDIFF, Oct. 15.—Shortly after noon to-day rescue parties got in touch with twenty-nine men who are closed in one of the galleries by the fall of coal. The imprisoned men signalled that another group of fifteen men were closed in further along the gallery, but it is feared that these latter were dead.

This discovery leads to the hope that the total loss of life may turn out less than it was feared but nearly four hundred men still remain to be accounted for.

CARDIFF, South Wales, Oct. 15.—The long and terrible record of Welsh coal mine disasters was added to yesterday morning by one of the worst catastrophes of the present generation, a terrific explosion in the well-known Universal colliery, at Senghenydd, near Cardiff, entailing a loss of life which will, it is feared, total 434.

The latest figures obtainable are:

In the pit when the explosion occurred, 934 to 940.

Bodies recovered, 10.

The day shift descended the shafts in the cages at five o'clock. An hour afterwards a deafening report brought the inhabitants in the vicinity of the mine running to the pit head, where they found the ventilating hoisting machinery at the top of the shaft had been blown to atoms, and a man who had been working 20 yards away had been decapitated.

Rescue parties of miners belonging to the night shift were soon on the scene. The fiery reputation of the mine, however, gave little hope that any of those below could be rescued alive.

An entrance was found, however, by way of an adjacent shaft and the rescuing parties came across some scores of men huddled together where the ventilation was still good.

Some 327 living miners had been gathered together and taken up the shaft with the bodies of six of their companions who had been killed by being dashed against the uprights supporting the galleries by the explosion.

The rescuers continued their search in remote galleries and by noon had picked up and brought to the surface altogether 500.

At the pit head the wives, children and other relatives of the entombed miners gathered in thousands and waited in the agony of suspense. Women and children wept and clamored for news of those still in the pit.

The men brought to the surface were found on the east side of the mine where the ventilation remained fairly good while on the west side, where the explosion occurred, fire soon added its terrors to the deadly afterdamp and the rescue parties were unable to make any progress toward the affected area.

The officials of the mine found it necessary to call a detachment of police to keep back the women and children, while the mine managers, with the tears streaming from their eyes, replied to all inquiries, "There is little hope."

Most of the rescued men presented a pitiable appearance. Some of them were not expected to live and nearly all of them were suffering from burns and shock or the effects of afterdamp.

The same pit was stricken by an explosion thirteen years ago, when 120 miners lost their lives and only one of those below at the time was rescued alive.

Grand New Eight Piece Orchestra Instrument Will be Installed — To be in Operation for Thanksgiving Day Morning

The new orchestra instrument purchased some time ago from the Williams' Music Co. by Manager Clayton, of the Royal Theatre, has arrived in the city and will be installed and in operation for Thanksgiving Day morning, Oct. 20th.

No doubt next Monday the many patrons and music-lovers of this city will be surprised when they hear and enjoy the various high class programs rendered by this wonderful musical instrument which will be new in every detail to all theatre-goers in Peterborough.

The Royal Theatre under the capable management of Mr. Clayton has left nothing undone for the comfort and enjoyment of the patrons of this popular picture and vaudeville house, having made an expenditure of $2,500 alone to the musical department and being equipped with two of the best picture machines and capable operators. The Royal will be one of the few strictly modern theatres in Canada.

GIBSON GOES TO PRISON

The "Red" Wilson Arrested Was not the Man Wanted

TORONTO, Oct. 15.—"We didn't get any satisfaction. That wasn't the man."

T. H. Lennox, K.C., counsel for Charles Gibson, who is to serve a life sentence for the murder of Rosentha 19 months ago, admitted yesterday that they had no success when "Red" Wilson was taken to the jail on Saturday to be confronted with Gibson, to see if he was the much-wanted witness in the case.

"We are not yet giving up hope that we may find him," continued Mr. Lennox; "but in the meantime Gibson will be taken to the penitentiary. He goes to Kingston to-morrow. I have had a final interview with him this afternoon."

J. B. LUND MISSING.

Went Out In a Dinghy From Vineland on Monday.

ST. CATHARINES, Oct. 15.—J. B. Lund, director of the vegetable department of the provincial experimental farm at Vineland, set sail in a dinghy from Jordan Harbor just before sundown Monday night and has not since been seen. Yesterday the little craft, with sail set, was found between Port Dalhousie and Port Weller, the harbor for the new Welland ship canal, partly submerged, and it is believed that Lund was drowned. He was a fourth year student at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, and a brother of Herbert Lund, a lecturer in bacteriology at that institution. His father is an Anglican clergyman. He was in his 25th year.

Chief Chen Executed.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—A Pekin despatch to The Daily Telegraph says that Chen, chief of the Pekin mounted police, was executed Monday. Chen was arrested Oct. 10 during the ceremony of inaugurating Yuan Shi Kai as President of the republic. He confessed that Southern rebels had bribed him to make an attempt to assassinate Yuan Shi Kai as the President was taking the oath of office.

Precautions for the protection of Yuan Shi Kai have been redoubled. He moves nowhere without a bodyguard.

Major Hughes Urges Higher Standard For Warders.

KINGSTON, Oct. 15. — Radical changes in the management of Kingston and other penitentiaries and the elimination of politics were strongly urged by Major Hughes yesterday morning in the course of his testimony before the royal commission appointed to probe the charges of Dr. Edwards. Major Hughes was expected to give sensational evidence touching the charges but this phase of the inquiry was not touched yesterday morning. Witness urged the formation of a school of instruction for officers as at present it frequently happened that an officer was put over a convict who was in every way the officer's superior.

To-day practically nothing was done to improve a prisoner. The boys should be segregated and a systematic effort made to instruct and uplift.

Strike on C.N.R. Feared.

WINNIPEG, Oct. 15.—Unless the more conservative members of the Order of Railroad Brakemen can govern the next meeting, comprised of men in the C.N.R. employ, there is a possibility that a strike will be declared on the C.N.R. system. During the last two months the C.N.R. brakemen and baggagemen have been holding meetings with officials of the C.N.R., and it 's learned that the railroad officials have conceded many points but have refused to concede several others, among which is an increase in wages.

It has been decided to put the matter to a general vote of the employes concerned.

The entire system of the C.N.R. east and west will be affected.

FRIENDS ALLEGE MURDER

They Think Man Was Beaten and Placed in Vat

TORONTO, Oct. 15.—That Antanas Thomas Anko was murdered in the dye works of Abraham White at 135 William street last Saturday night, and that his death was not due to suicide, as at first believed, is the opinion held by those who have been investigating the case. Evidence secured tends to show that Anko was felled by a blow or blows and placed in the washing machine in a dying condition. City detectives are now working on the mystery, with a view to arresting a foreigner, who is said to have threatened Anko some time prior to his death.

It was not until the funeral of Anko yesterday that the statement was made that he had been murdered. Anko was a Lutheran and one of the rules of the church is that a member can get no Christian burial if he commits suicide. When arrangements were made by the burial of Anto yesterday from St. Mary's Lutheran Church, friends consulted the authorities about the manner of Anko's death and was informed that he should be given a Chritsian burial, as the evidence led to the suspicion that he had met with foul play. The funeral was held under the auspices of the Lutheran society.

From a close investigation of the interior of the dyeworks and the washing machine in which the body was found detectives are convinced that it would have been impossible for Anko to have committed suicide. Marks and bruises found on his body were evidently received during a fight. The opening in the vat was so small that it would take considerable effort to force Anko's large body through the aperture, a great deal more than Anko was capable of in his weakened condition.

It is said that wrenches were found near the washing vat and that marks on the body would indicate that Anko had been struck down by one of these.

COL. GRAVELEY

Widley Known Military Man Passes Away in Toronto

TORONTO, Oct. 15.—Lieut.-Col. John Vance Graveley, a widely known and highly respected military man of Toronto, passed away last evening at his residence, 1,542 West King street, in his 73rd year. He had been ailing for some time, but it is thought that his death was directly due to the effects of an accident which he met with about six months ago, when he fell from a street car.

Col. Graveley was born in Cobourg, Ont., in 1840 and was the son of the late William Graveley. He was a resident of that town until twenty years ago, when he moved to Toronto.

While in Cobourg he was an officer in the 40th Regiment, having served in its ranks during the Fenian Raid in 1866. He was paymaster in that regiment for some time.

On July 31, 1907, he was appointed colonel of the Ordnance Service Corps, which position he held until death.

He was a strong Conservative, taking a leading part in several elections in West Northumberland.

Through Trains Next June.

EDMONTON, Oct. 15.—By June next the Canadian Northern will run through trains between Toronto and Edmonton, and by August trains will commence running from Montreal through to the Pacific Coast via Edmonton over the Canadian Northern Railway. This announcement was made by Sir Donald Mann, who stopped here on a trip through the west.

Sir Donald said that the line between Sudbury and Port Arthur would be finished by December, and that the two ends of the steel on the main line between Edmonton and the Pacific Coast would be connected about the middle of next summer.

VOLTURNO CAPTAIN GIVES STORY OF THE DISASTER

Seamen of the Watch Below Were Caught Like Rats in a Trap in Forecastle and Burned—The Officers Worked Heroically, Calming the Passengers and Making Life Rafts.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Captain Francis Inch of the Volturno sent his story of the disaster by wireless last night from the Kroonland, on which he is being brought to this port, to the officers of the Uranium Line here. Captain Inch's narrative says in part:

"At 6.50 a.m., Oct. 9, 1913, fire was reported in hold No. 1 by chief officer. At 6.55 a.m. flames were burning through No. 1 hatches, setting fire to t[illegible]castle and all deck fittings. I slowed the ship down and kept her before the wind to enable us to put the steam extinguishers in operation, also three fire hose from deck connections. The flames were gaining rapidly, reaching the height of the foremast light, and imprisoning the watch below, who were burned to death in the forecastle.

"A series of explosions now occurred, wrecking the saloon and hospital amidships, the compass and steering gear being also damaged by the explosions. I gave orders to get help by wireless as soon as the flames burnt the hatches.

"It seemingly being impossible to save the ship, I had boats provisioned and swung out. The ship was rolling heavily. Boats Nos. 13 and 5 were smashed, but No. 2 was lowered in the water with cabin passengers and stewardess, in charge of Chief Officer H. P. Miller. After this boat left the ship she capsized, throwing her occupants into the water. She afterward righted herself, and several of the crew got back into the boat, the chief officer being one of them. The No. 6 boat was lowered, and got away safely filled with steerage passengers, in charge of Fourth Officer Langsell. The No. 7 boat on being lowered was caught under the stern of the ship, the boat being completely wrecked.

"Meanwhile the chief engineer, two seamen and myself fought the fire and apparently subdued the flames. I gave orders to send no more boats away, as I had received word from the Carmania that she was hoping to be with us by 11 a.m. Life-belts were served out and put on each passenger. The passengers now became calmer. Food was served out to them.

"Several steamers had arrived by dusk. The Kroonland put over boats, which made four attempts to come alongside, but were swept away each time.

"At 9.30 p.m. the saloon and chart houses were flaming. The deck, bridge and all before the funnel were blazing fiercely. Pumps and dynamo stopped for want of steam. Marconi operators working with the accumulators until 11 p.m., when the magazine on the bridge blew up, carrying the aerial away.

"Several boats by this time were lying off the ship, and induced passengers to jump, and they were rescued by boats.

"The fire meanwhile worked through the women's steerage to the after end of the ship, but we kept knowledge of this from the passengers, who were quiet throughout the rest of the night.

"The chief engineer, the Marconi men, and seamen, and myself spent the night making small rafts in case the fire burned through the deck before daylight.

"At 1.30 a.m. boats were enabled to come alongside, which enabled passengers to embark quickly. All the steamers lying around the ship sent boats. Now we were enabled to load three boats with passengers at once. The passengers left in a very orderly way and there was no panic, women breaking down and crying when help was alongside, and all were off the ship by 8 a.m., about 400 passengers. I searched the ship myself and found no one else on board, so decided to abandon her, as the No. 3 hatch was well aflame by now, so with the remainder of the crew embarked on the Kroonland.

"Nothing at all had been heard of the two missing boats. Passing vessels were asked to keep a lookout for them.

"I wish to express my heartiest thanks to the captains of ships who stood by, also to the officers and crews who came to our assistance, for their bravery and endurance in their endeavor to come alongside the ship. The work of the crews of the rescuing vessels was all that human effort could do, more indeed than could be expected."

FIELDING AS AN EDITOR

Former Finance Minister to Run Montreal Telegraph

MONTREAL, Oct. 15.—Hon. W. S. Fielding has accepted the position of editor of The Daily Telegraph and president of The Daily Telegraph Publishing Co. His statement follows:—

"On or about the first of December, 1913, on my return from a short visit to Great Britain, I will assume the duties of president of The Telegraph Publishing Co. of Montreal, Limited. I shall take the position with the cordial approval of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and leading Liberals and under conditions which assure Liberal control and the publication of The Daily Telegraph as an independent Liberal journal — independent inasmuch as it will not be connected with any party organization, but nevertheless frankly avowing its sympathy with the Liberal party. The desire of the conductors of The Daily Telegraph will be, while necessarily viewings things from a Liberal standpoint, to discuss the public questions of the day with moderation and fairness and with due respect for the opinions of those who may differ from them.

(Signed) "W. S. Fielding."

PRISONER BREAKS JAIL.

Takes Up Bundle of Clothes and Dashes to Liberty.

WINDSOR, Oct. 15.—With an armful of clothes carefully selected from the storeroom of the county jail at Sandwich, in which he was serving a 60-day sentence for stealing a bicycle, George Babbage, aged 26, made a successful dash for liberty early yesterday morning.

Babbage was assisting in cleaning the halls downstairs and the storeroom.

None of the jail officials saw him go, but some men on the street saw the prison stripes flash across the road and notified the jail officials. A search was made, but the prisoner was not located. It is thought he changed his clothes by the river, and, taking a small boat, rowed to Detroit.

Finger Embedded In Steel Block.

BOSTON, Oct. 15.—Peter Kershanskus was brought from South Boston to the City Hospital, wearing a five-pound steel block on his little finger. The question was whether to amputate the block from the finger or the finger from the hand. The latter would have been the easier, but it was decided to save the member. The man was etherized, and the physicians worked an hour and a half extricating the little finger with saws and other instruments.

WILL SHOW NO MERCY

U.S. Government Refuses to Recognize Elections

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—General Victoriano Huerta was informed yesterday by Nelson O'Shaughnessy, American charge at Mexico City, that the American Government would not recognize the victor of an election for President of Mexico, held under present conditions. The action by the Amelcan Government was taken following a close study of the decree issued by Gen. Huerta proclaim himself dictator. The best legal authorities of the State Department, Counsel or John Basset Moore, and solicitor for the State Department, Joseph W. Folk, analyzed the decree.

In the opinion of the administration Huerta's acts are not constitutional. Hence the President of the United States will not countenance any such election as Huerta proposes and which he says will be held without fail on Oct. 26, the date originally set by him, which the President of the United States looked forward to as the first actual step for peace.

Gen. Huerta's decree as well as the Mexican Government's reply to the representations made by Charge O'Shaughnessy in behalf of the lives of the 110 deputies whom Huerta imprisoned on Friday last, were discussed by the President and his Cabinet yesterday. By some this is regarded as insolent and as an attempt on the part of Huerta to "bluff."

President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan would not be surprised if the ultimatum sent Gen. Huerta resulted in Mr. O'Shaughnessy receiving his passports. While no message has been received from Mexico City indicating that the relations between the two nations have been stretched to a breaking point, the President will not be surprised at anything which happens in Mexico.

Charles O'Shaughnessy telegraphed the State Department yesterday that Gen. Huerta had given the embassy assurances that no violence would be done the imprisoned deputies. Mr. O'Shaughnessy added that Huerta stated further that the deputies must stand civil trial on the charge of sedition against the Mexican Government which had been paying them their salaries for many months. It is the latter part of the message which some of the President's advisers regard as being insolent.

The American Government is ready to back up its stand at any time by sending to Mexican waters the Atlantic and Pacific fleets. These vessels are being held in readiness. Charge O'Shaughnessy has informed the State Department a naval demonstration, would, in his judgment, have moral influence.

President Wilson, while regarding the situation as serious, does not take the view that there is a crisis. It is the confident belief of the President that England, Germany and France, the first countries which recognized Huerta as provisional President of Mexico, will now support without reservation the policy of the United States. In other words, the administration is of the opinion that Huerta, by his action in imprisoning the deputies and declaring himself dictator, repudiated the recognition he got from those European countries and vindicated the attitude of the United States.

President Wilson and his Cabinet discussed the Mexican situation yesterday at the first Cabinet meeting since last June. The despatch of a German warship to Mexican waters and the possibility of like action by other European powers, which may foresee a crisis for the Huerta Government, commanded attention.

Advices from Mexico City indicated that the Mexican deputies, for whose safety the American Government had made representations, were still in jail, but, according to Huerta, in no danger. His statement, however, that the deputies would be brought to trial, was received here with disappointment.

None of the secretaries would comment upon Huerta's decree of Oct. 10, assuming the powers of government, further than to characterize it as "very interesting."

TOO MUCH FOR COURT

Apostate Monk Tries to Convict Beiless on Ancient Fables

KIEV, Oct. 15.—At the continuation of the trial of Mendel Beiliss yesterday for the alleged murder of the boy, Andrew Yushinsky, the prosecution concentrated their efforts on an endeavor to prove that the Jews practiced "ritual murder" on Christians, by the [illegible] Archimandrite Autonomius. He is of Jewish descent, but was baptized when ten years of age. He resides in the Kiev monastery; but was formerly attached to the monastery at Saratov.

The Archimandrite carried two documents relating to ritual murders in the eighteenth century, and asked that they be incorporated in the records of the trial. The court refused to comply with this request.

Replying to questions, Autonomius declared that he knew of cases where Christian children had been tortured by Jews. He said:

"From my childhood my parents and teachers warned me not to have relations with Jews, because they tortured Christian children."

Questioned still further, he said that when he was a Jew he had never heard that the Jews used Christian blood for ritual purposes.

Several workmen and officials employed in the Zaite works declared that Beiliss was working as usual on the day of the disappearance of Yushinsky.

A beggar woman was examined concerning statements she was alleged to have made to another woman, according to the preliminary examination, implicating Beiliss. She said she knew nothing about the affair, but possibly might have gabbled something when in her cups.

Missionary Died In India.

TORONTO, Oct. 15.—The Foreign Mission Board of the Presbyterian Church received a message yesterday from Ujjain, Central India, of the death of a missionary, Rev. W. G. Russell. The late Mr. Russell, who passed again on Friday last, went to India in 1901, and was a graduate of Knox College. He was active in home missions for some time. He was a native of Motherwell, Ont., having been born there in 1871.

Diesel's Body Found.

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands, Oct. 15.—A body evidently that of Dr. Rudolf Diesel, the German motor inventor, was picked up in the mouth of the Scheldt on Saturday by a boatman.

WEDDING OF PRINCE ARTHUR AND DUCHESS OF FIFE

Royal Couple Were Wedded in Chapel Where They Were Baptized

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Prince Arthur of Connaught, son of Canada's Governor-General, and Princess Alexandra Victoria, Duchess of Fife, and the eldest daughter of the late Duke of Fife and Louise, daughter of King Edward VII, were married to-day in the ancient chapel of St. James' Palace, where both had been baptized.

The beautiful little chapel holds only three hundred people, but it contained to-day the greatest assemblage of royalties and notable personages collected in London since the Coronation of King George.

Sylvia Pankhurst Arrested.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Sylvia Pankhurst, who was the central figure of a fierce struggle Monday night between the police and the militant suffragettes in the east end of London, was arrested last night when about to enter the Poplar town hall with the object of addressing another meeting. The militants attempted to rescue her, but the police, who were in large numbers, succeeded in placing her in a taxicab and driving to Holloway Jail.

Alberta Railway Bill.

EDMONTON, Alta., Oct. 15.—At the evening session the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway Bill was finally disposed of in committee of the whole. It has been before the House for 11 days in all, and Opposition members have brought in 27 amendments, all of which have been defeated on party divisions.

THE MEDIATION OF WINSTON

Mr. Asquith shows great sagacity in the using of Winston Churchill as a sort of cats-paw in the Home Rule trouble. The Ulster hearth is very warm just now and Winston does not mind burning his fingers a little.

The fact that F. E. Smith, the the lieutenant of Sir Edward Carson, is a close friend of Mr. Churchill, is a great advantage. It will be remembered that Mr. Smith stood as god-father to Winston's first born, and they are therefore on very intimate terms socially.

These intimacies in the old land between members of the extremes in politics cannot be quite understood in this country, where party differences often separate men who have no more against each other personally than a diverse opinion on some matter which does not immediately concern either of them.

The inflamatory condition of Ulster is nothing new. The combustible material was there before Sir Edward Carson took it upon himeslf to control and direct it. Ulster Protestantism is universally recognized to be the most militant of all Protestantism. Whatever else may be said about Ulster it has always been loyal and is undoubtedly the most progressive and industrious section of Ireland, and ought for that reason to have special consideration.

LLOYD-GEORGEISM

The Liberalism of Mr. Lloyd George is fast becoming indistinguishable from what even Liberals a short time ago condemned as Socialism.

When you begin to pull anything to pieces, you find yourself in the awkward and laborous position of having to put it together again. Like the farmer, who tried to repair the clock, and who said; "I got it all together again fine, but for that one darned wheel over."

It may be that out of all this unrest in Great Britain there may come better times for the working classes, and that even Lloyd George is merely the mouth piece of a certain discontent in the public mind which, if he did not give vent to it, would come out in some worse form.

But to us on this side of the Atlantic all these "reforms" in the way of old age pensions, state insurance, etc., seem but a tampering or a patching-up method of dealing with social problems.

THE FRENCH PRESS AND CHATEAUGUAY

(From La Patrie.)

The Borden Government has achieved a striking victory in Chateauguay. The reply of the electors of that county is a formal disapproval of the policy of obstruction, of negation and of abstention of the Opposition.

(From La Presse.)

It is well to admit that a bye-election is after all only a bye-election and that governments, no matter who they be, do not open counties for the sake of being beaten in them. That means that everything, in all that the word implies, is put to work in order to secure a triumph. On the other hand, the Liberal organization was well conducted. Hon. Mr. Lemieux directed the fight and was constantly in the breach from the first day to the to the last.

(From L'Evenement.)

The Province of Quebec, with the other provinces, evolves towards the Conservative doctrine. As for Sir Wilfrid Laurier he has survived his glory. The hour of punishment has sounded for him. The justice of the people will repay his shameful treacheries in his lifetime. It was the province of Quebec which made his fortune; it is that province that will complete his discomfiture.

(From Le Devoir.)

The result of the Chateauguay election has conformed to our expectations. Insignificant as a concrete expression of the fundamental principles of present day politics, this election cannot fail to have a considerable effect upon the condition of parties. It marks the definite departure of the hold of Sir Wilfrid Laurier upon the people of Quebec. It indicates unequivocally that unless the Liberal party definitely changes its leadership, its program and its tactics, it is doomed to weakness for fifteen years. The election of Morris does not, however, imply approval of the principle of contribution to the naval defence of the Empire.

(From Le Canada.)

We do not conceal our profound disappointment at the result of the Chateauguay election. We have not been able to obtain from the electors of the county that unequivocal declaration which we hoped for, for or against the naval tribute. The Conservatives have been able to turn the attention of the electors by telling them that there was no great issue at stake and that it was sufficient for them to say whether they wanted public works. So far as we are concerned the verdict of Chateauguay, obtained under false pretences, is null and we will continue to fight the anti-national policy involved in the tribute of thirty-five millions.—Montreal Mail.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Toronto Star is beginning to feel uncomfortable over the "revelation" contained in the late W. T. Stead's biography that there is a sort of Jesuite Society in existence for the purpose of preserving the Empire. This is another attack of autonomy. A little tonic of militarism might strengthen the editor's nerves.

"Sir Wilfrid is not downcast," says the Toronto Star. Well, it is a good thing for his health's sake. But has he no consideration fo rthe country? Is he not concerned at the spectacle of the country going to the dogs in this fashion?

It is reported that another continent has been discovered. It is located in the unexplored regions north of Siberia. Whether this is really the discovery of a continent or merely the discovery of another Captain Cook remains to be seen.

The Montreal Star suggests that "for ex-ministers who really want to flee ungrateful and unappreciative constituencies, the new continent north of Siberia offers many advantages." That is a cool suggestion, but it could not be much colder than the shoulder of Chateauguay.

The Ottawa Journal says;

"A horde of canvassers for the Toronto Globe should invade Chateauguay, for according to that newspaper, every voter in Chateauguay at present has his pockets stuffed with ill-gotten gold—and easy comes easy goes."

INTERCESSION OF THE SAINTS

Archbishop Hamilton's Announcment on Bishop Ingram's Views

Archbishop Hamilton's Views.

Archbishop Hamilton, the Anglican Metropolitan of Canada, to-day made a statement on Bishop Winnington Ingram's sermon on the doctrine of the Invocation of Saints, delivered at the Church Congress in Southampton, England, on Oct. 1. Archbishop Hamilton deferred comment on the cable summary of the sermon, but based his remarks to-day on the report in the Guardian, the official organ of the Church of England.

The gist of Dr. Hamilton's statement is that the bishop had handled a delicate subject in a very able manner, and had said nothing that, rightly interpreted, could be taken as advocating any opinions subversive of the fundamental beliefs of the Anglican Church.

"We of the True Catholic Church," said Dr. Hamilton, "believe that the saints—that is to say, those who have been baptized, and thereby become united to and members of Christ—retain memories when in the spiritual state in Paradise of those they have left behind them in this world, and that it is but natural that the saints will pray for those who have still a corporate existence on earth. We believe also that, being nearer to God, their prayers will have more sincerity and zeal.

"But that is a different doctrine from the Invocation of the Saints. The Roman Catholic Church believes in invocation, that is to say, in actual praying to the saints themselves. But that we think is investing the saints with the power of listening to prayer, which is an attribute of God himself, and one of His most marvelous attributes. Moreover, many great divines of the Church of England maintain that invocation of the saints is the parent of mariolatry, whereby the Virgin Mary is set above all the other saints and made almost the peer of God Himself.

"Thus, while we believe in the communion of saints—and we reiterate our belief every time we repeat the Apostles' Creed—that is quite distinct from invocation. Many people in other churches than the Church of Rome believe in praying to God that their friends or relatives beyond the grave be granted rest, refreshment and light, but not that they may repent. The Roman Catholic Church doctrine of prayer that the dead may repent of their sins is not accepted by us of the true Catholic Church, because we do not and cannot know in what condition the dead are; it may be too late for them to repent on the other side of the grave.

"The whole question is one of extreme delicacy, and the only exception that could be taken to the sermon is that it might just possibly do more harm than good."

RED ROSE TEA "is good tea"

The Dethronement of Douglas

It Didn't Last Long After the Explanation Came.

By JANE INGRAHAM.

Harriet Winthrop belonged to the class of girls who bow to physical strength in the opposite sex. Frail, almost flowerlike in her beauty, the sort of girl who had been protected and served all her life, she yet decorated her tiny morning room with etchings and small statuettes of classic heroes famed for their physical prowess, and she could sit through a veritable blizzard to watch a football match and shout herself hoarse for Ted's college team.

Ted was her brother, and he said that somewhere in Harriet's makeup was a strain from the blood of an ancestral belle who had cheered on her hero in the old tournament days, for the Winthrops could trace their lineage to the tournament days and further, and, even though Mr. Winthrop had lost a large slice of the old family fortune through ill advised investments, they maintained their social standing, lived in rather severe but elegant fashion and held fast to every tradition, including the firm belief that no lady rides in a street car or other public conveyance. She may walk abroad for exercise only, but when calling or shopping the plain, rather old fashioned brougham of the depleted Winthrop stables was brought into service.

That was why when many other girls with more money to spend on shopping tripped merrily up and down the great retail thoroughfare Harriet Winthrop chafed in the Winthrop brougham, caught in a blockade of snarling motormen, sharp faced chauffeurs and obstinate cabbies. The brougham swung to one side, the wheels grating the curb, and Harriet leaned forward to see how close they were to the shop wherein could be found a certain piece of silvery blue gauze marked down to post holiday prices. Then, with a gasp and a shudder, she leaned back in the carriage and closed her eyes. She had forgotten the silvery gauze, the shop, the jam of vehicles — everything save the tall, square shouldered figure of a man, whose entire attention seemed to be centered on the tint of pancakes he was turning in the window of a white front restaurant.

The brougham moved forward a few inches, then several feet. Very soon it would be out of range, so Harriet took one more glimpse at the window to make sure that her eyes had not deceived her. No, it was he, and this time he was actually handling the white aproned waitress a plate piled high with golden brown cakes.

What was Jerry Douglas doing in that window, and how could he bestow upon the white aproned girl precisely the same frank, cordial smile with which he had greeted Harriet at that last dance, after Teddy's team had won through Douglas' clever coaching? She bought half a yard more gauze than she needed and went home firmly convinced that Jerry Douglas had been cooking cakes to pay a wager. That night she went to a dance where many mutual friends gathered; but no one seemed to have heard of the escapade, and she was too proud to make inquiries. The next day she went back to the shop so close to the restaurant. A bit of pale blue velvet ribbon would set off that silver gauze, but she decided that, after all, she did not care whether the silver gauze was developed into a creation or not. Nothing mattered save that her idol had crumbled at her very feet or, more properly speaking, within a few feet of the wheels of her brougham, for there again was Jerry Douglas, turning what she thought must be very fat and indigestible fried biscuits.

So it was not an election wager or anything of that sort. Ah, she knew! He had gone in for sociology. He was studying the condition of the working classes. Next thing he would be living in one of these dreadful settlement houses, holding club meetings for ragamuffins and poor factory girls and writing silly things for magazines—this man whom she had watched with baited breath on the football field, whom she had pictured as sallying forth to pit his magnificent strength, physical and mental, against the magnates of the commercial and financial world.

Cooking cakes in a restaurant window!

Harriet Winthrop walked with firm, deliberate step to her desk and took down from the wall above it a picture showing a group of lusty young men in football attire and also a certain individual picture of a young man with a finely formed head and broad, square shoulders. She thrust the two behind some boxes on the top shelf of her clothespress and then sat down for a good cry.

Of course she might have found out what it all meant if Teddy had been home, but Teddy, after leaving college, had gone to Paris to follow up his studies in naval architecture. Anyhow it did not matter. Of course it had been only a girlish fancy, and then Jerry Douglas has acted rather strangely since he went back to his Virginia home—a few casual notes, no references to his future career, in which she had betrayed an interest, which she now felt was presumption and unmaidenly, and so she cried some more.

And just after she had worked herself into a fine nervous state, from which she would issue forth pallid and forlorn, a messenger brought her a most amazing note. It was from Jerry Douglas, and it calmly invited Miss Winthrop to attend a little supper he was giving at the Empire restaurant in honor of his promotion. It would be served on the upper floor of the restaurant at Thursday midnight, after the rush was over, and would she please come, because Mrs. Ned Landers had agreed to act as a chaperon and every one knew that Mrs. Ned was a host in herself.

Here was a perfectly legitimate avenue of inquiry which even the Winthrop pride might not hesitate to follow, so she bathed her eyes, summoned the Winthrop brougham and drove to Mrs. Ned Landers' smart studio apartment. Of course she could not accept the invitation and she would not decline without making inquiries.

Mrs. Landers, shrewdly reading from the white, tired face that something had gone amiss, made tea directly, and Harriet sipped it appreciatively.

"You know, mother is a bit old fashioned"—

"She even disapproved of studio flats instead of houses?" inquired Mrs. Landers, with dancing eyes.

"She thinks you are the most wonderful manager in the world, but a restaurant supper—I mean that particular sort of restaurant"—

"I understand, and I am just bubbling with the secret. I've been waiting to tell every one for weeks, but Jerry Douglas made me cross my heart and swear no. My dear, he is a hero, the sort you don't often find in this day of spoiled millionaire sons and fawning parasites. When he finished his college course and started to read law with an old friend of his father's down in Virginia he made what was to him an awful discovery. His inheritance had paid only his bare expenses at college. All the little pleasures, accessories, the social end of the game, his mother had made by her own handiwork. She had been doing exquisite embroidery for a woman's exchange and a New York department store to keep him at college as his father and grandfather had been kept before him.

"His first feeling, being a Virginia man of chivalric pride, was deep humiliation. I am afraid he was a bit hard on the little mother for daring to do such a thing. Then he turned his back on the law and came north, going straight to the father of a youngster he had known at college, the sort who roll in wealth made in a single generation. The boy's father has all sorts of commercial interests, including a chain of quick lunch counters, and he promptly offered Jerry the chance to act as cashier in one of those dreadful lunch rooms."

Harriet was leaning forward, drinking in every word oblivious to the fact that Mrs. Ned was studying her face with matronly amusement.

"Well, this particular lunch room was in a badly disorganized state, and Jerry not only made changes, but he fired the cook, who had been making trouble, and cooked himself until he could get a decent man. He stopped quarreling among the waitresses—and now he is going to Mexico for the man who was just trying him out in a lunch room, and, what is more, he is going on a most ticklish and important mission."

Harriet leaned back with a sigh that might have meant reaction or something deeper.

"And so he has asked just six of us to have that little supper, for which he agrees to cook all sorts of things, from pancakes to something he calls butter cakes. Anyhow, it can't be worse for our digestion than some of the Newburg messes our friend makes in chafing dishes. Will you go?"

Harriet rose instantly.

"If you won't think me abrupt, I'm going home this minute to telephone my acceptance."

Wise Mrs. Ned did not suggest that in her hallway was a telephone instrument, which Harriet had ofttimes used, and the girl went her way. Later as she hung up the telephone receiver in the Winthrop library her eyes seemed to shine like diamonds, and a soft flush mounted to her pale gold hair. And from the library she went straight to her own room, climbed up to a clothespress shelf and lugged forth two photographs. Then, with her chin resting in the palms of her hands, she sat down, studying them with eyes that still shone with the light that once must have brightened the face of the ancestral belle at the tournament.

Largest One Piece Flagpole.

What is claimed to be the largest one piece flagpole in the world is to be erected on the grounds of the provincial courthouse in Vancouver, B. C. The pole is a British Columbia fir, 205 feet in length, weighing approximately five tons after being dressed and allowed to season six to eight months. It will be set in a foundation of concrete ten feet deep, giving it a height of 195 feet above the ground after being placed in position.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

For Insect Bites.

Bites and stings may be bathed in a strong solution of baking soda or ammonia and water. Extract of which hazel, diluted with one-half water or even a little stronger, is useful. With some of the irritating rashes powdering thickly with cornstarch or any good unscented powder may bring relief by excluding the air.

A Dish of Tea.

"Dish" throughout the eighteenth century was a colloquialism for cup. In fashionable houses at first, and for long, tea was drunk from a cup without a handle brought from China. The vessel was termed a dish. When the Chinese cup was first copied by English potters, the convenience of a handle was added. The saucer also was brought from China. It received the name because of its resemblance to the English saucer, a platter in which sauce was served. The familiar gibe, "saucer eyes," was originally inspired by the sauce saucer long before Lord Arlington gave the first tea party in England in Arlington house, where Buckingham palace stands, at the restoration period.—London Chronicle.

Clearing Up History.

As a part of the squabble over the world's decisive battles a reader comes forward with the statement that Waterloo decided nothing. If Napoleon Bonaparte had won the battle he would have been crushed a few days later. Yet everybody concerned went through the fight as if it really meant something. It is strange how much clearer we see some things the further we get away from them.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

His Fad.

Love In the Stock Market

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

About the close of the last century, when shares on the stock market were rising and falling like the waves of the sea under a storm, James Rigdon was for a time a power in Wall street. When it was reported that Rigdon was selling a stock everybody rushed to sell. When he bought the price would rise like the thermometer on a July morning.

Rigdon was a bachelor, and as soon as it became known among his women friends that he knew what stocks were going up and what were going down he received more attention than the handsomest man in New York. One of these ladies, Miss Martindale, he wished to claim as his own, but despite all he could do he couldn't find out whether she had any use for him other than to learn how to make money in stocks.

One evening while with her she importuned him to give her a tip on some stock that was about to be "put up." He explained to her that when he boomed a stock, if it were known that he was booming it, it would rise in value, but the trouble was that, when he wished to unload, the moment it was known that he had begun to sell, down would go the market and he would be left with a lot of "undigested securities" on his hands. He was about to put up the market price on a certain stock, but he could not take her into his scheme, for if it were known that she was buying and selling by his advice it would result disastrously for him.

"But I won't tell," she said.

"Can I rely on you?"

"Certainly."

"Very well. Buy Onarora Copper. It is selling at 7 cents a share."

"How awfully kind of you!"

"I can rely on you?"

"Surely."

She gave his hand a special pressure when he left her and, running to the telephone, ordered him to purchase 1,000 shares of Onarora Copper. He did so without disturbing the market price of the stock half a point. Then she fell to thinking that her father and her brother and her sister would be delighted to participate in her good fortune, so she told them she had bought Onarora. There was no need for them to ask her why, because they knew she had for a long while been endeavoring to get a tip out of Mr. Rigdon. Surely there was no breach of confidence in this.

So the Martindale family put what spare money they had in Onarora Copper, and each told his broker his reasons for doing so. Each broker had a number of speculators hanging about his office who were given the tip. The stock rose slowly and beautifully like a balloon sailing up toward the sky. Now and again it would fall back, a few thousand shares being thrown upon the market.

"Manipulation," said those in the secret. "The price is rising too rapidly for him. He hasn't got all he wants. Wait a bit."

By and by these sales grew smaller, and for some time the stock ceased to be offered. Miss Martindale asked Mr. Rigdon if it were not time to sell. He replied, "Not yet." And the stock went higher. Then suddenly it began to tumble. Every one who had been speculating on the Rigdon tip began to get "from under" except the Martindale family. When Onarora had sunk to the price they paid for it Miss Martindale sent for Mr. Rigdon and asked him if the boom was over.

"Yes, it is," he replied, "and I have unloaded all I had, some 40,000 shares, at a fair price."

Miss Martindale looked appalled.

"I supposed," she said coldly, "that you were to let me know when to sell as well as to buy."

"That would not have accorded with my plans. I told you when to buy, and you told others. I knew you would and that your tips to others would put up the stock. If I had told you when to sell it would have spoiled my scheme."

"In other words, you have used me to your own advantage. You have not only disappointed me, but you have induced me to disappoint others."

"How have I induced you to disappoint others?"

"Why, they knew I bought the stock and surmised that I did so by your advice."

"And you did not tell them the secret. Well, you had no occasion to tell them. I believe that, in all, you and your family hold 3,000 shares. Am I right?"

"You are."

"Well, when the stock reached its highest stage I sold 3,000 shares for your account and also sold 3,000 shares more for you to be delivered within thirty days after the sale. You and your family have made on the rise of the stock $12,000 and as much more on the fall."

Miss Martindale stood looking at Mr. Rigdon with astonishment, the cold look on her face breaking into a smile. Then she put out her hand. Mr. Rigdon improved the opportunity by putting the other hand around her waist and, drawing her to him, kissed her, at the same time proposing a new deal by which she should always profit by his operations.

Illustrations of gold on one side of a scale and love on the other, gold outweighing love, are very popular. The above is an instance where gold was used to entice love.

Mr. Howells' Test.

W. D. Howells in Harper's challenges the "gallant" men who do not like to see women vote lest men may treat them less gallantly by asking them these questions: Do you always give up your seat in the street car to the strap hanging lady? Do you always take off your hat in the elevator where there are ladies? What are your views on votes for women? If the man does not proclaim his chivalry by answering "Yes" to the first two and opposes suffrage he suggests disfranchisement for him, but if he says "Yes" in answer to the first two and still says women ought not to vote Mr. Howells suggests that he be excluded from the privilege until he can bring two competent witnesses to prove that that they have seen him give his seat to a strap hanger or take off his hat in an elevator where ladies are present.

Points for Mothers

Teaching Children Value of Property.

A great many parents now give their children a regular amount each week for "spending money." The children themselves refer to it as their "allowance." While they are young this is usually a small matter, and the pennies regularly given are not thought to be of enough consequence for the parents to demand that an account shall be kept of them. In this they make a mistake, and from the first the children should be taught to account for the "allowance." In one family where this plan was made and adhered to the outcome was so satisfactory that the parents were willing to add to the allowance materially.

In another family, when the children reached a certain age of discretion, the allowance was made large enough to cover the small accessories of dress—hair ribbon, gloves, stockings, etc., for the girls and cravats, socks, caps, belts, etc., in the case of the boys. The care of their clothing increased most remarkably under this plan. Hair ribbons were rolled over bottles at night to keep them in shape. Cravats were kept more carefully. Caps were not thrown anywhere nor gloves forgotten.

All property was much more respected after its value was understood. Gifts of this nature at Christmas and birthdays were received with enthusiasm where previously they had been taken as a matter of course. The allowance was supposed to be large enough to cover the necessaries and luxuries, but the latter could not be supplied at the expense of the former. In a single item, that of railroad fares (for this family lived in the suburbs of a city), a big saving was made.

BLACK, GREEN or MIXED

As Koreans Shop.

Shopping in Korea is a very grave and solemn task and occupies the master of the house the greater part of the day. In the market here he purchases his provisions, cooking utensils, linen suits, hats, sandals, tobacco, and the native drink, a liquor obtained from fermented rice. Only one article of the same kind is purchased from a single store. It would be an offense against Korean etiquette to buy a dozen at a time, as this would deplete the stock too quickly and give the shopkeeper the trouble and work of restocking before he was ready! It will therefore be seen that wholesale orders are not welcomed in this odd country; "little and often" appears to be the Golden Rule in buying.—Wide World Magazine.

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

"MINER" WRIGHT COUNTED OUT

But Will Commence Training at the Nesbitt Arena

FOR TWO MONTHS

Andrew Morison, charged with being drunk and disorderly in a public place, was assessed $5.75 or fifteen days in jail.

David Henry who was remanded last week charged with vagrancy was let go on condition that he would leave town.

"The same old Murphy" said the Magistrate in regard to Edward Murphy, who was drunk in a public place. Murphy hadn't been in court for over four months, so the usual fine of $2 was imposed.

"MINER" WRIGHT.

Wm. Wright was in police court this morning for assaulting Special Officer Weller and resisting arrest. He elected to be tried summarily and pleaded guilty.

Special Officer Weller said Wright was at the C.P.R. depot and was asleep. He woke him up and told him if he didn't have a ticket to get one or get out. Wright refused and they had a fistic encounter in which he (Weller) received a right hook to the left eye and a kick in the chest. He finally arrested the man with the aid of two policemen.

Wright said he was a miner from Queensborough en route to Norwood. Weller did not tell him he was an officer but just walked in and ordered him out, and when he refused Weller bit him on the thumb and nearly bit the end off his little finger. He denied kicking Weller.

The magistrate said a decent man would have bought a ticket so he gave him one month in jail. The prisoner was led away paying all kinds of compliments to the C. P. R officer for his chewing ability.

SOME BAD BOYS

Ladies Were Frightened by Their Actions

Several prowlers made things a little troublesome for a south-end home last evening. About eight o'clock two men were seen prowling around this residence where the inmates have the misfortune to be without the service of a male leader and they amused themselves with tapping the windows a la holowe'en style. It is needless to say that the ladies were frightened and the police communicated with. When the police arrived the offenders had beat a hasty retreat. It should be remembered that the penalty for window peeping is rather heavy.

MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED.

INSPECTOR AND GARBAGE COLLECTORS APPEAR BEFORE COMMITTEE

Number of Complaints Are Replied to — Citizens Should not Place Paper With Garbage

Hereafter, the Sanitary Inspector will submit his list of complaints relating to the garbage system, to the contractors, and they will supply Mr. Spence with a list of grievances, if they have any.

The Property Committee heard both sides of the case at a meeting last night. The Sanitary Inspector reported on the various complaints made to him, and afterwards the contractors were called to the meeting and faced the music.

Mr. Spence claimed that the garbage wagons were not fitted with covers, and also that the wagons leaked, and the men did not pick up the garbage which fell from the wagons. If paper was found in the garbage receptacles the garbage was not taken. The tops were not replaced.

Ashes had not been collected at the Peterborough Club. There had been cases of incivility on the part of the men.

He did not think that the mere fact of a little paper being in the garbage was sufficient to cause the men to leave the garbage. Garbage had been overlooked and not collected in some places.

Mr. Spence had communicated with Council, asking that payments be withheld until sanctioned by him. The agreement expressly provides that the work must be done to the satisfaction of the Sanitary Inspector.

THE CONTRACTORS.

Mr. Hare was spokesman on behalf of himself and Mr. Graham, his partner. He admitted that there had been cases where the garbage might have been overlooked. In regard to the paper, he said they did not want it mixed with the garbage, on account of the fact that the garbage was fed to the pigs, and it was not wanted when a sale of garbage could be made. He said there was more garbage with paper than without.

It was remarked that possibly some of the people did not know that paper should not be placed in the garbage. (What is meant is that people should not wrap the garbage in paper before placing it in the receptacle.)

Mr. Hare suggested that the people might secure a small strainer as they do in Toronto, and drain the water from potato peelings, etc. He also claimed that while complaints made to Mr. Spence were made known to the contractors, their own complaints did not receive this consideration.

One case spoken of was that of a citizen who did not place the garbage on the street line. The contractors at first refused to remove it, their argument being that the poor man across the street would want them to go into his lane. However, for a fee of 5 cents per week they agreed to take the garbage. When the account was presented he would not pay. The contractors stopped calling.

Another point was that some people did not have their garbage out in time. Mr. Hare said that if all garbage was in its place, it would be collected.

Regarding the ashes, Mr. Hare claimed that they would remove any amount that could be moved in the first place by the householder. The agreement says that receptacles of convenient size must be used. The contractors are favorable to a half barrel.

As to the tops not being replaced, Mr. Hare explained that the garbage wagon calls first, and is not replaced as it is by this means the next man is informed that the garbage has been collected. He promised to cover the wagons during the trip to the dump.

MURDER OR SUICIDE?

Body of Prospector Found With Revolver Nearby.

COBALT, Oct. 14.—A prospector whose identity has not yet been established has been found dead, half-way between Dane Station, on the T. & N. O. Railway, and Larder Lake Camp, with a bullet through his head. A revolver lay within a few feet of him. He was found Monday [illegible] by Jim Crowes, another prospector, lying beside the road, quite dead.

The man is 27 or 28 years of age, 5 feet 8 inches in height, light complexioned and weighing about 1[illegible] pounds. His body is being left where it was found until the coroner arrives.

There is nothing to indicate whether the man was murdered or fell by his own hand.

Sir Luke Fildes is one of the best known of modern painters, and his state portraits of King Edward VII and Queen Alexandra will carry his name down to posterity. But by far his most popular picture is "The Doctor," which now reposes in the Tate Gallery. The pathos of this picture has appealed to millions, but few are aware of the manner in which it was painted, and the trouble to which the artist went in order to get the desired effect.

An entire cottage was fitted up in the artist's studio, and the dying child was represented by his own child. To obtain the figure of the medical man, one model sat for the hair, another for the eyes, and a third for the clothes, while the late Mr. Val Prinsep sat for the beard. After arranging all these details, Sir Luke Fildes states that he "practically lived with and for the picture for six months." But such a painstaking method met with a fitting reward, for the picture is admitted to be one of the most successful ever painted.

Gladstone and Wet Sponges.

It was not without just cause that Mr. Gladstone's name was given to the handy "Gladstone bag." The grand old man was master of every detail of the art of packing. At a country house they were discussing at breakfast the right way to pack a sponge bag when the sponge had been used and was consequently waterlogged. Mr. Gladstone, who apparently had been wholly absorbed in his morning's correspondence, suddenly closed the discussion by informing the party that they were all wrong. "The only proper method," said he, "is to wrap it in your bath towel and stamp upon it. Then put it in your sponge bag. You will find it perfectly dry."

"Executioner to Her Majesty."

The actual signboard of John Calcraft, the famous public executioner who during his long term of office carried out the extreme penalty of the law on many notorious murderers, may be seen in Mme. Tussaud's exhibition. The board used to be outside Calcraft's shop. It is framed and has rudely painted upon it in large block letters the following extraordinary inscription: "J. Calcraft, Boot and Shoemaker. Executioner to her Majesty." Surmounting the frame is the royal coat of arms. John Calcraft, who was born in 1800 and died in 1879, was executioner from 1828 until 1871.—London Standard.

Customs Board Rulings.

OTTAWA, Oct. 15.—The customs board, on the strength of appeals from rulings of collectors, has made interpretations of the following items of the customs tariff:

Tractor hitches and engine guides declared to be dutiable under tariff item 447; metal adapted in form and composition for use as nickel anodes declared dutiable under tariff item 358; basic furnace slag, ground, declared to be dutiable under tariff item 663 and in effect from 9th November 1913, fire brick purchased before 13th May, 1913, and entered for duty prior to 13th of July, 1913, shall be dutiable under the regulations in force 12th of May, 1913.

Tea Drinking Habit in London.

Nowhere is the "tea habit" quite so universal as in London. English people have always had the habit, but it was not until the last decade that they indulged therein in the sight of all men.

Every pastry shop and bakery is crowded nowadays at 4.30 with ladies drinking tea and eating cakes; the restaurants look to the tea hour as one of their great sources of income; there are tea pavilions in all the parks and public gardens and in all the streets which are the hives of men who live by brain work, the tea shops have sprung up like mushrooms and are driving the bars out of existence.

In the clubs the man who drinks a whisky and soda in the afternoon is the exception; the man who drinks tea is the rule.

VERDICT OF NOT GUILTY

Belmont Man Acquitted on Serious Charge

Wilson Parcels, the Belmont man charged with rape was found not guilty by the jury, at the Fall Assizes yesterday afternoon, after a deliberation of two hours.

G. N. Gordon defended the prisoner and Crown Prosecutor Grant, of Toronto conducted the prosecution.

Hannah Ellis gave evidence to the effect that she was a resident of Belmont as was also the prisoner. The section of country was not very thickly populated. She understood that the prisoner's mother had sent for her, and as a result, she went about nine o'clock on the 23rd of June to the home of the prisoner.

Witness described the way she went to the above place. On the journey she passed her brother, and the prisoner's brother was digging post holes. The prisoner was on the side of a hill nearby and asked her to wait. They walked to the house and she left shortly afterwards and Parcels met her going on her way home. On entering the wood the prisoner committed the offence, she said.

Cross examination by G. N. Gordon witness admitted having had relations with the prisoner on other occasions. A child was born.

G. N. Gordon—"Why did you go to the home of Parcels on June 23?"

"Because I was sent for."

"You went there frequently, I suppose."

"Yes sir."

"How did it happen that the prisoner went with you?"

"I don't know."

"Were the boys in sight when you went back?"

"No, sir."

"Did you look?"

"Yes, I did and I couldn't see them as they changed their positions."

"What did he say to you?"

"He promised to marry me."

"You knew the boys were near?"

"Yes, I thought they were near."

"You did not cry out?"

"No."

"When did you inform your mother?"

"One week after."

"Did you smile at him this morning when he came by?"

"No, I made a face at him."

Crown Prosecutor—"Why didn't you call out?"

"I didn't think there was anyone near."

Henry Ellis, brother of former witness, testified that he saw his sister and Parcels in company.

Crown Prosecutor—"Was it possible to hear anything from the woods?"

"It was possible."

"Apparently, to her manner, nothing had happened to his sister," said witness.

G. N. Gordon—"It would be possible to hear a scream where you were working?"

"I don't know how far away she was."

Mrs Mary Parcels, mother of prisoner, told how Hannah Ellis had come to her place for a skirt plan. Her son went out first and then the girl left. They walked together as far as witness could see. Her son was gone about twenty minutes.

Crown Prosecutor—"It it you who is keeping those two from getting married?"

"No, sir."

John Parcels said that he could have seen anything that had taken place.

Cross-examined by the Crown Prosecutor, he said that he could not tell what happened after he went to dinner.

Wilson Parcels, the prisoner, said that he saw Hannah Ellis coming to his home on the morning of June 23rd. He went on to the house with the girl. He came to go to call the boys to dinner and the girl followed and they went together as far as the fence. Here they stopped and Hannah asked him to drop her a card. He denied the charge against him. There was no suggestion of anything wrong on that day.

The defendant's counsel then addressed the jury, and asked that the prisoner be acquitted, as it was more of a case for the civil courts. The weakest kind of evidence had been shown and he asked for the prisoner's acquital.

In addressing the jury the Crown laid the facts of the case before them, and told them of their duty of bringing in a verdict. He emphasized the fact that the defence had given no reason why the defendant had gone into the box and told a deliberate falsehood.

It is better for a girl to be given in marriage than it is for a man to be sold.

WILL ENTERTAIN THE AGED OF THE PROTESTANT HOME

Young People's Societies Plan Entertainment for Friday Evenings Will Purchase a Piano

The Peterborough Protestant Home was the mecca last evening for a large and representative gathering of the Young Peoples' Societies of the various Protestant Churches of the City, to the number of about 150—the object being to arrive at some feasible plan whereby the Young People of the city city could in some measure brighten the long winter months for the aged inmates of that Institution.

The different Societies on arrival were welcomed by Mrs. Rogers and Miss Lancaster. Mr. G. N. Baker was requested to act as Chairman for the evening, and Mr. G. H. Williamson, Secretary. Organizing for the winter's work was first proceeded with, the assembly voting unanimously that the different Young Peoples' Societies in the city entertain the Home alternately each Friday evening during the coming months.

A proposition to furnish the Home with a piano by the Young People was received with enthusiasm, and subscriptions amounting to $140 was subscribed at once. This it is felt will be greatly augmented when the various Societies get together, and that the amount required will be raised in a short time.

The following representatives were chosen to act as an Executive Committee to take the various matters up:

Anglican—Mrs. Brewer.
Presbyterian—Mr. Hill.
Methodist—Mr. Gamble.
Bethany Tabernacle—Mr Telford.
Baptists—Mr. W. C. Barry.

A meeting of this Committee will be held in the near future to carry out the suggestions of the meeting.

After the singing of a few familiar hymns the gathering was entertained with light refreshments, after which Mrs. Rogers, on behalf of the Board, in a few well chosen words, thanked the Young People for their manifest interest and good wishes. The gathering was then dismissed after the singing of the Doxology.

WIFE TELLS OF HUSBANDS CONDUCT TOWARD HER; ACTION FOR ALIMONY

By mutual consent of the parties concerned, alimony of $100 per annum, with the wife's right to the dower, from the house, and the defendant to pay the costs of action, was agreed upon by the counsels, in the Kearns vs. Kearns alimony case.

No evidence was heard this afternoon.

The alimony action in which Mrs. Mary Kearns had entered suit against her husband, Frank Kearns, was proceeded with at this morning's session of the high court sittings.

Mr. G. N. Gordon for the plaintiff; Stewart and O'Connor of Lindsay, for defendant.

Mrs Mary Kearns, the plaintiff gave evidence to the effect that she and her husband were married two weeks when the first difficulty arose.

G. N. Gordon— "What was the cause?"

"I told him I was going for a walk and he said, alright. I went upstairs to get ready, and coming down again my husband seemed angry. I told him I wouldn't go if he didn't want me to, but he said 'go ahead.' I went for a walk, and on coming home again I found the doors locked. I was out in the cold for over two hours before I managed to get in.

"I was standing on the varandah when he came home. I asked him where he had been and he commenced to use abusive language.

"How long did that last?"

About fifteen minutes."

"What did you say to him?

"I asked him what the matter was He told me that I hand I asked him to go down town, and that I had gone down to meet someone else."

"Did he have any cause for jealousy?"

"No sir."

"Another time, he abused me for failing to meet him at a certain place," said witness.

One instance recited by witness was to the effect that on one occasion a couple of friends came to visit her, and after they left, he called them abusive names, and threatened to burn the house, and even went so far as to pour coal oil on the floor.

"Any other occasions?"

"Yes, one night he got drunk and tore things upside down."

"Where did he get the drink?"

"Down cellar."

"Any other occasion?"

"One time, when he was going to Ennismore he wanted me to go with him. I told him I would go as far as my aunt's He then told me I would have to watch for him when he was coming back, and when I asked when he would be returning he said he didn't know, and I told him I didn't think I'd go. Another fracas resulted at this

"What names did he call you?"

Witness, tearfully, mentioned some of the abusive names he had called her.

"He also abused me on several occasions over his mail carrier's application," said witness.

Witness cited an occasion where her husband threatened her with a knife. He often complained of cooking, and one day when he was abusing me I told him I would take the law. He struck me.

"Name some other occasion."

"One time he started to abuse me and then his eyes blazed and he got white and started to go to the pantry for the knife. I was frightened and ran out of the house and stayed away for three days."

"At this time had you ever told anyone of your troubles?"

"No."

"How much money did he give you?"

"Not very much."

"You also assisted him with his mail route?"

"For nearly three months."

"What means did you have to clothe yourself?"

"I took in dressmaking."

"Did you ask him occasionaly for money?"

"Yes, he would tell me he needed it all himself."

"What about this law suit?"

"Oh when he was engaged in a law suit with his son and he would wake up in the night and would swear at his son."

"You were ill once?"

"Yes, in the summer of 1912, with spinal trouble."

"Who attended you?"

"Dr. Gallivan."

"Where were you?"

"St. Joseph's Hospital."

"You were ill after you came home?"

"Yes, he abused me once when I was on the varandah and I told him I couldn't stand it, and he still swore. He told me he would leave the place and he went to pack a suit case. He left and told me he would never come back to me."

"When did he come back?"

"Next morning at eight o'clock."

"Who got your meals?"

"The neighbors would get me something when he was away."

"He never provided help for you then?"

"No."

"What caused this illness?"

"His treatment of me."

"You were at St. Joseph's the second time?"

"Yes."

"Did it improve your health?"

"No I was only in a public ward."

"Why?"

"Because my husband had forbid them putting me in a private ward."

"After you got home, how was his temper?"

"No better, he would tell me I wasn't sick at all."

"Was that after you were struck with the cup?"

"Yes."

"Tell us about this cup?"

"He struck me in the back with it."

"Anything else?"

"Before this I had asked him to go and get some water and he told me I might speak civil."

I took some water in his face and he grabbed me and twisting me around and tried to choke me. I managed to get away and he then hit me in the back with the cup.

"He broke into your room didn't he?"

"Yes."

"Was the door locked?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Because I was afraid of him."

"You went to see Mr. Dumble?"

"Yes."

"On his advice you went to the hospital?"

"Yes, the Nicholls Hospital."

"What was the state of your health when you got home from the hospital?"

"Better."

"How was his temper?"

"About the same."

"Things went on happily or unhappily all winter?"

"Not very well."

"These, continued up till the time you left your husband?"

"Yes."

Witness told of another instance that occurred in July, how her husband had taken her out to a place and then had driven off and left her there for a week. She was brought back to the city by the party where she was staying.

"The morning I left him he threatened to hit me with the stove poker, and also slammed the kitchen door in my face, hitting me in the face."

"That happened on the morning you left?"

"Yes."

"What did you do after?"

"I went down town with my cousin."

"You left him about the 13th of July then?"

"Yes."

"He has offered to take you back. Why don't you want to go?"

"I am afraid of him."

"Did you do your duty as a wife should?"

"I did."

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

L. V. O'Connor—"You called him a dirty old brute?"

"Yes."

"And a dirty old cur?"

"Yes, on several occasions."

"You accused him of having killed his first wife?"

"I did not. I had heard that his son had said that had it not been for his father, his mother would be alive to-day."

"And your husband went down town the next day after the second row?"

"Yes."

"He bought you a coat?"

"Yes."

"It cost about $80?"

"I guess so."

"Then he was good to you that day?"

"Well, yes."

"You speak of your husband going to the pantry?"

"Yes."

"The knife was in the pantry?"

"Yes."

"Are you sure he went for a knife?"

"I thought so."

"Then it was only imagination?"

"He had taken the knife to me two or three days before, and I thought he was going to repeat it."

"Where did you get the $21 you had when you left?"

"I made it by sewing."

"Did you do any sewing this year?"

"Yes."

"How much?"

"About four or five dollars' worth."

"Your husband was doing fairly well for you then, in providing medical treatment for you?"

"He wasn't."

"After you came back from the hospital your husband used to look after the house?"

"There was nobody else."

"You had a large number of friends and neighbors around to help you?"

"No, sir."

"How many times did your husband wave the poker at you?"

"A number of times."

"And never struck you."

"No."

"About the door."

"He broke the door."

"Did he know you were in the room?"

"He must have known."

The stillness of the court room was broken by a call "can I go home, please?" The above was from one of the witnesses confined in the witness room who had tired of waiting.

"Your husband complained about you leaving the dishes unwashed."

"Sometimes."

"Why was this?"

"I don't know."

"You struck your husband, didn't you?"

"I threw the rice water on him."

G. N. Gordon—"Did the time of your going through the fence hurt your back?"

"No."

A NEIGHBOR'S STORY.

Mrs Mary Tedford, a neighbor, said she saw the plaintiff run out on the verandah in her night dress, crying, and her husband walking back and forth to the stable. She saw the plaintiff through the window once and he was using abusive language and in a threatening attitude. Mrs. Kearns left the house shortly afterward.

G. N. Gordon—"What did Kearns do after she left?"

"He was going around, searching, as if he had lost something."

"Mr. Kearns had instructed me one day to go and tell Mrs. Kearns to come back that there would be no more fighting.

"I came back and told him that his wife couldn't, as she was too ill and he said that he would clear the place out."

E. V. O'Connor—"What did you see in the bed room before the light went on?"

"Nothing."

"You were about 150 feet away."

"Yes."

"And you heard him swear at that distance?"

"I did, for it was a calm night."

"Did you hear her say anything?"

"Yes."

"What?"

"I am going down to Dumble."

His Honor—"Was he intoxicated?"

"He looked as if he were."

E. V. O'Connor—"About this 9 o'clock affair?"

"I heard her scream three times and run out on the verandah in her night dress."

The court then adjourned.

TWO LETTERS

The following letters were produced in court as written by the husband:

Peterboro, Sept. 23 13.

Well Min.—I have had a hard time to make $1.50 a day and you can spend five. I have made up my mind to tell you to come home and keep away from that crowd on Smith st. and I would use you right, and let the past drop, but when I got the letter from Dumble and I went to Gordon and am not in the least frightened, I will go from court to court while there is a shingle on the house and don't think you can frighten me. I aint that class, and I will meet Dumble as soon as you like I have a man to swear that he had seen them take the bundle out of my place and can make them say what it was. You will hear soon,

FRANK KEARNS.

LETTER No. 2

September 25, 13.

Well Min.—I write this now to ask you to forgive me and forget the past as I will. Maggie went to see you this morning and they would not let her in. Min., I promised Maggie that if you would come home that I would use you right and not say a cross word to you, and be as kind to you as I was the day I married you, and I will. Do now, Min, trust me this time. We are both letting our temper get the start of us, and this will not happen again to me. Dumble and the rest of them is not after our good, it is is our money and you know it.

Now for God's sake come home and anything you ask for you will get. I will send you papers and a stamp and I want you to write as soon as you get this. Min, if this law starts it will mean your life and mine so let it drop and you will not be sorry. All I want you to do is to stay away from those people on Smith street. Now Min, if you come home I will pay all costs, and you will find a change. I did not sleep any last night and I cried all night and this morning if you don't come home. Maggie talked of some clothes; I will send them.

Goodbye,

FRANK KEARNS.

THE CUCKOOS VINDICATED.

One Slander About Their Being Bad Parents Disproved.

It has been asserted many times that cuckoos are exceedingly bad parents, but investigation does not prove this. As is well known, the cuckoo of various species intrusts the hatching of its eggs and the rearing of its young to other birds. Despite this it is authoritatively declared that both parents continue to be interested in their eggs and spend their time in their neighborhood until the young birds have their feathers. The hen cuckoo watches the bird in whose nest she proposes that the usurper shall be reared until it has started sitting. She then takes her own egg from the ground into her claws and flies to the chosen nest. From this she drives the legitimate owner, who, in the attempt to defend its property, occasionally causes the cuckoo to let fall its egg. Nine times out of ten, however, the intruder contrives to put its precious burden into the nest, and to make room for it by pushing out one or two of the other eggs.

In due course the evicted bird returns to the nest and, not suspecting the substitution which has taken place, sits. Meantime the cuckoo billets her other eggs — sometimes as many as five—on other birds in the neighborhood, never putting more than one egg in each nest, as she knows full well that if two of her youngsters were together they would injure each other. When two cuckoo's eggs are found in the same nest it is certain that they have been left there by two hen cuckoos. Each day the cuckoos visit the various nests containing their eggs.

The hatching of the cuckoo's eggs takes from 12 to 13 days and the young bird is scarcely out of the shell when it is making ferocious demands for food. For two days it is helpless, but on the third day is extraordinarily active. As soon as it is able to do so it pushes the other eggs out of the nest. Should these eggs have been hatched it forces itself under the young birds and by flapping its wings flings them out. Then, having the nest to itself, it clamors for an enormous quantity of food, with which the parents of its adoption supply it unstintingly.

When the nest grows too small for it the young cuckoo rests on a branch, still clamoring for food. So it continues until it is ready to take flight to other climes. Such is the watchfulness of the parent cuckoos that they are in attendance in the neighborhood of the nests while their youngsters are hatching out and remain on guard until those youngsters have got their feathers. The parent birds always return to the same place at the time of mating and try to find the birds which hatched their eggs during previous seasons.

OTTAWA, [illegible] J. D. Hazen will [illegible] representatives of the Dominion Marine Association here on Friday to discuss with them the need of steamboat regulations and the suggested changes in the rules of the road for navigation on the great lakes, in order that the Canadian rules may conform with those of the United States.

Milady's Mirror

The Graceful Figure.

All beauty must contain expression, and grace must therefore have both action and repose. If this were not true then there would be no control and control of the body, both mental and physical forces, is the secret of grace. This should be particularly taken into consideration in the matter of standing and walking, says Abigail Moore.

Few women do these things well. They either slump the chest and shoulders so that the backbone tries to poke itself outward all the way, or else they throw up the chest and hold it there, tense and strained, secure in the consciousness that they are performing a duty they owe to themselves.

That curve in the spine as made by either of these attitudes is conducive to great and lasting injury. So also is another attitude just as frequently assumed by those who have never learned how to stand properly. I refer to that which brings an exaggerated inward curve to the spine in the region of the "small of the back."

Women waste strength and energy appallingly anyhow, and their unhealthful way of walking, standing and sitting is a constant drain on their nervous forces, constantly sapping their vitality; hence if you have not given the subject serious thought you will be impelled now to pause and reflect. Consider that most of the day is expended in sitting, standing or walking, and then think again to what importance it is that those acts should be so performed as to conserve energy rather than waste it.

When you sit the muscles should be relaxed, the chair holding the dead weight of the body, but when you walk all the muscles awake to attention. The shoulder, hip and ankle should be in line, the chest up and out, the head raised so that the eyes should look straight ahead. The step should be firm, but not heavy, one foot striking the ground without any muscular help from the other. Deep breathing should be and is an accompaniment of the really healthful, graceful walk.

Involuntarily the exercise stimulates breathing, but if special attention is given to breathing deeply the walker will experience a buoyancy and uplift otherwise lacking. Let breathing, like the stepping, be even, rhythmical.

Let the play of muscles be harmonious, directed. Feel yourself light. But, there! Do not mistake a mincing gait for what is meant by lightness. By experiment you will be able to discover the right stride, and then, walking properly, the whole body is strengthened and the mind cannot fail to be uplifted. There is nothing like walking to give one mental poise.

The Woolsack.

The woolsack is an early symbol of the Lord Chancellor's office. It is reminiscent of the days when wool was Britain's staple product and consists of an ottoman couch stuffed with wool to represent the importance of this commodity. While acting as Speaker of the House of Lords the Lord Chancellor sits on the woolsack.

Law For Tinkers.

What was known as the "Tinkers' Act" was passed during the latter part of the reign of Edward I., and was meant as a protection for the general public against the extortionate charges of tinkers. The following is a translation of a portion of this peculiar measure from the Norman French of the period:—

"All persons earning a livelihood from the tinkering, mending, and dealing in all sorts of metal vessels, whether for use in cooking or as ornamental to the houses of the inhabitants of this country, are, by virtue of this law, sanctioned and approved of by his Majesty Edward I., to take warning that they must not under any pretext or excuse whatever charge more than is legally due for any work done. Thus, to wit, two pennies per vessel of two gallon size, and a penny over and above this sum for vessels larger. Furthermore, it is enacted that no tinker shall keep or retain any article entrusted to him more than one day and a half, the penalty for such retention being confinement in an underground vault, with scant food, and forfeiture of all future rights to derive a living from his calling."

MYSTERY FLAGS.

Trophies That Are Souvenirs of Long Forgotten Battles.

In the midst of that wonderful collection of the souvenirs of battle that are on permanent exhibition in Trophy hall at the Naval academy in Annapolis are the nation's unknown trophies. Flags that were captured in now forgotten engagements are hung in the cases side by side with those whose glorious history is known.

Two of these souvenirs of forgotten battles are British flags. One is a jack marked Avon and nothing more, the other is the ensign of a warship and is marked Bereford. From the condition of both of these flags it is supposed that they date back to the war of 1812, but history gives no record of ships bearing those names being sent to American waters by Great Britain.

Another of the mystery flags is the "814" flag. In great white figures this number appears on a field of blue, and the entire flag is bordered with red. From some engagement in the war with the Moorish pirates the flag that the officers at Annapolis came to call the "house flag" seems to have come. Yet no one knows where that battle was fought or under what circumstances of heroic sacrifice it was added to the long list of the trophies of our naval victories.—Christian Herald.

Origin of King's Counsel.

King's counsel has the great Bacon as the founder of the order. He had no inclination to be made a "serjeant" and persuaded Queen Elizabeth to appoint him "queen's counsel extraordinary." James I. granted to Bacon a patent, confirming his status as "one of our counsel learned in the law," as K. C.'s are still officially designated. An annual salary of £40 was originally attached to the position and was received by all "silks" down to 1831 when parliament abolished the salary together with the allowance for stationery and bags. The receipt of a salary by K. C.'s meant that they had accepted an office of profit under the crown and those who were members of parliament had to seek re-election.—London Tatler.

Bomb Explosion In New York.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Despite the recent round-up of Italians suspected of being responsible for most of the bomb outrages committed in New York, the East Side was disturbed yesterday by one of the most terrific explosions in years. An entire block was shaken and almost every pane of glass throughout the block was shattered. The grocery store of Candelo Gatto was wrecked. Gatto said he had received several black hand letters recently, but had ignored them. Two hundred and fifty persons were driven from their homes by the explosion.

Militants Whip Jail Doctor.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Militant suffragettes Saturday attacked and severely maltreated Dr. Francis Edward Forward, the deputy governor and chief medical officer of Holloway Jail, where so many of them have been imprisoned.

Dr. Forward was walking along the street when he was assailed and he was heavily belabored and bruised before he was able to make his escape. Two women caught hold of him and held him while a third beat him with a horsewhip.

The suffragettes accuse Dr. Forward of being responsible for the forcible feeding system, which he denies.

Sugar and Old Age.

The belief is gaining ground in many quarters that if you wish to stave off old age and to have the feeling of perennial youth and gayety, no matter what your actual years may be, you cannot do better than eat plenty of sugar. One of the pioneers of this theory is Prof. Metchnikoff, who has made exhaustive experiments to prove his statements. There are some who even assert that not only does the frequent eating of sugar keep one from growing old, but that if a man or woman will begin the sugar treatment, even after senility has set in, the effect will be so great as to amount to a complete change in his or her character.

Vegetables In the Hair.

Among the absurdities of Marie Antoinette's time was the use of vegetables for decorating the hair. "Ask my niece, Mme. de Matignon," we read in the memoirs of the Marquise de Cregny, "if it is not true that in 1785 she had her hair dressed a la jardiniere with a red-check duster, into which M. Leonard, the queen's hairdresser, had artistically inserted a small artichoke, a broccoli, a fine carrot and some radishes. When London Picot (the comtesse de Lemeth-Picot, a rich Creole) saw it she was so delighted that she exclaimed, 'I will never wear anything but vegetables. It is so simple and more natural than flowers.'"—London Chronicle.

STRENGTH OF A LIMPET.

Its Sticking Power Largely Due to Atmospheric Pressure.

Every one is familiar with the saying "to stick like a limpet," but there are not so many who know how it is that a limpet is able to stick as it does to the rocks upon which it passes its existence. The creature is able by means of the central portion of its body, which can be raised independently of the edge or frill which surrounds it, to create a vacuum much in the same way that a piece of soft wet leather can be made to adhere to a smooth surface by pressing out all the air. Thus the so called "strength" of the limpet is largely due to atmospheric pressure.

It is not entirely so, however, for if they are closely examined it will be seen that the shells accommodate themselves around the edges to the surface of the rock upon which the limpet is located, and if removed to another spot the edge of the shell will probably be found to be a very bad fit and the creature's power of adhesion somewhat lessened. If taken by surprise with a smart sidelong blow even a large limpet is easily enough dislodged, but if it is given the slightest warning its power of suction is instantly brought into play and very often considerable force is then necessary before it can be detached.—London Standard.

LATE BERNARD QUARITCH WAS A NOTABLE FIGURE

Head of Great London House Who Passed Away Was Known All Over the World as a Dealer in Rare Volumes and Had No Superiors In the Auction Rooms—Father Started F[illegible]

One of the most famous bibliophiles and booksellers in the world has passed away at Brighton, Eng., in the person of Mr. Bernard Quaritch. Mr. Quaritch, who was in his 53rd year, was taken ill in America in 1911, and has since suffered from failing health, death being due to Bright's disease. Mr. Quaritch was known in book-dealing circles and among literary men not only in London, but in every large city of America and the Continent. He was the son of the founder of the business of which he was the head, and which is now one of the greatest of its kind in the world. Quaritch the elder was born in a Prussian village in 1819, and after serving his time to a bookseller in a small Saxon town he went to Berlin for three years, and then came to London, where he took a situation as an assistant to Henry George Bohn, the publisher. [illegible] he started for himself in a small corner shop near Leicester square and a year later began to issue the catalogues of foreign and English books which have since become famous. Some ten years afterwards he began to purchase rare books, and became a regular buyer at the principal book sales of Europe and America. The extent and variety of his purchases were remarkable, and he established a great reputation in book-selling circles. In 1860 he removed to Piccadilly, and two or three years ago the business was transferred to the building in Grafton street, formerly known as the town house of Admiral Howe. At the period of his death in 1899, when he left it to his son, the business had grown to enormous dimensions. The second Bernard Quaritch, whose fame was thus to a great extent inherited, was an Old Carthusian. After leaving school he was sent to Leipsig to learn the German language and a knowledge of the book-selling trade in that town. Leaving Leipsig he traveled in France for a considerable time, and returned to London to assist his father. He began to attend the important sales and after a time he came to take the leading share in the business, which developed in a remarkable way. Young Quaritch had to face the keenest competition, both in England and on the Continent. His enterprise and a remarkable personality carried him through, and he conquered all markets against such competitors as Belin, of Paris; Baur, of Frankfort, and Stevens and Sabin, of London. Commissions began to reach him in large numbers from the other side of the Atlantic, and after a time he became as well known in America as he was at the London or Continental sales. Father and son had some of the most prominent men in the country as their customers. Mr. Gladstone, Disraeli, Thackeray and Ruskin were among the first to patronize the shop, and famous men of every generation have loved to search its shelves. No big sale of books for the past 60 years has been complete without a Quaritch present to bid boldly for the treasures from famous libraries. The elder Quaritch made his first big purchase in 1858, when he gave £595 for a Mazarin Bible at the Bishop of Cashel's sale. For a similar volume the son paid £3,900 in recent years. Mr. Quaritch the younger was the hero of an auction room sensation in 1911, when, at the Huth sale, he paid £1,950 for a small octavo volume of Bacon's Essays. This was at the rate of £1,000 an ounce for a book which Mr. Huth bought for £13 5s in 1870.

Spencer and the Decimal System.

Herbert Spencer regarded the decimal system as a most dangerous innovation. A clause in the philosopher's will provides that, "if within ten years after my death a bill shall be introduced into Parliament for the compulsory adoption of the metric system for weights and measures, I desire that my pamphlet entitled 'Against the Metric System' shall be reprinted from the stereotyped plates which were cast in February, 1901, with such corrections as are indicated in a copy of the pamphlet deposited in my safe, and that such reprinted pamphlet shall be distributed gratis and at the expense of my estate among members of both Houses of Parliament and shall be put on sale by my publishers at a nominal price."

Where "Sterling" Originated.

In England money is characterized by the word "sterling," because in the time of Richard Coeur de Lion money coined in the east part of Germany became, on account of its purity, in especial request in England, and was called Easterling money, as all the inhabitants of that part of Germany were called Easterlings. That was the foundation of the practice of designating English amounts "sterling."

An Unburied Picture.

Rossetti secured permission in 1869 to reopen the coffin of his wife in order to secure the manuscripts of some poems which he had buried with her seven years before.

Some such incident might have occurred in connection with J. M. W. Turner if his desire to be buried wrapped up in his own painting of "Carthage" had been carried out. There was some difficulty in selling the painting, and the artist kept the canvas by him. He always said he would be wrapped in it when he was buried and even went so far as to ask Chantrey if as his executor he would fulfill his wishes on that point.

"No doubt," answered the sculptor. "I shall bury you rolled up in your picture if it is one of the conditions of your will, but I would take you up next day and unroll you!"

Found a Way.

Teacher—Now, children, try to figure just this once without counting on your fingers. How much is three and four. Peperl (looking under the bench after a long wait)—Seven. Teacher—Right. Four and six. Peperl (again peeping under the bench)—Ten. Teacher—Hold up there, you little rascal! I'll teach you to count on your fingers. (Takes Peperl's hands and clasps them behind his back. Now, then, five and three? Peperl (after another long look under the bench)—Eight. Teacher—Well, how did you manage to do that? Peperl—With my toes, teacher.—Fliegende Blatter.

The Brightness He Saw.

A man who died recently in the north of England and had been living a dishonest life under the cloak of religion, wishing to pose as a good man to the last, said to those around him:

"All is bright before me!"

"Aye," said one of those present, whom he had swindled out of a sum of money, "an' in about ten minnits thou'll be near enoof to see th' blaze!—Manchester Guardian.

SOME FAMOUS SONGS

MELODIES WHICH LIVE DEEP IN THE HEART OF THE RACE.

"The Old Arm Chair," "Afton Water," "Alice, Where Art Thou," Have Stirred the Emotions of Generations of English Speaking Men and Women — Author of "The Watch on the Rhine."

I love it, I love it, and who shall dare
To chide me for loving that old arm chair?
I've treasured it long as a sainted prize;
I've bedewed it with tears and embalmed it with sighs;
It is bound by a thousand bands to my heart;
Not a tie will break, not a link will start.
Would ye learn the spell? A mother sat there
And a sacred thing is that old arm chair.

The chair that can never be filled again by mother brings us back in memory to the long past, happy home of our childhood, when our family, full in number, were there, making life sublime — free from care and strife of the world, shielded by the mother dear, so precious to every human heart. No matter how high the pinnacle of fame we may have reached—in after years, long after the departure of the loving heart into the great beyond, we bow low still at that sacred thing, the vacant chair.

Eliza Cook was just what her noble poetry would lead you to imagine as the author of the Old Arm Chair, whose exquisite lines have sunken into the hearts of almost every living soul at some time. We read of her as being a frank, brave and warm-hearted girl, about 20 years of age when she penned those lines. She was born in London in 1817 and died in Wimbledon, Sept. 23, 1889.

What child can forget the pride and pleasure with which they sang Afton Water at school? The verse was written by Robert Burns, who died miserably poor at the age of only 37.

The traveler can scarcely think of leaving Scotland without a visit to the tomb of Robert Burns and his Highland Mary, to whose memory those beautiful lines were penned. It is with a feeling of deep sorrow that we stand beside the Afton Water, the little brook where the two with a Bible between them pledged their love for ever. They never met again, for Mary died soon after at her home. It is customary in Scotland for lovers to pledge themselves beside a brook with a Bible, as did Robert Burns and his Highland Mary the brook meaning eternity and the Bible loyalty forever.

The beautiful music and tender sentiment of "Alice, Where Art Thou?" was at first refused by the publishers for the small sum of $25. The sale afterward ran up in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. Joseph Ascher, the wonderful composer and musician, with a promising future sacrificed his career to the vortex of Parisian society life while he was musician to the Empress Eugenie. The words were written by Wellington Guernsey, the Irish poet, who was the son of an officer in the British army. He was born at Mullingar, Ireland, in 1817 and died in London in 1885. We recognize him now as most wonderful at his art, for a mere beautiful verse could not be conceived than this exquisite thought. He was celebrated for his art, but his favorite popular songs were Mary Bdane, and Alice, Where Art Thou.

She is far from the land
Where her young hero sleeps,
And lovers are round her sighing,
But coldly she turns from their gaze and weeps
For her heart in his grave is lying.

The above is a sweet and plaintive song written by Thomas Moore, who sang his own songs with wonderful effect. The above song was written around the famous Robert Emmett and his beloved Miss Sarah Curran. Washington Irving tells us her story in one of his writings, The Broken Heart.

From the Bohemian Girl was taken "Then You'll Remember Me." The composer was M. W. Balfe. During its first production of 100 nights the opera had no more popular song than this one. It is noted that the opera was played at Vienna in three theatres at the same time. A young tenor by the name of Harrison first sang this famous number and was recalled again and again. The piece since its creation has been sung in all types of amusements as a favorite. It was introduced with startling success in East Lynn, one of the most beloved dramas ever known in America or Europe.

The sweet words of "Thou Art Like a Flower" were immortalized by Anton Rubinstein with his splendid musical setting, who will ever be remembered as the greatest composer of his time. Russia, the land of his birth, owes to him to-day that Russia has a position in the national music school of the world. He organized the conservatory at St. Petersburg in 1862; Rubenstein was born in 1829 and died in 1895.

Max Schreckenburger, a manufacturer living in Wurtemberg, wrote the words to "The Watch on The Rhine," the national hymn of Germany. This poem was selected by the musical composers as being eminently suited to a true martial air. Patriotic Germany always is and when in 1840 the French were threatening the left bank of the Rhine, he presented it as an expression of love for the fatherland. At the time of the Franco-Prussian war a national hymn was needed, and at this appropriate time the words and music were combined. The war was fought and won with the music of The Watch on the Rhine sounding in the ears of the combatants. Carl Wilhelm, composer of the music, was a pupil of the famous violinist, Louis Spohr. In 1871 the Emperor presented Wilhelm with a pension for life. He did not, however, live long to enjoy the gift, as two years later he died and his skillful pen became idle forever.

CURIOUS DUELS.

Combats In Which the Weapons Selected Were Avalanches.

An extraordinary duel was fought near Mont Blanc in France. Two young men who had fallen in love with the same girl arranged to fight a duel, with nature as decider of the result.

Selecting a part of that mountainous district, many thousand feet up, where avalanches are known to fall at frequent intervals, the lovers agreed to take it in turns to stand for a given time in the most dangerous spot that could be found. The idea was that when one was killed by an avalanche the other should be free to propose to the girl whom they both loved. In this case the idea became a fact.

This is not the only instance on record of a duel by avalanche. A few years ago two Italians, named Guetta and Sorato, decided to test fate in this manner, and also for the love of a woman.

For three mornings they tempted nature, but nothing serious happened. On the fourth day Guetta was knocked down by a falling avalanche, but not much hurt. Then it was that their food supply gave out, and they returned home to get some more. By this time the police had come to hear of their strange duel, and threatened them both with imprisonment. So the undaunted rivals settled their differences in another and less adventurous way. They drew lots for their lady love. Sorato won, and after Guetta had left the village he was married to the girl of his choice.—London Answers.

The Brighter Side.

"Well," chuckled the optimistic failure, "I've got one satisfaction."

"And what's that?" asked the sympathetic friend.

"If I had succeeded I should probably have made a nuisance of myself telling people that I was a self made man."—Detroit Free Press.

CHILD SHOOTS FATHER.

Loaded Revolver Pointed In Fun Goes Off, Killing Him Instantly.

WINGHAM, Oct. 14.—A shooting accident, which resulted in the death of Harvey McDowell, who lived in West Wawanosh, about seven miles from Wingham, occurred Sunday night about seven o'clock.

McDowell with his children had just returned home after spending the afternoon at the residence of his father-in-law, Mr. Charles Campbell, who lived a short distance away.

He had just changed his clothes and as he entered the dining-room his little nine-year-old daughter pointed a revolver at him, saying: "Hold up your hands, Daddy." As she said this the revolver went off and the bullet entered McDowell's left side, just below the heart, killing him instantly.

McDowell had been hunting coons on Saturday night, and left the revolver on the sideboard, where the girl found it. He was about [illegible] years of age, and his wife died about 18 months ago. He leaves three children, the oldest being nine years of age.

WEDDING—PERSONALS

O'KEEFE—GREENAN.

A very pretty nuptial event was solemnized at St. Mary's Church, Lindsay, Tuesday morning when Vicar-General Casey, who also celebrated the nuptial mass, united in marriage Mr. Michael O'Keefe of Keene, and Miss Hannah Greenan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Greenan of South Ops.

The bride who entered the church on the arm of her brother, Mr. Peter Greenan, to the strains of a wedding march played by Miss Mary Flurey, looked charming in a tailor-made suit of blue with blue hat to match. She was assisted by her sister, Miss Ethel, who was gowned in Copenhagen blue velvet. Mr. William Hurley, of Norwood, cousin of the groom, acted as best man.

After the ceremony the happy couple drove to the residence of the bride's parents, where, together with the immediate relatives, they partook of a wedding breakfast. The dining room was tastefully decorated with smilax and white roses.

Among the relatives present were Mr and Mrs. O'Keefe, Peterborough, parents of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Welsh Keene, Mr. Joseph Greenan, Toronto, and Mr. and Mrs Fred Steinberg, Peterborough.

The popularity of the bride was evidenced by the number of beautiful wedding presents received. The gift of the groom to the bride was a mink set, to the bridesmaid a three pearl ring and to the groomsman a pair of gold cuff links.

The happy couple left that afternoon on the 4.30 C.P.R. train for Toronto, St. Catharines and other points, after which they will take up residence near Keene.

Joe Coffey and Donald Fraser left Monday night for Peterborough, where they will join the Jack Lake Hunting Club on a shooting trip.—St. Thomas Times.

Miss Ada Melville left last night by C.P.R. for Regina, where she will permanently reside with her sister, Mrs. Millson Blewett.

It will be with extreme regret that the many friends of Mr. R. Carson, of the Union Bank staff, learn that he is confined to his home with symptoms of typhoid fever. It is to be hoped that his illness will not assume any dangerous aspect.

FIRST MEETING OF CONVENTION

Delegates are arriving to-day for the twenty-fifth Baptist convention for Ontario and Quebec, the first session of which will be held tonight at the Murray street Baptist Church.

The indications are that the attendance will show an increase over any previous convention.

At the meeting to-night Mr. A. A. Ayer, of Montreal, president of the convention, will deliver the inaugural address. All sessions are open to the public.

Among the speakers are, Rev. Prof. I. G. Matthews and Rev. Dr. Sullivan, of Montreal; Prof. J. H. Farmer, Rev. Dr Brown, Rev. Dr. W. T. Graham, Rev. H. T. Stillman, Rev. Dr Bates, Rev. E. J. Stobo and others.

LOCAL NEWS ITEMS

A special train carrying several G. T. R. officials including Superintendent Coyle, of Belleville, and Head Engineer Safford, passed through the city yesterday.

Many local people left at noon to attend the Norwood Fair which takes place to-day. A special train will return to the city this evening.

All the ladies of St. John's C.W.A. are asked to be present in the Guild room on Thursday afternoon at 2.30 to assist in making the new cassocks as promised.

Every member of Charlotte street Methodist Church choir are requested to be present at 7.30 on Thursday evening for rehearsal.

AWARD OF $350

Jury Give Damages to Wm. Johnston

The jury at the Fall Assizes, after a deliberation of one hour and fifty minutes, yesterday returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, Wm. Johnston for $350 damages. The plaintiff claimed damages to the extent of $3,000 from Sidney Armstrong, as a result of the alleged seduction of Johnston's daughter. No defense was offered.

The jury brought in a verdict giving the plaintiff damages of $1,200 for the support of the child and $300 for medical attendance and other expenses.

His Honor however, sent the jury back for another verdict, saying that the maintenance of the child they had nothing to do with, as it was something outside their particular case.

The jury retired, and after a short time returned with a verdict naming $350. The parties to the case come from North Monaghan.

BREACH OF PROMISE CASE

The breach of promise case before High Court was to-day postponed until the next sittings. Miss Ellen P. Smart, the plaintiff, claims $1,000 damages and costs from the defendant Chas. E. Margett, for breach of promise.

No evidence was taken in the case. R. E. Wood acted for the plaintiff, an appearance had been entered by the defendant as to the writ.

STORY OF THE OZARK MOUNTAINS

"The Shepherd of the Hills," Harold Bell Wright's novel, which has been accorded the largest sale in the history of publishing in America has been made into a play by Mr. Wright, with the assistance of Mr. Elsbury W. Reynolds. It will be seen for the first time in this city at the Grand Opera House, Saturday next, Oct. 18th, matinee and night. It tells a beautiful story of the Ozark mountains, a story that holds the auditor by its thrills from the beginning to the end. It is unique in character-drawing, giving to the stage a somewhat new atmosphere. The beauty of the Ozark mountain region lends itself to some very effective stage pictures, and Gaskill and MacVitty, the producers, are said to have given the play an exceptionally beautiful mountaing. 30

PRETTIEST PRINCESS IN ALL EUROPE

PRINCESS AUGUST WILHELM.

In fairy stories all princesses are supposed to be beautiful, but the same lovely idea does not always hold good in real life. In the case of Princess August Wilhelm it's really and truly so.

This most beautiful princess in all Europe is the wife of the fourth son of Emperor William of Germany. She was the Princess Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein and in 1908 married her cousin, the kaiser's son.

At the marriage of her sister-in-law, Princess Victoria Louise, she was considered the most beautiful woman at the wedding ceremonies. Another daughter-in-law of the kaiser's, the Crown Princess Cecilie, is a very beautiful woman and has the reputation of being one of the best dressed of all the royal princesses.

Princess August Wilhelm was saved by her sister-in-law, Crown Princess Frederick, from a serious automobile accident recently at Posen. The occasion was the opening of the restored Rathshaus.

Princess August Wilhelm had entered an automobile outside the city hall when one of the horses attached to one of the royal carriages bolted, driving the carriage pole through the side of the motor.

The crown princess, standing beside the auto, saw the danger and grabbed her sister-in-law and dragged her to safety as the pole struck the machine.

STAGE FRIGHT.

Old Actors Often Have It as Well as the Novices

Stage-fright has attacked practically every actor and actress on the stage at one time or another and only the other night a young girl taking part in a drama in the provinces was so overcome with the disease that she collapsed on the stage and had to be carried into the wings. Many of our greatest actors have confessed that they continually suffer from stage-fright in some form or another, and occasionally when before the footlights they suffer tortures almost unbearable.

Mrs. Langtry, though a "seasoned" actress, suffers now and then from stage-fright, and on one memorable occasion, when she was the unhappy victim of nervousness, she sent her audience into bursts of laughter by making the extraordinary remark "Let us away to some nosy cook." Of course, she should have said "Let us away to some cosy nook."

This form of tongue-tripping is by no means uncommon to the stage, and it mostly occurs when an actor or actress is stricken with what is known among "pro's" as "fluffiness." "Fluffiness" is a certain kind of stage-fright which causes its victims to forget their lines, or to transpose or otherwise muddle some of them.

Lionel Brough, while waiting for his cue to appear on the boards as Tilly Slowboy in "The Cricket on the Hearth" one evening, played a game of cribbage in the green-room with John Clayton. When Brough was summoned to make his entrance he was suddenly stricken with stage fright, and instead of saying, as he walked from the wings, "'Ello, here I am!" he gasped out, "Fifteen two!"

If you closely watch the stage you may notice that one or two of the players seem to be at a loss to know what to do with their hands. This is due to nervousness nine times out of ten, and old-stagers are forced occasionally to move their hands about in a peculiar manner when stage-fear attacks them.

Most theatregoers have the impression that stage tears and stage laughs have nothing in common with the real things, that is to say they are forced. But, as a matter of fact, actors and actresses do really laugh and cry. Salvini, though he could weep like a child on the stage, confessed that he could never laugh in earnest, and he put this down to the fact that he treated his work ever seriously. On the other hand, most of our present day players who find themselves in humorous situations on the stage, especially in light comedies, laugh quite naturally. One comedy man fell into the habit of laughing at every funny little incident, and his unconscious merriment won for him the nickname of "The Laughing Hyena."

There is no doubt that Salvini was one of the most emotional men who ever trod the boards, and a story has it that when acting in his native country he carried next to his skin a free pardon signed by the Italian monarch and counter-signed by the Minister of Justice, lest when he played Othello he should so far forget himself as really to smother Desdemona.

That brilliant actress Madame Sarah Bernhardt, has declared on several occasions that her success on the stage has been due to the fact that she enters most thoroughly into the part she is playing, forgetting the audience, make-up and everything. Once she wrote, "Never have I played Phedre without fainting, and after the tableau of Theodora, in which I am supposed to kill Marcellus, I am so often in such a nervous state that I retire to my dressing-room sobbing."

The Conservatory Orchestra will practice to-night at 8 o'clock.

LIBERALS TO PROTEST

Party Leaders Think There is Hope in Chateauguay

MONTREAL, Oct. 16.—The election of Chateauguay will be protested, said Hon. Sydney Fisher, after a lengthy conference of the leaders of the Liberal party and prominent Liberals of Chateauguay, held at the Windsor Hotel yesterday afternoon.

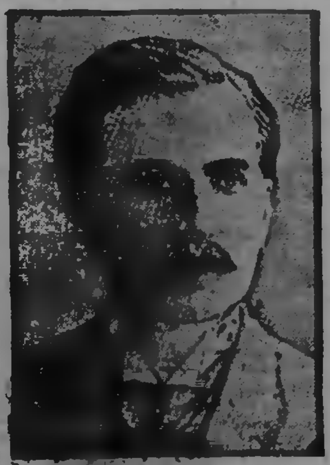
Action for the appeal will be taken, it is said, as there is a strong feeling among the Chateauguay Liberals in favor of protest.

"We have evidence that will undoubtedly quash the election," said Mr. Fisher.

"Will there be any prosecutions?" he was asked.

"I do not see how the guilty can escape, when the evidence at the hearing has been given," said Mr. Fisher. "The prosecution will follow as a matter of course."

Those attending the conference were Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Hon. Sydney Fisher, James Robb, M.P. for Huntington, Mr. McGerrigle of Ormstown, Mr. Conlin of Ormstown, Mr. Robert Brown of St. Chrysostome, Mr. Jas. Cowan of Drysdale, A. F. Leggatt, Chateauguay Basin, and Messrs. Robinson, Elliott, Ogilvie, Alex. McCarthy and Robert Ness of Howick, Mr. Collard of Ottawa, A. Youme, A. Mhon, Thomas Gibsie of Howick, N. Sangster of Ormstown, R. L. Calder, Montreal, M. Severin Le Tourneau, M.P., Mr. Papineau, M.P., Mr. Rutherford, Hon. H. Mercier, James Bryson and Mr. Wm. Bryson of Ormstown, and A. Marcil, St. Clothilde.



HON. W. T. WHITE,
Minister of Finance for the Dominion.

Kingston, Oct. 16.—At the fall convocation of Queen's University last night, Hon. W. T. White, Minister of Finance, and Prof. John McNaughton of McGill University, were given the degree of doctor of law.

MOST ARE RE-ELECTED.

Dominion W.C.T.U. Appoints Officers at Convention In London.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 16.—Mrs. Gordon Wright of this city was yesterday re-elected to the position of president of the Dominion Women's Christian Temperance Union. The honorary president, Mrs. Annie C. Rutherford of Toronto will likely again fill that position.

The vice-president remains the same, Mrs. L. C. McKinney of Alberta, being again elected, as was the recording secretary, Mrs. E. W. McLachlan of Montreal. The corresponding secretary for the year will be Mrs. Atchison of Toronto. The treasurer, Mrs. Jeannette Butler of St Johns, Que., was re-elected.

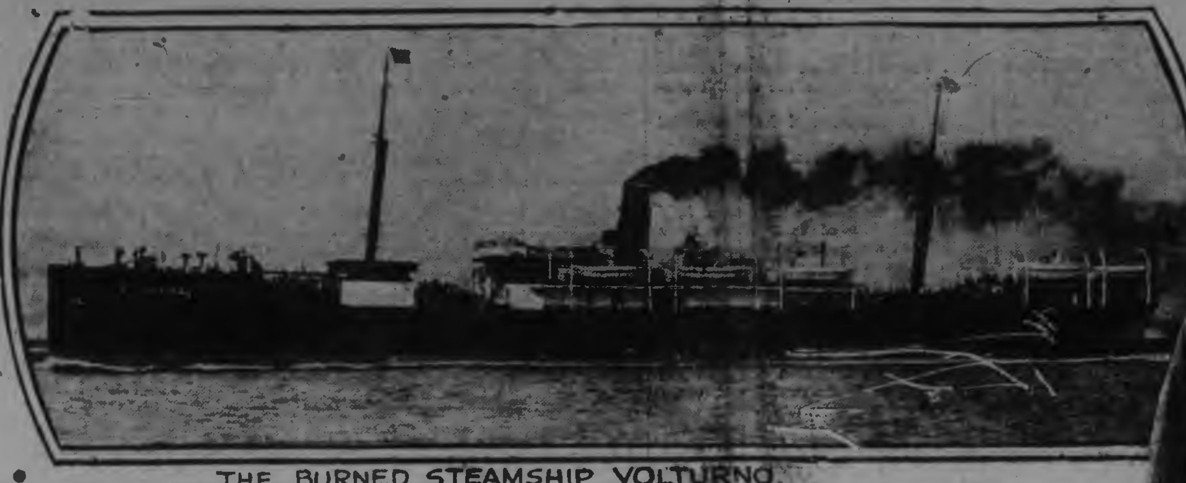
The treasurer's report showed the sum of $50,000 to have been collected by the different unions in the Dominion, during the year. While a good balance remains on hand, most of the money has been expended in one or the other different branches of the union's work.

Saxony's King In Danger.

DRESDEN, Saxony, Oct. 16.—A mysterious stranger armed with a loaded revolver and a dagger, was arrested Tuesday evening in a theatre here where he supposed the King of Saxony and the Grand Duke Cyril of Russia were among the audience. The arrest caused reports to be put in circulation of an attempt to assassinate the king.

The stranger had rented a room in a hotel overlooking the street through which the king and the grand duke were to pass on their way to attend a gala performance at the court theatre.

STEAMSHIP VOLTURNO, WHICH BURNED IN MID-OCEAN, HER CAPTAIN AND ONE OF THE RESCUERS



THE BURNED STEAMSHIP VOLTURNO

CAPTAIN FRANCIS INCH. OF THE VOLTURNO

CAPTAIN SMILTNEK, OF THE CZAR.

Rendered helpless by the gale the rescuing steamships stood by for hours while their crews fought death to reach the hundreds huddled on the after deck of the Volturno, cut off from life on one side by fire and on the other by gigantic waves which held them off from the safe refuge of the steamship decks which they could see all around them.

Boat after boat was lowered by the rescuers, first of which to reach the scene was the Carmania, of the Cunard line. Captain Barr, of this vessel, heard the "S. O. S." signal, while more than seventy miles away and ran quickly to the scene.

Other steamships to arrive were the Grosser Kurfuerst, the Kroonland, the Devonian, the Minneapolis, the Touraine, the Narragansett, the Seydlitz, the Rappahannock and the Czar.

The thousands on the decks saw the boats of the Volturno, freighted with passengers and crew, dashed to pieces as they were lowered, while scores drowned before their eyes.

Parent's Scruples Overcome.

MONTREAL, Oct. 16.—A relenting father ended the proceedings yesterday in the case of Reginald Leamy of Ottawa, who was to have appeared on a charge of abducting Elizabeth Phyllis Campbell, Viaville, Que., a minor, who is heiress to $75,000.

Miss Campbell left Montreal last week against her father's wishes to meet her lover in Ottawa to be married. Campbell caught her at Vaudreuil, and sought to detain her there. She, however, escaped through a trap-door in the station floor, and after walking for miles, and selling her gold watch to get money for her trip, made her way to Ottawa and was married.

Storm Cast Up Gold Dust.

NOME, Alaska, Oct. 16.—Miners who have worked the beach sands here for their gold think it likely that the storm that half destroyed the city drove ashore gold-bearing sands that will more than pay for the damage done. After each storm miners pan the new sand that has been cast up. The bottom of the sea in front of Nome is rich in gold, but no method of working it has been found.

Threw Vegetables at Judge.

GLASGOW, Oct. 16.—Two militant suffragettes, Margaret Morrison, an artist, and Mrs. Smith, a well-known woman doctor, were sentenced yesterday at the Court of Sessions to eight months' imprisonment each for attempting on July 24 to set fire to a large mansion in a Glasgow suburb, at one time the residence of the late Sir John Muir, a former Lord Mayor.

There was a wild scene in court when the judge, Lord Salvesen, pronounced the sentence. Irate suffragettes hurled vegetables and apples at the judge's head, and sang the "Marseillaise."

Three women were arrested.

THE PRINCESS THEATRE PURCHASED BY MOVING PICTURE MAGNITE

Mr. H. Clayton Will Now Control Royal, Red Mill and Princess Theatres

Local theatre-goers will no doubt see a big improvement to the Princess Theatre now under the capable management of Mr. H. Clayton, who now retains full control and management of the three local picture and vaudeville houses in this city. High class vaudeville will now be introduced at the Princess Theatre combined with the very best pictures and latest illustrated songs that can be obtained. A new Bell Piano has just been purchased from J. P. Cunningham of the Peterborough Music Co., and other alterations and improvements are now under way. When completed the local patrons will no doubt appreciate the painstaking efforts of Manager Clayton, whose motto has always been to serve the public with nothing but the very best moral and refined pictures that can be obtained.

STARTLING REVELATIONS OF CONDITIONS IN THE KINGSTON PENITENTIARY

Frederick Ingledew Says Overseer Wilson Refused to Get Up to Attend to Dying Patients—Another Guard Had to Do 60 Hours Continuous Duty —Lawyer Russell Says Paroles Go to Favorites.

KINGSTON, Oct. 16. — Startling evidence concerning conditions in the penitentiary hospital was given at the afternoon session of the prison reform commission yesterday by Frederick Ingledew, a guard.

He charged Overseer Wilson of the hospital with neglect of duty in not getting up on two occasions at night to attend dying patients, and said that he considered conditions of such a disgraceful nature that he had sent in a report to Inspector Stewart of Ottawa, but had not even received a reply to his letter. On one occasion a convict named Pellow fell in a faint when he could not get a drink of water. This man's death occurred later in the Hotel Dieu, his condition being so bad that he was allowed out of the penitentiary. The witness charged that Wilson had refused twice in one night to get out of bed to attend a sick convict named Bunyan. The latter's death occurred in the penitentiary. Wilson had said he would not get up, as he could not do any good. The witness regarded the hospital as very unsanitary.

Wilson is the man against whom Dr. Edwards laid charges of gross neglect of duty, and charges against him will be further investigated.

Ingledew declared there was a hard and fast rule that no guard must open a cell door in this department under any circumstances. A convict might die, but a guard was powerless.

Perry Johnson, ex-guard, complained of being made to do sixty hours' continual duty, and said that he had retired from duty on account of deafness, when he had a certificate from the doctor he was all right for work.

Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P., had another tilt with the commissioners over evidence to be taken. Objection was raised to hearing certain parts of the testimony of a witness. Dr. Edwards said that when the commission advertised for information it should receive it and judge its value afterwards.

Fred. Montgomery, ex-guard swore that he had seen two guards drunk while on duty, and that these men had never been up on the carpet for their condition.

Gordon Russell resumed his attack at the morning session on the food supply in the penitentiary. He told of having seen a printed dietary, but that the food supplied did not conform to this regulation.

Dr. Phalen in reply to a question said there once was a printed dietary, but it was now obsolete, and the food and the cooking of it was entirely in the jurisdiction of the warden.

Russell told of a row in one of the workshops as an illustration of how the parole system works out. The aggressor in the row was selected for parole, and the man who really stopped the row and saved the officer from assault was ignored.

The parole system, according to this witness, is not worked from Ottawa, and based on merit, but paroling is purely the result of favoritism in the penitentiary. He complained that although he asked for suitable employment he was put on the stone pile for thirteen months, and that he thought he was the only professional man who had ever been used in this way. He was offered a job in the deputy's room, but he refused because it would involve changing his cell and perhaps occupying a dirty bed. He charged discrimination by Deputy Warden O'Leary in favor of men of one particular religious denomination. There were thirty-six good positions and twenty-nine of these were occupied by men of one faith. They were men not so well educated or as competent as others who were given no preference.

A month before he was discharged, Russell had protested against having his hair cut, and for this he was penalized, although he was properly exempt on account of the short time he had to serve. When brought up before an officer on a false complaint of idling, he was refused an opportunity of offering any defence. He admitted that Col. Irvine had remitted these penalties afterwards.

Russell gave the food supply a hard knock. The witness declared that it was more like dog or donkey meat than beef. The fish was rotten and contaminated the vegetables.

Major Hughes will be recalled at to-day's session and Russell's story will be finished. Another adjournment will be made on Thursday night.

The long promised sensations over the inquiry broke loose while Major Hughes was giving evidence on the charges against Deputy Warden O'Leary. Mr. Hughes had gone over the roster and showed how, on Jan. 11, 1913, the guards given the choice positions were ninety per cent. Roman Catholics, although there are twice as many Protestant as there are Catholic guards.

PLUMAGE MUST COME OFF.

U. S. Customs Will Not Admit Feathers Even on Game Birds.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16. — Both frantic and tearful appeals reached the Treasury Department yesterday regarding the enforcement of the tariff law inhibition against the bringing in of bird plumage. One man, whose dozen cases of grouse were held up at the New York customs house, telegraphed that if he took the plumage off his game, as required by the law, his customers would refuse to recognize the birds as grouse. The Department, however, is explicit that grouse and partridges bearing their plumage cannot be brought into the United States.

The problem of the aigrettes, worn on hats by women returning from abroad, is no problem at all, for Treasury officials pointed out that if aigrettes could come in on women's hats the way would be made clear for a wholesale importation of them in evasion of the law.

BIBLE AS MISSILE

Mother's Good Aim Prevented Her Son's Suicide.

WEST ORANGE, N.J., Oct. 16.—Albert Kent is in a serious condition in the Orange Memorial Hospital after an effort to commit suicide. He would have succeeded if his mother was not such a good thrower. She knocked a bottle of carbolic acid from his hand, using the family Bible as a missile. His mother was darning socks, when Kent entered, shouted "Here's luck to you all" and placed a bottle of carbolic acid to his lips. His mother picked up the Bible from the table, at her elbow, and threw it at her son. Her aim was good and the bottle crashed to the floor. But Kent already had swallowed some of the acid. He will probably recover.

SULZER MAY KNOW TO-NIGHT

Tribunal Ready to Deliver Judgment in His Case

ALBANY, N.Y., Oct. 16.—It is likely that the fate of Gov. Sulzer will be known to-night. The high court of impeachment adjourned last night with its deliberations unfinished, but it was said that the final vote probably would be taken at an open session this afternoon.

No official confirmation of this report could be obtained, however, as all the deliberations of the court yesterday were held behind closely guarded doors. No record of the proceedings was kept, and a ban of silence has been placed on members of the tribunal.

When adjournment was taken shortly after seven o'clock last night two hours beyond the usual time, the judges filed out unguarded and the Senators hurried from the chamber to the streets, instead of remaining to discuss the case, as had been their wont.

Held For Murder.

MOOSE JAW, Sask., Oct. 16.—For the murder of his partner, George Benson, in August last, W. J. Collins was Tuesday night delivered at the border by the sheriff of Caldwell County, Missouri, to Corpl. Binning, of the R.N.W.M.P. He was locked up at North Portal for the night, and last night, under escort of Sergt. Lett of Estevan, and Corpl. Binning, was here en route for Calgary.

Suffragette Failed To Reach King.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—A futile attempt to reach King George and Queen Mary was made by a militant suffragette, Margaret Sterling, as their Majesties were driving yesterday morning to St. James' Palace to attend the wedding of Prince Arthur of Connaught and the Duchess of Fife. The woman broke through the line of police waving a petition, but she was seized and arrested.

Powell Claims Alibi.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Oct. 16.—The case of Martin Powell, who was arrested in Detroit, charged with having robbed the Bank of Montreal, at New Westminster, of $273,000, was yesterday traversed to the 1914 spring assizes, at the suggestion of the defence. Powell's counsel declared that he had a good alibi as a defence.

CATASTROPHE IS FEARED

Situation in Mexico is Ominous and Army is Restless

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16.—All th information the administration ha from Mexico City yesterday was tha the foreign representatives were i session there, having been called t gether by the Spanish Minister, th dean of the diplomatic corps, for th purpose of considering Huerta's lat est step. It is said there were sign of dissensions in the ranks of Hu ta's army.

Some view the action of the for eign representatives as indicatin that a crisis had been reached i Mexico, while others regarded i merely as an addition to the ma serious actions which have been per formed. Others regarded the report ed dissension in the army as the re barometer of what the end will be These officials see in this dissensi another "blow up," the like of whic occurred on Feb. 9 last, and whi resulted in the assassination of Presi dent Madero and Vice-Presiden Suarez.

In the meantime the Ameri Government is awaiting Gen. Huer ta's next step in the Mexican situa tion.

This will be the attitude of the Am erican Government until Huerta an swers in some way, by word or deed the note President Wilson sent hi Tuesday, and which was delivered t him by Nelson O'Shaughnessy, th American charge at Mexico City.

What will be the next step in th national drama which is being s in Mexico City with moving-pictu like rapidity, no one here will vouchsafe a guess. President Wilson d not believe Huerta will make a reply to his note of Tuesday.

BODIES FOUND

Rescuers at Universal Mine Give Up Hope of Saving Lives.

CARDIFF, Wales, Oct. 16. — All hopes of rescuing more of the miners entombed in the Universal Colliery, where a great explosion occurred on Tuesday, has virtually been abando ed. The report that a party of 29 men had been found alive in one of the galleries has proved to be erroneous, but a large number of dead bodies were encountered yesterday.

No official reports have been issued and this caused much comment. Fire broke out anew yesterday afternoon and is still raging. There are no further signs of life in the pit. Up to a late hour last night 49 bodies had been recovered, while 868 miners were still entombed. The shift which went into the mine Tuesday numbered 931.

The engineers have decided to devote their efforts to subduing the fire, as they believe it useless to persist in the attempt at rescue.

CAPTAIN TOOK DOG.

On board S. S. Kroonland, via Cape Sable, Oct. 16.—It was a strange company that filled the last boat from the S. S. Kroonland to put off from the side of the flame-swept Volturno. It carried Capt. Inch, it carried the officers, it carried a dog. And it carried a cook who was one of the big heroes of the tragedy, for he stood at his post and baked and make coffee until the flames were so close that his shoes were literally burned off. The Kroonland was the last of the rescuing ships to pull away. As she left the Volturno was nothing but a cloud of smoke, and so hot that scuttling her was out of the question. The captain and officers and the crew of the Kroonland deserve the greatest praise for the skill, the daring and the spirit of self-sacrifice they brought to this opportunity. In their efforts appeared the first hope that any rescue was possible.

When we reached the burning Volturno it took remarkable seamanship and daring to bring the Kroonland under the stern in the hope of reaching her with a life line. It was a savage sea, and skillfully as our first boat put away in the darkness, we on board the Kroonland knew that the chances were against its returning.

The setting off of extra rockets from the Volturno gave a marvellous pyrotechnical display, but to those on board it must have seemed as though the flames had reached the pilothouse, for there rose a great cry of despair. When the real explosion came, we looked upon the Volturno and her people as doomed.

Three Years For Pickpocket.

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 16. — Joseph Brant, who is a member of the Mohawk Indian Band, was yesterday sentenced to three years in the penitentiary by Magistrate Masson. Tuesday night whilst a passenger on a G.T.R. train, he had for a companion Giachini Villiani, whom he robbed of $80 and a ticket for Italy. Brant threw the ticket away, with the pocketbook, after he had extracted the money from his victim's pocket.

THE BAPTIST CONVENTION

The city has already extended a warm hand of welcome to the Baptist Convention now being held in Murray street church. The Baptists are one of the largest denominations of Christians on the American continent, and in England they are among the foremost in non-conformity. Many of the greatest preachers have been Baptists, and educational and missionary work owes much to the persistent efforts of the early Baptists in England.

The Baptists have never been very strong in Scotland, for some reason unexplained. Many people regard them as a rather exclusive body, owing, we presume, to their method of initiation into membership, which perhaps has been a sort of barrier—if water can be described as such—to the entrance of some into the fold. Doubtless, of these, it might be said that they "stand shivering on the brink

And fear to launch away."

But in England there is much more freedom among the Baptists' denomination, and while most churches hold to immersion as scriptural, yet they do not enforce the rite as a condition of membership. The late Dr. Alexander MacLaren of Manchester was very broad in this respect, and formed his into a Union Church, and this is practically the policy of most of the larger city churches.

The Presidential address, which is printed in another column, indicates not only the mental agility of the new President, but proves him to be a man of large sympathies and alive to the problems of modern life. It would have been easy for him to condemn this as a Godless generation but he realizes and appreciates the many wonderful developments of human genius, and the inevitable complexity of the problem of dealing with men under modern conditions.

If the Convention approaches the discussion of the various problems and projects with which it has to do, in the spirit of the President's address, their visit to this city and their meeting together in this year 1913 will not be in vain.

IS TORONTO CONCEITED?

A writer in Saturday Sunset says:

"Toronto is really the "smuggest" town one could imagine, it is so absolutely well-pleased with itself that it almost forgets to go ahead."

Out of which arises the question: "Is Toronto conceited?"

There is no denying that the "Queen City" has much reason to be proud of itself, and those who put its pride down to an overweening conceit may be merely giving way to a spirit of envy and jealousy which is nothing less than a backhanded compliment.

But still the question arises; Is Toronto conceited? That it is proud, it will perhaps admit itself. Pride comes either from having great possessions, or from a consciousness of vast self-importance. All of which is, in the last analysis, conceit.

How does a man know that he has great possession, or is of enormous importance but by comparing himself with some other poor beggar; and this process of comparison, to the belittling of other people, is what may be defined as conceit. Toronto, therefore, is conceited.

But Toronto is not the only conceited city on the map. There are others who, perhaps, out of chagrin at realizing their insignificance as compared with great cities, vent their spleen upon smaller towns than themselves, and lord it over the villages.

Peterborough is, perhaps, the only city in Ontario that is void of conceit. This assertion will cause an ill-mannered smile on the face of Torontonians, but that is because of ignorance. Men do become blinded by the excessive radiance of their own importance that they cannot see clearly.

Peterborough is ready to admit the magnificence of Toronto, no one could miss it. But how many realize that we have, right here, a city which will one day vie with the Queen City itself as a manufacturing and commercial centre? The growth of Peterborough has been slow, it is no bayan or mushroom city; it has grown and is growing steadily and has reached that period when it will begin to put on weight and size more rapidly than ever. We have our difficulties, financial and otherwise, but these are healthy in youth for they indicate growth. They are merely growing-pains.

It is when a city becomes "smug," as the Sunset describes Toronto, that it "forgets to go ahead." When it gets into its club, "Arts and Letters," (so to speak) and sticks its feet into an "antique" hearth and dreams, under the influence of my Lady Nicotine. "Is not this great Toronto which I have built?" We need not remind our illustrious neighbor of one Nebucadnezzar, who for his pride came to mingle with the occupants of his stable, where no doubt his father before him first made a living.

EXCERPTS

Dome Builders of Rome.

It was largely their development of the dome and the arched roof in masonry that enabled the Romans to build on a scale of daring and magnificence which has not been surpassed in our modern age of steel. Recent excavations in Nero's palace have revealed five subterranean vaulted rooms in the proximity of the dining room which were built as fish tanks and used to keep fish alive for the use of the imperial table. The vault and the dome or round roof of the Romans served the purpose of the modern I beam and latticed roof girder as used by the present day architect and engineer.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

Commercialized vice under the recognition and regulation of the police department ceased in Detroit at midnight Tuesday night.

One of Cornwall's most popular residents passed away at the General Hospital yesterday afternoon in the person of Alex. McDonald.

Alberta is to take up the taxation of the unearned increment in respect to increased land values. Premier Sifton gave notice he would move a resolution to that effect.

The Cripples' Protective and Beneficial Association is the name of an organization being formed by Pittsburg residents who have but one arm or leg or are otherwise maimed.

A resolution expressing appreciation of the action of Hon. Col. Hughes in suppressing militia camp canteens was unanimously carried by the Dominion W.C.T.U. at London Ont., yesterday.

A young man, unknown, of dark complexion and wearing a grey suit was found unconscious on the sidewalk Tuesday evening in Whitby and has remained insensible. There is a possibility of foul play.

Mrs. Ellen Etheridge, second wife of a farmer of Bosque County, Texas, has confessed that she murdered two of her stepchildren last June, and two on Oct. 2, by poison. She was jealous of her husband's love for them.

No hope was held out yesterday that Albert J. Jewell, the young aviator who set out from Hempstead Plains, N.Y., early Monday morning in a monoplane, would be found alive. The theory is that he was blown out to sea.

The will of the late J. Pierpont Morgan was probated in London yesterday. His estate in the British Isles totals $5,899,155, so that the budget of Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George benefits by death duties to the extent of about $960,000.

NOTES FROM KEENE

Special Correspondence.

Keene, Oct. 16.—Mr. and Mrs. Malcom McIntyre, of East City, were in the village last Sunday.

Mrs. Nixon, of Toronto, and her daughter, Mrs. Gee, of New York, who have been at Bralesford Cedars the past five weeks, left for Toronto last Monday.

Duck Hunters from all parts are passing through the village on their way to the different points on Rice Lake where the ducks are plentiful.

The anniversary service which was held at Bethel Church last Sunday was largely attended. Rev. A. K. Edmison conducted both morning and evening service.

Mr. Jas McFarlane and Marshall Weir are busily engaged painting the Keene bridge.

Mrs. Holdsworth, of Cobourg who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Jas. McFarlane, returned to her home last Saturday.

Mr. Nicholas Doris, road-overseer for the township, and his men, have completed the work in the village and left on Monday morning to do work in the western part of the township.

The concert that was given in the town hall last Wednesday evening by the Agricultural Society was a great success.

Quarterly meeting service will be held in the Methodist Church, Keene, Oct. 26th, at 10.30 a.m.

H. Bull, who has been at Bralesford Cedars, left on Tuesday afternoon for Port Hope.

On Nov. 2nd the Rev. J. H. Arnup, B.A., Secretary of the Methodist Layman's Missionary Association, will preach on Keene Circuit; the occasion will be the annual missionary anniversary.

The Y.P.S.C.E. will hold a social in the Town Hall, Keene, on Monday day evening, Oct. 20th. A special program will be given and refreshments served. Doors open at 7 p.m.

The Keene Fair which was held on Wednesday of last week fully sustained its reputation as the fighting ground of winners. The entry list was the largest on record and some keen contests were fought out in the ring. The attractions were numerous and well up to the mark. People from all the united counties and the United States were in attendance; a large contingent came down from Peterborough. The committee did everything to make the fair a success. The Alderville Band rendered an excellent program for the afternoon.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotation in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc

CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Active campaigning by bear leaders carried the wheat market today sharply under the season's previous low price, altho the record for depression had been made only the day before. The close was weak at practically the bottom figures reached, 5-8c to 3-4c off compared with last night. Other leading staples, too, all showed declines—corn ¼c to 3-4c, oats 7-8c to 1 1-8c, and provisions 7½c to 15c.

Liverpool closed as follows: Wheat—One-quarter to ⅜d lower.

Corn—One-quarter to ½d higher.

Fire In Hospital.

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Oct. 16.—Fire of an unknown origin broke out in the General Hospital at eight o'clock last night. Several patients were carried out, but the prompt action of the volunteer firemen prevented serious damage.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Oct. 15.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 162 cars, comprising 3541 cattle, 516 hogs, 1772 sheep and lambs and 838 calves.

Butchers

Good to choice butchers sold at $6.75 to $7; medium butchers, at $6 to $6.60; common butchers, at $5.50 to $6; good to choice cows, at $5 to $5.65; common to medium cows, at $4.50 to $4.80; canners, at $3.50 to $4; bulls, at $4.50 to $6.25.

Stockers and Feeders

Prices for good to choice heavy feeders 1000 to 1150 lbs., were firm, at $6.40 to $6.65; steers, 900 to 1000 lbs., at $5.60 to $6.25; steers, 700 to 800 lbs., $5.25 to $5.75; eastern stock heifers, $4.35 to $4.80.

Milkers and Springers

Receipts of milkers and springers were not as large and prices remained steady, at $50 to $89 each, the bulk selling from $60 to $70 each.

Veal Calves

The market for calves, while active, was not quite as strong, as there was a larger number offered. Choice calves sold from $9 to $10; good calves, $8 to $9; medium, $7 to $7.50; common, $5.50 to $6.50; rough eastern calves, $4.50 to $5.

Sheep and Lambs

A fairly large number, 1772, met a steady to strong market. Sheep, light ewes, 100 to 130 lbs., $4.60 to $5; ewes, 140 to 160 lbs., $4 to $4.25; lambs, ewes and wethers, $7.25 to $7.50; bucks, 75c per head less.

Hogs

The receipts of hogs yesterday were light, only 516 reported as being on sale. In consequence prices in some instances were a little higher. Selects, fed and watered, $8.60 to $8.75; f.o.b. cars, $8.30 to $8.40; weighed off cars, $8.85 to $9.05.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Oct. 15.—At the C. P. R. live stock market the receipts for the week ended Oct. 11 were 5700 cattle, 3200 sheep and lambs, 2150 hogs and 1650 calves. Offerings today consisted of 2900 cattle, 900 sheep and lambs, 1070 hogs and 500 calves.

Supplies of cattle continue to pour into the above market, the receipts today being the largest on record for some time. Shipments to the U. S. markets this week to date equal 75 carloads. The quality of the cattle coming forward consists principally of common stock, this being the class wanted by American buyers. Prices were firm with sales of common bulls at $4.25 to $4.50 and inferior at $3.75 to $4, while cows brought from $3 to $4 per 100 lbs. In addition to the above buying there was a good demand from local packers for the same class of stock for canning purposes at the same prices. Butchers' stock was scarce, but sufficient to fill the requirements, however. Demand was fair and prices firm, with choice steers selling at $7.25 to $7.50, good at $6.50 to $7, fair at $6.25 to $6.50 and the commoner grades at from $4.50 to $5.50 per 100 lbs. Choice butchers' cows sold at $5.50 to $5.75, good at $5 to $5.25 and common at $4.25 to $4.75 per 100 lbs.

Trade in sheep and lambs was only fairly active, with offerings smaller than usual. Lambs brought $6.25 to $6.75.

Demand for calves for shipment into the United States continues good.

Miss Bean's Letter

A Question of Ownership.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Sarepta was enjoying cereal, coffee and dry toast; Sophia was almost purring over a bowl of oatmeal and cream, while Sarah, the eldest Miss Bean, drank strong green tea, with rolls and a chop. Sarepta was thin and dark and delicate looking; Sophia, her twin sister, was plump and rosy like a gray and white kitten, and Sarah was tall and bony, with sandy hair and eager dark eyes. Once she had been very handsome, but that was long ago.

Hannah, the black cook, padded heavily into the room with a letter held between thumb and forefinger.

"Ephie done brung de mail, ma'am," she said, placing the letter beside Sarah's plate, "an' dey wa'n't no mo'n dat one letter."

"Very well, Hannah," said Sarah, adjusting her glasses to scan the superscription on the large, thick, square envelope. As she read her face grew quite red, and she looked at the others. "It's for me, I think," she said uncertainly.

Sarepta bristled instantly.

"It might be for me," she said tartly, "unless it is addressed to you."

"In that case there would be no doubt at all whom it was for," giggled Sophia, sprinkling sugar on her oatmeal.

"It says 'Miss S. Bean,'" said Sarah with dignity. "From its appearance I should judge it was for me."

"Let me look at it, please; I am expecting a letter," snapped Sophia, holding out her hand for the missive.

Sarah surrendered the letter and was irritated to note that Sarepta's dark face glowed strangely.

"It's the one I've been waiting for," declared Sarepta, with the handle of a spoon slipped under the flap. "I recognize the handwriting."

"So do I," was Sarah's obstinate reply. "You have no right to open it, Sarepta, until you are sure it is yours."

"I am sure."

Sophia blinked her blue eyes and looked up from her empty bowl.

"Let me see the letter. It may be for me. I am 'Miss S. Bean' also; you appear to forget that fact," she said fussily.

"Why, it's Mr. Gray's handwriting, girls!" she exclaimed bluntly. "I think it's for me. I have a great deal of talk and correspondence with him over—over—church—and personal matters," she ended, with a simper.

Sarah's mouth hardened.

"The letter is for me, Sophia. It's all nonsense your thinking Mr. Gray would bother to write to you about church matters. Ministers are very busy men."

Sophia looked ready to cry.

"I think he's as likely to write to me as to you or Sarepta—more likely. I understand why he has been calling here regularly all winter."

Sarepta laughed shortly.

"I understand why, too," she said, with a hidden meaning in her tone.

"It is nonsense for us to bicker over this letter," said Sarah impatiently. "It must be opened, and it is my place as the eldest to do it. I can tell instantly by reading the first line whether it is for me or not."

"So can I," retorted Sarepta.

"And I," sniffed Sophia, dabbing at her eyes with a snowy cambric handkerchief.

"Well, the best way to find out is to inquire of Mr. Gray whom it is for," decided Sarah judicially. "I will send Eph over to the parsonage with a note."

The letter was placed on the mantelpiece behind the Chinese vases, and Sarah wrote the note and sent it off by Eph, the black boy.

Ten minutes afterward he rushed into the sitting room breathless with excitement.

"Marse Gray done gone away in a turrible hurry, Miss Sarah, yes'm. Seems lak he had a telygraft last night that his paw wore killed on de railroad, and Mr. Smif said he guessed it would be a long day afore de pahson come back, fur dey was gwine to give him a good vacashun to git over de shock. He's gwine clean to Californy, whah his paw lives."

It was characteristic of the Beans that not one of them would relinquish her claim to the letter, and so it stood on the mantelpiece day after day, unopened, waiting for Mr. Gray to return and divulge the identity of the "Miss S. Bean" to whom the letter belonged.

In the bottom of each maiden heart there was a firm belief that the letter contained a declaration of marriage, for Mr. Gray had called with marked regularity every Thursday evening during the winter. His attentions to the three sisters had been distributed with careful nicety and exasperating uncertainty. When their niece, Estelle Bean, from Little River, had visited them the minister had sung to them while Estelle played upon the old square piano, and the songs he chose were disquieting to sentimental ladies.

When he lifted his handsome head, with its noble crown of graying hair, and sang about "Annie Laurie," Sarah knew that if he dared the parson would substitute her name for that of Scotch Annie, while Sarepta and Sophia were quite as certain that he meant them—individually.

As for Estelle, she was a meek, mouselike little person with sweet gray eyes and a gentle manner, and she was much beloved by her three aunts, and she loved them in return. She never looked at the middle aged minister when he sang. Her cheeks always grew very pink, and she bent her blond head over the keys until Sarah chided her for bashfulness. Then she lifted her head and was quite gay until Sarepta took her aside and told her not to act "so shallow."

Five months went by, and the letter remained unopened on the mantelpiece.

One golden September day Sarah and Sarepta and Sophia climbed into their surrey and drove over to Little River to call upon their brother, Estelle's father.

Jacob Bean was gathering late corn in the fields that bordered the highway, and he came over to the fence and talked to his sisters while he nibbled a straw. He was a big framed man, and he had five big sons, who worked the farm with him. It was a prosperous farm, and Estelle, the only girl, was petted and indulged. But it did not seem to spoil her. They were all fond of Estelle.

"You look worried, Jacob," said Sophia when their greetings were over.

"I am," said the man, with a glance toward the distant house. "Girls, Maria and I think Estelle's going into a decline."

"What does the doctor say?" asked Sarah sharply.

"Nothing. He says there's nothing to say. You know Brown's way of joking. He said that Estelle was pining for her sweetheart. Why, land, Maria was so mad she wouldn't have him in again!"

"Nonsense!" cried Sarepta sharply. "Estelle's only a child. If she don't have a beau for ten years yet it will be time enough."

"That's what I say," grunted Jacob, and he returned to his pumpkins.

The three sisters found their niece swinging in a hammock on the shaded front porch. Her mother sat beside her knitting a pink wool shawl. Estelle was asleep, and she looked alarmingly pale and thin.

Mrs. Bean greeted her sisters-in-law affectionately and called a stable boy to take the horse. Sarah brought in a basket of grapes and some jars of quince jam she had just made, and the four women sat and talked in low tones about Estelle's health.

"Estelle's never had any beaus, has she, Maria?" asked Sophia carelessly. To Sophia Estelle was a child.

"No, she never encouraged any one except—well, I suppose you've heard folks mention it, though Estelle's dumb as can be about it—except Mr. Gray. But he's gone away now," said Maria complacently. "He always was too old for her, but nice as could be. I almost fell in love with him myself."

"Mr. Gray?" asked Sarah blankly, her mind flying to the letter.

"Mr. Gray?" echoed Sarepta in a stunned tone, her mind on the much discussed letter.

"Oh, Mr. Gray!" said Sophia in her blunt way, throwing up her romance with generous hands. "Why, there's a letter over to the house from him addressed to Miss S. Bean, and there wouldn't one of us open it because we wasn't sure which one of us it was for. It couldn't be for Estelle, for her name begins with an 'E,'" ended Sophia dubiously.

The hammock stirred, and a rosy face appeared over the edge. With her tousled fair hair Estelle looked more like a little girl than ever.

"Aunties, I heard all your remarks," she said tremulously, "and perhaps the letter is for me!"

"But, dear, your name begins with 'E,'" persisted Sophia kindly.

"I know, but he, Mr. Gray, called me 'Stella.' He said it meant a star." The girl turned a glorified face toward her mother. "Oh, mother, don't you believe it was for me? If I never answered he might think I didn't care, and so he stayed away."

Maria turned pale with emotion. "Perhaps so, dear," she said in her heavy way. "If we can get the letter over here you should let your three aunts open it and each one read the opening line. Then they could tell whether it was for one of them. Their names all begin with 'S,' you know."

"Of course, mother," palpitated Estelle. "I wish the letter was here now."

Sarah arose. "I'll go in and telephone to Hannah to send Eph over with it," she said decisively. "It's been on the sitting room mantelpiece for five months."

When she returned they talked of other things until Eph's shining black face appeared at the gate. After he had given up the precious letter and disappeared toward the kitchen Mrs. Bean arose and went in to see about supper.

Estelle took the letter, smiled at the meager address, wondered at her lover's mistake in addressing it to Westbrook instead of Little River; then she tore open the letter and gave the thick, folded sheets to Miss Sarah.

"You first," she said softly.

But Sarah shook her head, and Sarepta shook hers, and Sophia refused point blank, and they all kissed Estelle and said they were going to try to get Mr. Gray to come back to the church so she would be with them, and Sophia said they would talk about her wedding.

They went down to look at the dahlias in the garden, and they smiled at each other and nodded, contented in Estelle's happiness, and in their hearts each one knew that this was the nearest she would come to romance. Yet they were strangely happy.

Railroads a Joke.

The first piece of practical legislation which the Home Rule Parliament will have to tackle will be the nationalization of the Irish railroads.

Business men throughout the country are agreed that anything like a real industrial development of Ireland is impossible under the present system of railroad management and control. Serious men regard the Irish railroads more in the nature of a joke than a live, practical proposition.

Recent investigations show that there is in Ireland a manager and a director for every ten miles of track and each receiving a salary anything from $2,500 to $5,000 a year, while the ordinary workmen employed on the same roads are receiving $3 a week for 60 or 70 hours' work. There is a case of a board of directors drawing as much as $85,000 annually in fees and salary out of a 70-mile track, and to add to the humor of the situation they do not own a single locomotive, a freight car, or indeed a dollar's worth of rolling stock.

Long Time Unsworn.

Although appointed to the Privy Council as far back as 1901, Sir Samuel Griffiths, Chief Justice of Australia, was only sworn recently.

A MESSAGE FROM A WOMAN TO WOMEN

"Every Woman Should Take "Fruit-a-tives"

LAKELET, ONT., MAY 12th, 1911

"Kindly publish this letter of mine if you think it will benefit other women who might be afflicted with the diseases I have had in the past, but am now, thanks to "Fruit-a-tives", completely cured of. It is my firm belief that every woman should take "Fruit-a-tives" if she wants to keep herself in good health.

Before taking "Fruit-a-tives", I was constantly troubled with what is commonly known as "Nerves" or severe Nervousness. This Nervousness brought on the most violent attacks of Sick Headache, for which I was constantly taking doctors' medicine without any permanent relief. Constipation was also a source of great trouble to me and for which the Doctors said "I would have to take medicine all my life", but "Fruit-a-tives" banished all these troubles and now I am a well woman"

JUDGE BARHORST
DOES HIS DUTY TO RHEUMATIC SUFFERERS

If you suffer from Rheumatism and don't read this advice, then the terrible disease must have robbed you of your power to be fair to yourself. Read it:

"I, John Barhorst, Justice of the Peace of McLean Township, Ft. Loramie, Ohio, do certify that after treatment by three doctors without result, I have been cured of a very bad case of Rheumatism by using two bottles of RHEUMA. It is now two years since I used the remedy, and I am still as well as ever. Previous to using RHEUMA I was a cripple, walking with crutches, and I feel it my duty to let other sufferers from Rheumatism know what it will do. The result seems almost miraculous to me. I have advised RHEUMA to at least a dozen persons, and each one speaks as highly of it as I. I will advise any one suffering from the disease if a two-cent stamp is enclosed."—May 31, 1912.

You can secure a bottle of RHEUMA for only 50 cents at the Warne Drug Co., and they say, if not as advertised, money back. It's just as good for Gout, Arthritis, Lumbago and Sciatica.

RECORDS BROKEN AT THE NORWOOD FAIR

With June-like weather the East Peterborough Agricultural Society's forty-fifth annual exhibition at Norwood yesterday surpassed all previous records. It is estimated that nearly eight thousand people visited the grounds, and not only were all records broken in regard to attendance but the many departments showed a marked improvement on other years. In reference to the crowd, it can be readily imagined that they were not all residents of Norwood. Large numbers came from the surrounding towns, such as Hastings, Havelock, Campbellford and Indian River, while about 400 local people also helped to swell the assemblage.

The new armories, now nearly completed, were used to great advantage as a main building, in which all the minor and miscellaneous exhibits were placed. This was a decided improvement, as the old drill shed was far too small, and is only suitable for the purpose of exhibiting the poultry. In connection with this section the Dominion Department of Agriculture had an egg exhibit showing proper methods of handling and grading eggs, and also distributed information about poultry. The egg exhibit received a great deal of attention.

The Rural School Exhibit collected from the pupils of the six rural schools in that vicinity, consisted of poultry, crops and flowers, raised by the boys and girls and exhibited at the fair in competition for prizes. This exhibit gave parents and others interested an opportunity of learning what is being done for vocational education and the cordial invitation extended to everyone to call was generally accepted. The department was in charge of Mr. C. E. McDowell, of Norwood.

All the live stock, especially the cattle were the finest ever exhibited at any inland fair. Mr. A. P. Pollard of Port Hope, the judge of the beef cattle, remarked to the Review that he never viewed a nicer lot of cattle in his life.

The short horn cattle exhibited by Andrew and Wm. Knox, which carried off most of the prizes was a grand collection, they included bulls, breeding cows of milk type; also heifers and bull calves. Other exhibitors were, Mr. Wm. Wilson, of Warkworth, showing 12 head, including breeding cows and heifer calves; Richard Patterson, of South Dummer, with a herd of short horns, and Mr. J. P. Boland, of Westwood, also with short horns, including one bull, one cow, heifers and grade cattle.

The various prizes for horses exhibited were well contested and judging from the class of horses shown that section of the province will soon be noted for its horses.

The horse races were good and although the track is not very suitable for races they were conducted in the best possible manner, for this the credit is due chiefly to Mr. J. B. Pearce, superintendent of the races, who worked untiringly in keeping the people from the track and giving the horses every advantage.

The result of the Free-For-All:—

Picket Boy, Wm. Fanning, Lindsay	2 2 1 1 1
Susie Hal, Dr. Johnston, Peterborough	1 1 2 2 2
Bourbon Brook, A. Elmhirst, Keene	3 3 3 3 3

The result of the Green Trot, for which all horses that did not win any money on any track up to October 1st, were eligible:

Dr. Johnston, C. Fife, Otonabee	1 2 2 1 1
Maud Direct, A. Elmhirst, Keene	2 1 1 2 2
Jack Brooks, J. Dinsdale, Otonabee	3 3 3 3 3

Judges—Dr. Munro, Warsaw; Mr Whity, Sterling and Mr. R. J. Munroe, Peterborough.

Starter—Dr. Munro.

The fair was also marked by a large midway, which contained a coon side show that drew considerable attention, as did the old favorite, "Billie" Bowman, with his slight of hand tricks.

The cadets of the Norwood High School won the prize for the best exhibition of squad and company drill with arms, squad to consist of not less than 26 non-commissioned officers or men under the command of an officer. The cadets made a very creditable showing and were commanded by Major H. Armstrong, B. A., assisted by Captain R. A. Boland.

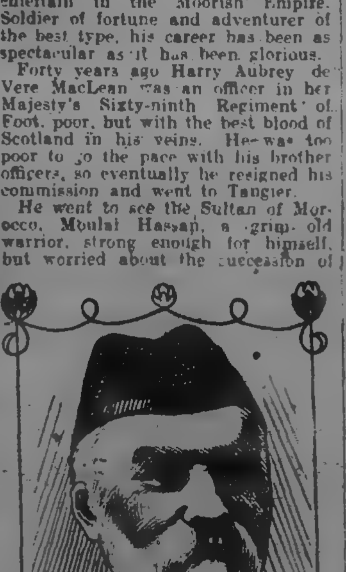
KAID HARRY MACLEAN IS ANNOUNCED TO MARRY AGAIN

Scotman Who Rose to Fame as Head of the Bodyguard of the Sultan of Morocco Was a British Soldier, But Sought Fortune Elsewhere—Was Held For Ransom But No One Would Pay.

The announcement of the engagement of Kaid Sir Harry Aubrey MacLean to Miss Ella Prendergast, V.C., recalls the exploits of the Scottish chieftain in the Moorish Empire. Soldier of fortune and adventurer of the best type, his career has been as spectacular as it has been glorious.

Forty years ago Harry Aubrey de Vere MacLean was an officer in her Majesty's Sixty-ninth Regiment of Foot, poor, but with the best blood of Scotland in his veins. He was too poor to go the pace with his brother officers, so eventually he resigned his commission and went to Tangier.

He went to see the Sultan of Morocco, Moulai Hassan, a grim old warrior, strong enough for himself, but worried about the succession of his heir, a puny, weak boy. There were pretenders to the throne who were waiting for the old Sultan to die to place force behind their claims.



KAID SIR HARRY MACLEAN.

MacLean proposed himself to Moulai Hassan as a commander and military instructor for the imperial bodyguard, who should be equipped with modern weapons. His proposal was accepted and MacLean soon knocked this thousand fighting men into good shape.

MacLean devoted himself for the next few years in putting down brigands and preserving order. Then the Sultan died, and there was an insurrection when the weak son Mulai Abdel-Aziz, was put on the throne. MacLean put this down sharply, as he did several subsequent uprisings.

Meanwhile Raisuli and his bandits has been ravaging the northern section of Morocco, and in 1907 MacLean attempted to stop him. Raisuli had become world-famous in 1904, when he captured Ion Perdicaris, a wealthy American, and held him for ransom. Morocco, prodded by the United States, finally raised $55,000 to free Perdicaris. Raisuli captured other foreigners and held them, and MacLean sent word to him that he would meet him in the desert alone. MacLean went alone, but Raisuli took some of his men, and made MacLean a prisoner. The bandit demanded $[illegible],000 for MacLean's freedom. He dropped this price several times, but no one would pay it, and after MacLean had been held prisoner for seven months he was turned free.

It was not long after this that MacLean returned to England and took a country home in Norfolk. MacLean's first wife was Miss Catherine Coe. He married her in 1862, and her social position was such that none of the European women at either Gibraltar or Tangier would consent to any social intercourse with her, in spite of her husband's influence and power. Sir Harry continued to live with her until 1905, when matters got so bad that he sued for a divorce.

The Ordeal by Touch.

Major Robert Le Mesurier Willoughby, who died at Cheltenham, Eng., recently, was an excellent story-teller, and a favorite tale of his concerned his barrack-room days. A soldier, so the story ran, had several times complained of thefts of articles from his kit, but the culprit could not be detected. It was, therefore decided to subject the men in barrack to an ordeal by touch, and the corporal in charge of the affair explained to the assembled soldiers that on the floor of the mess room he had placed the barracks cat beneath an inverted tin dish. The cat, he assured them, would mew at the touch of the thief. After the lights had been lowered the men filed past to touch the dish. The cat did not mew, but when the lights were turned up it was found that every man who touched the dish had blackened his hand with soot which had been placed on it. Only one man had failed to soil his hand. A subsequent search of his possessions revealed the stolen articles. Major Willoughby got his commission in the 4th Dragoon Guards after ten years' service in the ranks.

Healthy City Folk.

Life in a great city does not necessarily lead to physical degeneration. There died a London fish hawker about four years ago who could trace his family back 200 years and had never heard of an addition of country blood. He died within a few weeks of his golden wedding and left twenty-one children, seventy-one grandchildren and twenty great-grandchildren. None of the children married out of the London district in which they lived, except a soldier son who emigrated. The old man plied his trade until within two days of his death and "could pull his barrow twenty miles. He had sinews like a young man and not a corn on his feet."

It is better for a girl to be given in marriage than it is for a man to be sold.

OMEMEE NEWS

OMEMEE, Oct 15.—Rev. D. H. Currie pastor, administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper in the Presbyterian church on Sunday morning.

Mr E. Dancey made a business trip to Lindsay on Saturday.

Miss Jessie Lowes of Toronto, and her sister, Miss Pearle, of Mount Pleasant, were visitors to Omemee last week.

Mr. Byers of Lindsay was the guest of his daughter, Mrs. White over Sunday.

Mrs. James McLean and Mr. H. J. McLean of Mount Pleasant called on Omemee friends the first of the week.

Major Fee of Lindsay came down home for over Sunday.

The latter part of last week, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Parsons of George street were remembered by the stork. It's a son.

There was a large number of delegates from Lindsay and other places at the Epworth League Convention held in the Methodist Church on Wednesday, Oct. 8th. The reports of the various leagues and departments were presented and the tone was of encouragement, the addresses delivered were edifying and full of interest.

The morning session was opened with song and prayer, conducted by Rev. W. H. Smyth of town, after which the reports of each league were presented. Rev. W. W. Jones of Janetville, president, delivered a short address and this was followed by an address by Rev. J. F. Chapman, of Omemee, on "The call of the Community and How the League may Respond."

Field Secretary, Farewell, who has been touring the various league districts delivered an inspiring address on "God and I, or the Waste, Conservation and Use of Human and Divine Resources."

In the afternoon a talk on "The Hill Difficulty—What is Yours?" was conducted by Dr. Thompson of town after which an address on "How to Make the Week night Service Go," by Mr. F. Riches of Cambray. "The Challenge of our Fourth Department (citizenship)" was the text of a splendid address by the Rev. S. J. McMullen, of Queen street church, Lindsay. Then came an instructive talk on "A study in committees — What and How," by the Field Secretary. Sacrament service was conducted by Rev. John Bedfor of Fenelon Falls.

In the evening Rev. J. W. Whyte of Minden gave an address on "Our call to the Home Field," which was followed by the Field Secretary's talk on "Our call to the Foreign Field."

For the ensuing year the following officers were elected:

Hon. Pres.— Dr. S. J. Shorey, Lindsay.

President— W. W. Jones, Janetville.

1st. Vice-President — Mr. Frank Riches Cambray

2nd. — Mr. A. Allin, Lindsay.

3rd— Miss M. Littleton, Fenelon Falls.

4th— Rev. J. F. Chapman, Omemee

5th— Mrs. Chapman, Omemee.

Treasurer— Miss A. Wright, Lindsay.

Secretary— Miss Birdie Mark, Lindsay.

Convention Representative — Rev. S. J. McMullen, Lindsay.

The Lindsay delegation consisted of Mr. Cragge, Misses A. Wright, B. Mark, E. Webber and the Rev. S. J. McMullen. A special feature of the convention was the delightful chorus singing of 40 children, under the supervision of Miss Annie Ivory.

Mr. George Morrison, who has spent the summer at Peterboro has returned to town.

The grounds about the Armory, and the new cement walks are being rushed along by a strong force of men.

Mr. J. G. Staples was a visitor to Lindsay on Friday.

There will be an all day shooting match on Thanksgiving Day, at the ranges, just west of town. It will be open to civilians as well as militiamen and good prizes will be awarded. The Rifle Club has installed a modern automatic target which will greatly facilitate the keeping of records as well as afford ample quick practice.

The High school commencement exercises and concert will be held in Coronation Hall on the evening of Oct. 24th. Besides the presentation of certificates and diplomas to successful pupils at the Departmental examinations, there will be a play entitled "Rice Pudding," drills and music. Greet the function with a large attendance.

Miss Ola Earle of town is at Belleville, taking a course in Domestic Science at Albert College.

On October 3rd., Dr. Stork called on Mr. and Mrs. Ira Rehill and presented them with a son.

Miss M. Thornton has returned home from a visit with her friends at Peterboro.

Mr. F. Curry was the guest of his brother, Mr. W. H. Curry, last week.

Miss Nellie Ford has returned from London, where she visited friends.

Mr. Cecil Mills of Lindsay was home for over Sunday.

The Presbyterian Anniversary will take place on 26th. inst., with Rev. P. B. Thornton preaching the sermons. On the evening of the 27th. inst., there will be a fowl supper in the basement, and an entertainment in the auditorium of the church.

Mr and Mrs. James Gall have taken residence on King street.

The Methodists will hold special services next Sabbath in church and Sabbath school work. The following evening, 20th inst., they will provide a supper and a lecture.

Many of the young people are diligently practising for the commencement exercises.

The W. F. M. S. hold their Thanksgiving offering meeting this Wednesday at 3 p.m. in the Presbyterian church. There will be an address from a returned missionary of India and refreshments will be served. All ladies cordially invited.

Mrs Johnston of Colborne is visiting her brother, Mr. J. W. Mitchell of King street.

A consignment of chairs for the new Armory has arrived.

At the meeting of the Presbytery of Peterboro last week, in the city of Peterboro, Omemee and Mount Pleasant appointments were placed in one circuit and Lakevale and Springville appointments in another.

AUTUMN DAYS

A deep silence has settled on the wood. Across the rill a grey grouse is drumming on the grey trunk of a fallen tree. The grey squirrel is gathering nuts for the winter. The young deer has changed his coat for one of a more sombre hue, a red brown to match the autumn leaves. Now the leaves are falling, unveiling the forest and opening long avenues through which we get glimpses of jumping deer.

This is the time to visit the Algonquin National Park, a delightful spot to enjoy a few days' rest, study wild animal life, enjoy autumn in the forest and gather strength for the strenuous life ahead during the winter months.

Good accommodation at the Highland Inn at reasonable rates. Any Grand Trunk Agent can tell you how to get there, or write J. E. Colson, Manager, Highland Inn, Algonquin Park, Ont. 2d Running No Risk.

"What," asks the maiden aunt, "going to marry that Mr Newwun? Why you hardly know the man, Imogene. In the few days you have been acquainted with him you cannot possibly have learned anything of his family or antecedents or habits or personal circumstances."

"That is true, Aunt Keturah. But you have always told me that no woman who knows anything about a man will marry him."

OPENING SESSIONS OF BAPTIST CONVENTION AT MURRAY ST. CHURCH

The Annual Baptist Convention opened last night at the Murray Street Church. There was a good attendance. Rev. D. R. Webb, pastor, gave an address of welcome to the delegates in behalf of the Baptists of the city.

Alderman G. N. Gordon represented the Mayor of Peterborough and brought greetings to the convention in behalf of the City. He said the citizens extended a hearty welcome to the delegates. Many years ago, when last the convention was held in Peterborough, the city was a very small place compared with what it is to-day, and he hoped that the next time they came to the city, in the near future, it would be twice as large as it is now.

"When we show strangers around our city," said Alderman Gordon, "one of the first sights we point them to is Murray Street Church." He went on to say that he would like to see a closer union between the Protestant Churches of the city and that the Baptists and Methodists would exchange pulpits oftener. He hoped the delegates would have a good and profitable time in the city.

Alderman Langford also spoke and recommended the city to their notice as a place of interest, both for its beautiful situation and for its commercial and industrial interests. He commended the Baptists of Peterborough as a progressive body that had forged ahead and was a great influence for moral and spiritual good in the city. Both speakers spoke in high praise of the personal influence of Mr. Webb, the pastor of Murray Street Church.

Rev. A. A. Cameron, ex-President of the Convention, replied on behalf of the delegates and said they were all very pleased to come to such a progressive and prosperous city.

At this point the various committees were appointed.

Miss Dorothy Allan sang very beautifully "Hark, Hark My Soul Angelic Songs are Swelling."

The President then proceeded to deliver his address. The new President, A. A. Ayers, Esq., is a practical, business-like, genial man, somewhere between sixty and seventy, very healthy and robust in appearance, and although he read his address from the manuscript, he held his audience from beginning to end. The many points and epigrams, both humorous and serious, were punctuated with gentle laughter and cheers. It was the address of a man of long experience, but an experience that had neither soured him nor narrowed his vision. It has been said that "you cannot put old heads on young shoulders," the President has a young head on old shoulders.

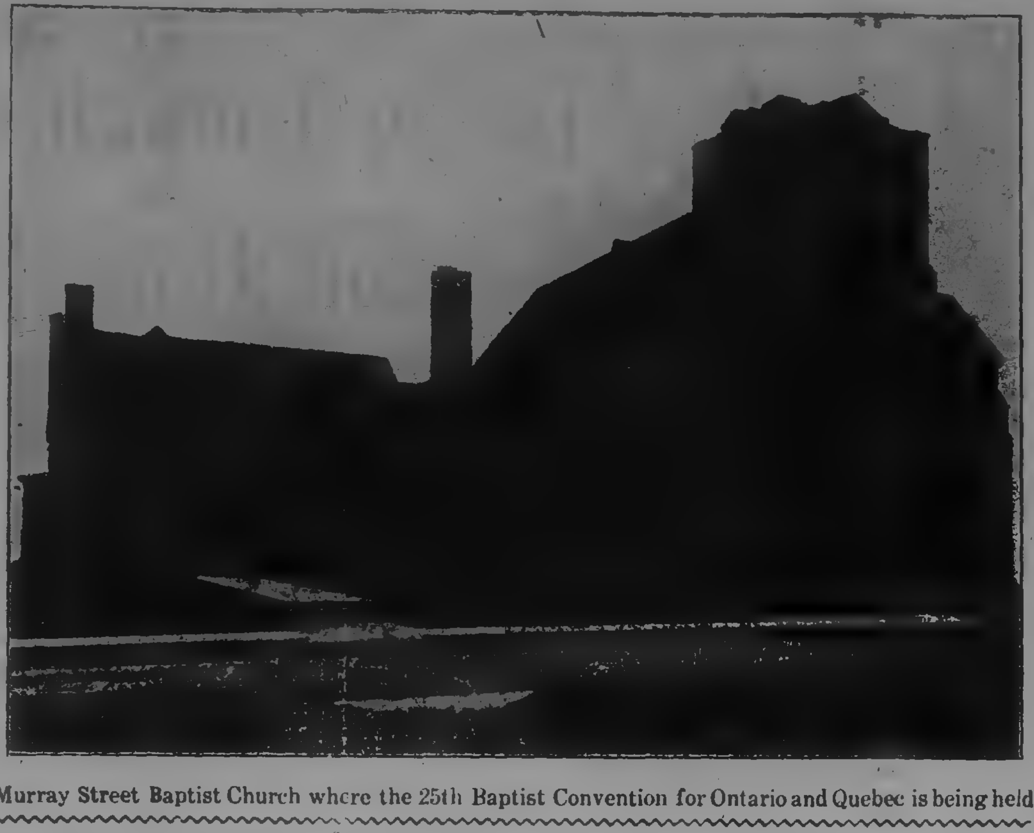
Mr. Ayer referred to the progress seen in the world and of the vast opportunities now presented. His remarks in regard to modern conditions were most interesting. To the question "will church union save the people?" he said.

Much has been said and written about union of churches and denominations. Would this lessen worldliness and increase spirituality? Union would bring about great economy in working and no doubt fewer church buildings would accommodate all who attend in many places.

Theoretically, the uniting of churches is an ideal plan, but would it result in harmony, greater activity in Christian work, and above all, a deeper spiritual life and consecration to service? As far as my experience goes, two churches uniting has resulted in the membership of one of the original churches almost entirely disappearing in a few years.

Nevertheless, there is something wrong when in the villages and small towns there are five or ten churches, including two or more of the same denomination, when less than half the number would accommodate every man, woman and child in town. Here is a practical subject for the denominations to meet and consider.

I would like to see church union practised in a few such places before I am prepared to say that it is workable.



Murray Street Baptist Church where the 25th Baptist Convention for Ontario and Quebec is being held

However, I am utterly opposed to our Baptist Mission Boards spending money to enter upon fields already fully occupied by other denominations.

A far more important subject to consider than church union is that of the spirituality of the Church and the fact that one half of the people are seldom or never seen at its services.

CHURCH UNION

Few Baptists would be opposed to organic church union if it was practicable, providing no sacrifice of principle was involved.

By principle is meant, first, the fitness of the applicant to become a member of a church and second, the New Testament form of confession of faith in the death and resurrection of Christ, as represented in Baptism.

It is generally supposed that the Baptists are opposed to union on account of what others miscall close communion. When the question is put to me, my reply is that "I believe the Lord's table is open to all who have been baptized; have you been baptized?"

There is no such thing as close communion. It is close baptism.

If Christ be not raised from the dead, then our faith is vain. If our confession in baptism before all the world of our belief in His death and resurrection is not the New Testament form of Baptism, then there is no need of a Baptist Church. That it is, no scholar of repute will deny, and therefore there is no reason why other churches should not practise it and so pave the way for church union.

Let us not forget that neither the Lord's Supper nor baptism are necessary to salvation, but should be observed in a proper and orderly manner by those who are served.

UNITY OF EFFORT

Canadians should take warning by present conditions in New York, Chicago, Boston and other cities, and woe be unto us as Christians and as Canadian citizens if the Gospel is not given to all the foreigners coming into Canada.

In order to accomplish this there will need to be a supreme united and systematic effort of all denominations. Few have any idea of the filth and ignorance in which many of these people live, and how accessible they are to kindness on the one hand, and how easily led into all that is degrading and dishonest on the other.

The scrutineers and Nominating Committee were appointed at the session last night.

THIS MORNING'S SESSION.

This morning's session opened at 9.15. The delegates were entertained with a few gramaphone selections provided by the Peterborough Music Co.

Rev. John MacNeil, of Toronto, presided, and after the singing of "Rock of Ages," and prayer, Professor Matthews read a paper on "The Old Testament Doctrine of Salvation."

The Professor reminds one of Professor Challenger, but he dealt very delicately with his subject, and made a dry theme interesting. He said there was not much in the Old Testament on salvation as it is known in the New Testament. There was a lack of final statement or definite theology on such subjects as personal immortality. Even in some of the Psalms, which are taken as expressions of personal experience, the national rather than the individual translation is the correct one.

Salvation in the Old Testament was first, deliverance from national enemies such as the oppression of Egypt. The note of this period was: "Jehovah is a man of war."

Secondly, deliverance from disaster, which was bound to come to the nation through the oppression of the poor by the rich. The Prophet Amos was the moral conscience of the nation, and he spoke in words heated in the furnace seven times.

Then there was salvation from past calamity and the attainment of a glorious Kingdom. "They should receive double for all their suffering." The sword should be beaten into ploughshare and the "street thronged with children."

From this material and national conception of salvation sprung the spiritual and personal gospel of the New Testament. The Old Testament teaching might be summed up in the words, "God is Love." This is its message, and upon this rests the gospel, "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son."

SUPERANNUATION BOARD.

The Ministerial Superannuation Board report showed that the receipts of the year, including balance on hand at the beginning were $7,142.72 and disbursements $4,495.20, leaving a balance on hand of $2,646.52. Sixteen ministers and thirteen widows of ministers were paid $3,[illegible], an increase of $222.00.

A larger number of churches are contributing to the fund.

PUBLICATION BOARD.

In the report of the Publication Board, presented by F. C. Radcliff, Esq., Toronto, Chairman, on the Bookroom business for the year totaled $84,772 being $1,875.04 in excess of last year.

LAKEHURST RURAL MAIL ROUTE WILL START SOON

R. J. Scollard, the Lowest Tenderer Gets the Contract Mail Will Be Distributed in Ennismore

The Lakehurst rural mail route will be opened in less than a month. The tender of P. J. Scollard being the lowest—it being $821—gets the contract.

This will give a daily service from Lakehurst and Peterboro and back and supplants the old Ennismore service from Peterboro to Ennismore but at Ennismore the mail will be dropped off and instead of the people of Ennismore having to call at the Post Office for mail, it will be distributed by a new rural mail route of which Lewis Sullivan, being the lowest tenderer, will have the contract.

Some of the tenderers had intended to put on a good passenger service, which especially in the summer months would be a matter of great importance to tourists and the people of Northern Ennismore and South Harvey. It is hoped that this scheme will be carried out by Mr. Scollard. Warsaw has a daily motor service and it pays. Burleigh has one likewise and it would be a source of great profit and convenience to Harvey, which, not having the usual boat service, is badly in need of a prompt stage service. The route is too long for horses, and anyway the day of horses has gone by.

It is well known that the member, Mr. J. H. Burnham, is very anxious to open the back country by all means in his power.

AFTER GOVERNMENT AID

He has been working some time with the Minister of Forests and Mines at Toronto to get the Ontario Government to superintend the preservation of the north country from fire. Only the government and a government service is able to cope with a conflagration when it breaks out and a day's work by the government is worth a month's struggle by a few settlers whose resources are limited, as they have other things of their own to attend to.

However, the opening of a daily route from Peterboro will be a big thing for Harvey, and possibly it is only the beginning of greater things.

FRUIT SHOWER A BIG SUCCESS

Over 400 Jars Were Received by Ladies

The fruit shower held last night in St. Alphonsus Lyceum under the auspices of the Sacred Heart and St. Peter's Ladies Aid Societies, proved to be a big success. Over 400 jars of fruit were received and also a large amount of money originated from the silver collection. The proceeds will be donated to St. Joseph's Hospital.

The ladies in charge were: Mrs. N. T. Laplante, Mrs. J. Dunn, Mrs. J. M. Hayes, Mrs. Martin McFadden, Mrs. J. E. Sullivan, Mrs. (Dr.) Galvin, Mrs. H. F. Crowley, Mrs. J. Coughlin, Mrs. E. J. McCarthy, Mrs. F. J. McGrath, Mrs. G. Popham, Mrs. Girard and Mrs. Geo. Bill.

Among the clergy present were: His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., Very Rev. Dean McColl, Rev. Father Galvin, Rev. Father Guiry, Rev. J. J. O'Brien, Rev. Father Cote and Rev. Father Meagher.

Fall Bride's Traveling Suit.

Already tailors are busy in preparing costumes for the autumn. Oddly enough, black satin appears to be the favorite material for these, and next comes navy blue satin, then moire, very different from the rigid material so well known to our mothers. It is supple, soft and light. Though serge continues to hold its own and whipcord is among the highest of favorites, yet these satin costumes have some justification, being fairly strong and durable and yet quite light.

The little coats are quite short, and many have frills round the neck and edging the revers. Others are supplied with little fancy waistcoats, many in handsome embroideries, or, if not entirely composed of these, are simply bordered with them in the front.

Very elaborate jabots of lace or spotted net are also worn with these little coats. Black and white is beginning to supersede plain black and has taken on a new lease of life among the smart.

Never stir a sponge cake batter. If this is done the air is allowed to escape.

FLOWERS A FOOD

In India the Natives Eat Bassia Tree Blossoms Uncooked.

In these days one would hardly call a dinner of rosebuds a feast, nor should we be inclined to accept an invitation to dine on the blossoms of the pumpkin vine. Yet some Indians, like the old Aztecs, used to esteem these flowers, when properly prepared, a great dainty.

So, in the same way, do natives of many parts of India depend for food upon the blossoms of the bassia tree. They do not need even to cook the flowers, but make a good meal of them raw. These blossoms are described as sweet and sickly in odor and taste. They are sometimes dried in the sun, when they are kept and sold in bazaars as a regular article of diet.

The trees are so highly esteemed that the threat of cutting down their bassia trees will generally bring an unruly tribe to terms. This is perhaps not to be wondered at when it is considered that a single tree will yield from 200 to 400 pounds of flowers. The Parsees cook the flowers and also make sweetmeats of them.

"Nobody would be inclined to deny that smoked fish and smoked meat are agreeable varieties in our bill of fare, but few, perhaps, would feel ready to plead guilty to a taste for smoked flowers. And yet, when we give to the clove its well earned place among flavorings we are making use of a smoked flower bud. The buds grow on a small evergreen and are plucked from the ends of the branches before they expand. Then they are dried in the sun and smoked over a wood fire to give them the brown color.—Philadelphia Press.

A BOUQUET OF FLOWERS

It Told a Story Without Words

By EMILY WESTBROOK

Mrs. Van Tromp of New York was a globe trotter. She was a widow with one daughter, Madeline, who was obliged to trot with her mother, but would rather have remained at home, for Miss Madeline was a sensible girl and, although not averse to seeing foreign lands, was not minded to spend her life in circling the world.

In their wanderings the Van Tromps found themselves in Bombay, India, having done that country so far as women tourists could. Mrs. Van Tromp was much impressed with the display of wealth of the rulers and especially the jewels with which they decorated themselves, for ornaments are dear to the feminine heart. It is quite likely that if a rajah, covered from his waist up with gems, had asked for the hand of her daughter she would have given her consent instanter.

But a globe trotter cannot remain in one place or the term would be a misnomer. The Van Tromps left the city of Bombay to sail across the Arabian sea and pass through the Red and Mediterranean seas to London. Such a journey in a single vessel requires a great deal of time, and those cooped up together in her are apt before the end to become pretty well acquainted.

Mrs. Van Tromp was sitting one day on deck in a steamer chair reading an erotic novel when the wind blew her veil off her head and sent it sailing astern. It was picked up by a gentleman with a tawny, drooping mustache, who handed it to her with a profound bow. He was so distinguished looking that instead of giving him the conventional thanks that she would have accorded an ordinary person she bestowed them with her most charming smile. The gentleman assured her that she was welcome and further remarked that since the day was a trifle windy perhaps he had better find a more protected spot for her. She accepted the offer, and the gentleman removed her chair and rugs to the lee side of the wireless telegraph office, where she was more comfortable.

Now, Mrs. Van Tromp was a woman of fifty, while the gentleman could not have been much over thirty. There was therefore no impropriety in her entering into conversation with him about the weather, the ennui occasioned by so long a confinement within such narrow limits, and other small talk incidental to shipboard. The gentleman spoke with an English accent such as Mrs. Van Tromp had heard among certain swell acquaintances she had made in London. While they were chatting Miss Madeline came up breasting the wind and joined her mother.

"My daughter, Mr. ——," said Mrs. Van Tromp by way of introduction, stopping for her new found friend to supply the deficiency of his name.

"Mackridge."

"Mr. Mackridge has been kind enough to keep my veil from going overboard and to move my chair out of the wind."

The gentleman bowed, and Miss Van Tromp inclined her head in recognition. He provided her with a chair that stood near and received an invitation from her mother to occupy one himself in their company.

This was the beginning of one of those tourist acquaintances that, informally made, often ripen into strong friendships. Mr. Mackridge was especially attentive to Mrs. Van Tromp, who was especially gratified at being an object of consideration from one so much younger than herself, and she regarded it a proof that he had been brought up by some aristocratic family who had not broken away from the tradition of respect for age. This view was confirmed by Mr. Mackridge himself, who when accused of it confessed it, stating that he was the next younger brother of the Marquis of Goldingay, one of the oldest families in Ireland. He furthermore let it be known that the marquis was a bachelor and in ill health.

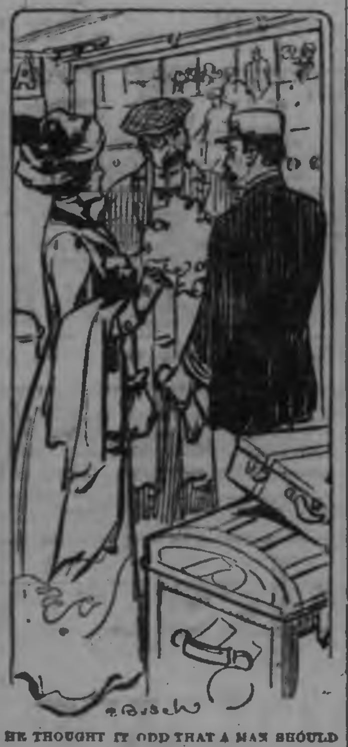
This was quite enough to induce Mrs. Van Tromp to lay plans for a union between Mr. Mackridge and her daughter. The mother cast off her regret that she couldn't marry Madeline to a rajah and became interested in the more practicable scheme of marrying her to a man who was likely to become a marquis. The first time after having received this information that Mr. Mackridge joined her and her daughter on deck she made an excuse to go below in order to leave them together.

Miss Van Tromp had become such a traveler that she was not averse to picking up acquaintances during a voyage, but she seldom became familiar with them. Mr. Mackridge evinced a desire for her companionship, but found as the journey proceeded that he was not permitted to come to terms of intimacy. Mrs. Van Tromp watched his attentions to her daughter and could not understand why Madeline gave no more cordial response.

"My dear," said the politic mother, "if you would be more civil to Mr. Mackridge it might be of great benefit to us. He tells me that his brother has a house in London and is usually there during the season. We may be invited there and meet many persons of rank."

"I thought his brother was a bachelor. Bachelors don't usually entertain."

"Oh, Madeline, you don't grasp things as you should. You will never take the position you should because you have no push. The fact that Mr Mackridge's brother is a bachelor should lead you all the more to cultivate him."



HE THOUGHT IT ODD THAT A MAN SHOULD BE CARRYING FLOWERS.

"I have thought, mother, dear, that you preferred I should cultivate Mr Mackridge himself."

Mrs. Van Tromp made a grimace but accorded no reply to such stupidity, for she certainly considered any girl stupid who would encourage a younger brother of a marquis, even though the marquis himself was in bad health.

During the passage of the Red sea Mr. Mackridge continued his attentions, and Mrs. Van Tromp was pleased that Madeline seemed more disposed to accept them. This acceptance could not be construed to mean encouragement, but Mrs. Van Tromp felt more hopeful, and Mr. Mackridge took advantage of it to be more attentive. He gained a point with Mrs. Van Tromp by letting out the fact that he was a captain in a British regiment stationed in India, all the officers of which were noblemen. He had procured a leave of absence to go home, having been informed that his brother the marquis, was failing rapidly.

After receiving this additional information Mrs. Van Tromp conceived the idea of going ashore in Captain Mackridge's company on the ship's arrival at Gibraltar. He, being a British officer, would doubtless be hand in glove with the officers of the garrison and would be able to secure for the Van Tromps special privileges. She hinted to Mackridge that she would be pleased to have him with her and her daughter when they visited Gibraltar, and he accepted the invitation with alacrity. But when they reached the port the captain was confined to his stateroom with a severe indisposition and was unable to leave the ship.

All went well with the trio who were performing this little comedy during the latter part of the voyage. Just before leaving the steamer Captain Mackridge managed to obtain a large bouquet of flowers. Whether he bought them from a bumboat or they had been cultivated aboard the ship does not matter. The important feature is that he presented them to Miss Van Tromp. The gift was made while the mother and daughter, accompanied by the captain, were about to pass down the gangway. The young lady inhaled their perfume and started down for the dock with them in her left hand, carrying a piece of hand baggage in her right. On reaching the dock she suddenly remembered leaving some article in her stateroom.

"Please take these," she said to Mackridge, handing him the hand baggage and her bouquet, "and keep them till I return. I'll be back in a few minutes."

Mackridge took the articles, a certain whiteness appearing about his mouth and an anxiety in his eyes as he did so. Miss Van Tromp ran up the gangway, passing with difficulty those coming down, and disappeared within the ship. A customs inspector, who was watching for smugglers, noticed a gentleman standing with a large bouquet in his hand and pondered. Had a lady been carrying it his attention might not have been attracted. Suspicious as all custom house officials are, he thought it odd that a man should be carrying flowers, and possibly it might be used as a means of concealing dutiable goods.

"I'll look into that, sir, if you please," he said to Mackridge.

The whiteness about the latter's mouth turned to a sickly pallor as the inspector took the bouquet from his hands. Pulling it apart, several articles wrapped in white tissue paper fell on the dock. The inspector picked them up, unwrapped one and a large diamond glistened in the sunlight.

"Where's Captain Mackridge?" she asked.

"Gone under arrest for smuggling." And she recounted the discovery of the jewels.

"And all he wanted of me," said Madeline, "was to carry the bouquet ashore for him. I suspected something of the kind and turned it back into his hands on purpose."

Making Paper Pulp.

A Consular report gives particulars of new industries established in British Guiana. It is stated that Hedychium, a paper pulp of high quality and value, is grown extensively in Brazil, and it has been found to thrive fairly well in British Guiana in swampy soils. The Director of Science and Agriculture, considering that the plant growing in British Guiana has not the vigor of that growing in Brazil, owing to exhaustion of the present stock, had asked the Government to import from Brazil some plants for the purpose of the experiments. With regard to the areca nut, the governor had been impressed with the inferior growth of the trees here, compared with those in Nigeria, and it had been thought to be due to their coming from a different strain of the same palm. His excellency's intention in the conduct of experiments with this palm was to introduce new seeds, and already some had been planted in the nursery of the botanic gardens. The castor oil plant was undoubtedly indigenous to the soil of the colony.

Fisheries Are Flourishing.

According to statistics compiled by the customs department and issued recently by Hon. J. D. Reid, the Canadian fishing industry is in a most flourishing condition. The exports for the first four months of the present fiscal year show a surprising increase. Canada exported $5,032,000 of domestic fish for the first four months, compared with $3,748,000 for the first four months, compared with $3,748,000 for the corresponding period of last year. There is a slight falling off, however, in the exports of animals and their produce. For the first four mnoths of the fiscal year $13,083,000 were exported, as against $13,620,000 for the same period of 1912.

Herbert Spencer and the Puddles.

On no one occasion was Herbert Spencer known to ride when going to a dinner, yet so carefully did he guard himself against the chance of soiling his dress shoes that he habitually carried a bundle of old newspapers under his arm. These were for the purpose of being dropped, one by one, into each mud puddle he might encounter on crossing the street. By the time he reached his destination the store of papers was exhausted. Muddy shoes on the return walk did not matter to him in the least.

THE GOLDEN HORSESHOE.

That Was the First Order Founded In This Country.

How many persons have ever heard of the Order of the Golden Horseshoe the first order founded in America?

In 1724, when Virginia extended from the Atlantic into the unknown west, few of her colonists had crossed the Blue Ridge or the Alleghanies. So full of dangers from savages and wild beasts and so full of natural difficulties was the passage of these terrible heights that Governor Spotswood, setting out to discover a pass, looked on the expedition as so hazardous that he took with him a guard of "soldiers, gentlemen and pioneers," armed and carrying provisions. These scaled the pass with great hardships and perils and returned after the governor had cut the name of King George in the rocks on the highest peak.

He then constituted the society, or order, of the Golden Horseshoe. Each man who had scaled this high pass was made a member of it, and to each one he presented a golden horseshoe. On the side was inscribed in Latin, "So It Pleases Him to Cross Mountains."

Any man thereafter who could prove that he had read with his own eyes the name of the king on the height was entitled to become a member of this order.—Chicago Record Herald.

Economical Hand Bag.

"I want you to see my lovely new shopping bag," said a certain lady to a caller the other afternoon. "My husband gave it to me for my birthday, and it's simply grand. And it's so economical! You see, you open this and there are two compartments, and you open the compartment on this side and there is a little pocket in that, and you open the little pocket and there is a cute little pocketbook for change, with one side partitioned off for street car tickets."

"I see," said the caller. "But why do you call economical?"

"Why, it takes so long to open all the things and get to your street car tickets that by the time you do whoever's with you has paid your fare."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Nearly every man is true to his first love—himself.

Reported Verbatim.

Very few speakers are precise and accurate enough to stand well in an absolutely verbatim report. I have come across a verbatim report of a wonderful question addressed by Lord Chief Justice Hyde to an accused person, writes "A Man of Kent" in the British Weekly. If any reader can make head or tail of it I should like to hear from him. Here is the question:

"You took a man in the dark by the throat, that man that was guilty of such a thing, as when that you did let him go to call his companions to bring the money, bring fellows to your single; I would be glad to know whether in this case they would not have knocked you on the head and killed you."

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Addition and alteration to Public Building, Lindsay, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 P.M., on Wednesday, November 5, 1913, for the work mentioned.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained at the office of Mr. Thos. A. Hastings, Clerk of Works, Postal Station F, Yonge St., Toronto, at the Post Office, Lindsay, Ont., and at this Department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

TTAWA HAS NEW SIGNALS BECAUSE OF LAWSON

TTAWA, October 16.—The Otta- Big Four team has been handed complete new set of signals, and ile the plays in which they have n drilled the past few weeks will tinue to be used, they will be led under different signals. The nge was promoted by the fact at Dr. Smirle Lawson, the former gonaut half-back, has refereed the t two contests in which Ottawa participated, and the local management is taking no chances on the team's most effective plays being tipped off to the Oarsmen.

Jim Kennedy, the ex-Ottawa College scrimmager, has turned out for practice, and may be in next Saturday's game at Toronto. Father Stanton is not the least bit confident of winning from Argos, but says he will have a team on the field that will be fighting for sixty minutes of the way.

THE OLD AND THE NEW.

What Has Become of the Victorian Hero of Fiction?

The old-fashioned hero, greatly beloved by our grandmothers, has vanished with the past. His simple history lies neglected on our bookshelves. He is out-of-date, is commonly voted a prig. He has been replaced by a hero considered more suitable for our busy, modern life. The modern hero now stands in the limelight and the old-fashioned hero, owing to increased competition, has been forced to retire from the publishers' catalogue.

Perhaps it would be a pity to prevent the early Victorian hero taking a well-earned rest after a long life accurately described from the cradle to the grave in three volumes. He was a simple and honorable gentleman, and very dependable in an emergency. He suffered trials and tribulations, and surmounted all his difficulties with a high courage; he was thoroughly sincere and attractive. The reader visited his house and saw him seated at tea surrounded by his affectionate family until, of course, he was arrested for forgery or something like that.

He brought the wholesome air of the countryside into the book; the old grey church, the village smithy, became familiar objects. The gentle girl with the soft brown ringlets trusted him through all, whether he was suspected of running a contraband cargo or poaching. He was foremost in good deeds, and the only enmity he ever incurred was when rescuing the oppressed, or in showing some unwilling black sheep the right path.

The modern hero cannot lay claim to these attributes. He has a shallow soul; he is egotistical and narrow. He is a pigmy beside the broad-shouldered Victorian giant, who scattered the evildoers in his path, and struck for right and might.

The old-fashioned hero rushed to the rescue of the heroine when she was attacked by robbers. It would be quite possible to recognize the features of the modern hero in the footpad who attacked the lady. Afterwards he would write a little essay, "How I went from Bad to Worse—my first Robbery." Carefully edited by a wideawake journalist with his finger on the public pulse.

Sometimes the modern hero has a desperate secret in his life, which lends an additional fascination to his lean, square-jawed face. He has done something on the frontier—India, for instance. No one is quite clear on the point, but it is possible that he is guilty. It was not possible for the old-fashioned hero to be guilty of anything but kindness towards his fellow creatures, but goodness knows what the gentleman with the square jaw has done!

Usually the modern hero's opulence is disgusting. He gives champagne suppers, he has powerful touring cars that cover the honest pedestrian with dust.

He has an unfounded reputation for wit. He punctuates his little dinners with scintillating remarks that crackle and explode among his guests like Japanese fireworks. The earnest reader endeavors to understand his epigrams, but they are apparently only understood by his set. Perhaps it is as well.

Occasionally the hero serves as a shadowy background for the heroine and her views. It is possible to catch a glimpse of him "watching her exquisite profile against the moonlight," or "gazing at the golden glory of her hair." She uses him as a peg on which she hangs her reflections: in return he writes her cryptic little notes. He is very ghostlike among the shadows, and when she suddenly decides to marry him in the last chapter you feel she might just well have joined a society on psychical research.

LOVERS IN HIGH PLACES.

Marlborough, the Great Soldier, and His Duchess, Friend of Queen Anne.

Every one is more or less familiar with the story of the Duchess of Marlborough, who was Sarah Jennings, and the Duke of Marlborough, who was John Churchill, and the famous hero of Blenheim. Their devotion to one another was unclouded throughout their long and eventful lives.

Sarah Jennings was the daughter of a well-to-do country gentleman and was born on May 29, 1660. She was a woman of remarkable beauty, as the famous pictures of her will attest. At the age of 12 she was introduced at court, and was attached to the household of the Duchess of York as maid of honor. The duchess bestowed upon her for her playmate and the companion of her daughter, the Princess Anne, thus laying the foundation for a friendship which afterward raised her to historical importance.

Among the Duke of York's gentlemen of the bedchamber was Col. John Churchill. Young Churchill, by extraordinary gallantry and address had risen rapidly in the military profession; and his handsome person and fascinating manners, made him at court "the object of all observers."

Churchill was ten years older than Sarah Jennings when he became enamored. She was in her 16th year, and her heart that had proved so cold to others, succumbed at once to this irresistible cavalier.

The lover was strong in the husband through life, and the placid Marlborough, who rode on the whirlwind of battle and controlled the storm of war, cherished the household affections as tenderly as any private English gentleman. Increasing honors did not lessen their mutual devotion.

On quitting England to undertake the great campaigns of 1702 and following years, in which he extended the glory of the British arms on the continent and baffled the ablest commanders of France, he wrote to his countess in the fond language of a devoted lover:

"It is impossible to express with what a heavy heart I parted with you when I was by the water's side. I could have given my life to come back, though I knew my own weakness so much that I durst not, for I knew I should have exposed myself to the company. I did for a great while, with a perspective glass, look up on the cliffs, in hopes I might have had one sight of you. If you will be sensible of what I now feel, you will endeavor ever to be easy to me and then I shall be most happy; for it is you only that can give me true content. I pray God to make you and yours happy; and if I could contribute anything to it with the utmost hazard of my life, I should be glad to do it."

So, after the battle of Blenheim, he wrote as follows:

"August 14.—Before the battle was done yesterday, I write to by dearest soul to let her know that I was well and that God had blessed her majesty's arms with as great a victory as has ever been known. I am so pleased with this action that I can't send my letter without being so vain as to tell my dearest soul that within the memory of man there has been no victory so great as this; and as I am sure you love me entirely well you will be infinitely pleased with 'what has been done'."

The Last Word In Fashion.

At the recent international congress of applied chemistry in London one of the most celebrated lecturers, Giacomo Ciamician, predicted that women of the future will not be content with a dress which remains constantly of one color, but will demand colors that change in harmony with their surroundings. Thus the color of the apparel may be changed without changing the dress. Passing from darkness to light the color would brighten, thus conforming automatically to the environment — the last word in fashion for the future. This prediction will come true as soon as chemists learn to understand better what are called "phototropic colors," or colors that change with the intensity of the light upon them. In men's wear this might mean that the light colored suit of the bright summer day would be transformed into a dark suit at night.

Couldn't Afford It.

Hickory Wood, the pantomime writer, used to tell an amusing story of a theatrical manager who once shared his box at a provincial pantomime. When the principal comedian entered and did his best, the manager, with a scowl on his brow, leant over to Mr. Wood, and remarked, "I want to engage that man for next Christmas in my production."

"Do you think he is funny?" Mr Wood asked.

"Screamingly funny," returned the manager.

"Then why don't you laugh?" asked Mr. Wood.

"Laugh, when he's got his eyes on me?" replied the manager. "And every smile means that he'll ask another fiver a week."

Right and Left Handed Plants.

That there are right handed plants and left handed plants has been reported to the Cambridge (England) Philosophical Society by R. H. Compton. In an examination of eight varieties of two-rowed barley the first leaf was found to twist to the left in 58 per cent. of more th 12,000 seedlings, and an excess of left handed growth was found also in millet and in oats. In corn there seemed to be no marked tendency either way. No evidence of hereditary peculiarity appears to have been obtained.

A Young Wool Winder From the Philippines.

© by American Press Association.

The demure little miss pictured above is an Igorrote from Luzon, one of the Philippine Islands. Formerly the Igorrotes were one of the wildest tribes of our faraway island possessions, but since Uncle Sam established schools they are rapidly learning the arts of civilization. This little Igorrote girl makes a very interesting picture in her odd dress and bare feet. She is evidently in holiday attire, as her headdress of beads indicates. In the old days so small a girl would have worn little clothing, but with increasing knowledge it is no longer considered proper to go about in abbreviated garb. As the picture shows, the little worker is busily engaged in winding wool on a homemade reel.

A True Circus Story.

In 1892 Forepaugh's circus was traveling through Alabama and stopped at Tecumseh over Sunday to feed the animals and rest. Several hundred persons were about the station as the train approached. Just then one of the lions, Hector by name, a ferocious creature, managed to tear off the door of his cage. He thrust his head out right in the faces of a group of negroes standing on the platform.

They could not have been worse scared if the evil one had dropped among them. With open mouth Hector leaped into the crowd. Such a scattering and yelling were never seen and heard in Alabama.

Hector landed on his feet, but rolled over and over. When he got up there was hardly a man, woman or child within fifty yards. One woman, who had fainted, lay near the lion.

With one bound he was upon her, his teeth showing and his tongue rolling out. The lookers on were horrified. The tamer was a long way off, and there was no one near with pistol or rifle.

To the astonishment of every one the beast, instead of mangling the woman, simply sniffed at the body, turned it over with his paws and, after eyeing it suspiciously, walked away. He thought the woman was dead.

An Infant Scholar.

Perhaps the greatest infant prodigy on record was Christian Heinecker, born at Lubeck in 1721. At ten months he could speak and repeat every word spoken to him; at twelve months he knew by heart a great portion of the Bible; at three years he spoke and read French and Latin as easily as his native tongue. In his fourth year he employed himself in the study of religion and church history, and his fame as a scholar spread so that the king of Denmark sent for him and was astonished at his learning. Just before he was five, however, Heinecker fell sick and died.

There dwells a princess fair.
The sunbeams from the sky were sent
To nestle in her hair.

Her smile is gay as a Maytime day
And sweeter than the rose,
And many a smile upon the way
She scatters as she goes.

Her eyes, like evening stars, are bright
(And brighter, I opine),
And with the same soft, kindly light
Of evening stars they shine.

O princess fair, O princess fair,
How does her garden grow?
Why, many happy thoughts are there,
All planted in a row!

Now, who can read this rime with care
And guess just what is meant?
Are you perhaps the princess fair
In the palace of content?

TALE OF A TIGHTWAD.

Every Man Should Take to Heart the Moral It Points.

We once knew a man who was too stingy to take the newspaper in his home town and always went over to borrow his neighbor's paper.

One evening he sent his son over to borrow the paper, and while the son was on the way he ran into a large stand of bees, and in a few minutes his face looked like a summer squash.

Hearing the agonized cries of the son, the father ran to his assistance and in doing so ran into a barbed wire fence, cutting a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining a $4 pair of trousers.

The old cow took advantage of the hole in the fence, got into the cornfield and killed herself eating green corn. Hearing the racket, the stingy man's wife ran out of the house, upsetting a four gallon churn full of cream into a basket of kittens, drowning the whole flock. She slipped on the cream and fell downstairs, breaking her leg and a $19 set of false teeth. The baby, left alone, crawled through the spilled cream into the parlor and ruined a $40 parlor carpet. During the excitement the daughter eloped with the hired man, taking the family savings bank with them.

The moral is that every man should be a subscriber to his home newspaper. —Brooklyn Eagle.

"Lady of the Lake."

One of the busiest persons in London just now is the "Lady of the Lake" or the "Lady of the Wringer," to call her by her real title, who is to be found at Brockwell Park. Appointed by the London County Council it is her mission to send home, decently and dryly clad again, the hapless youngsters who daily topple head first into the water in the park and require attention from the wringer if bad chills are to be prevented. During certain hours bathers are permitted to use the lake, which varies in depth from two to seven feet, but it is generally after the swimmers have gone, and when the surface is studded with toy boats, that the Lady of the Wringer is most busy. Dozens of children have already reason to be grateful to her, and so have dozens of parents, whilst, for providing a wringer that is merciful to buttons—a machine equipped with rubber rollers—the L.C.C. have earned the especial gratitude of the mothers. From 9 a.m. until 8 p.m. a roaring fire is kept going at the Lady of the Wringer's headquarters, which are to be found in a secluded building in "the old garden." As each little adventurer arrives, dripping wet, he is undressed, and wrapped in a blanket until the process of wringing and drying his clothes is complete.

Soft.

"Should a man shave up or down?" asked a youthful clerk, and the barber replied with a grin:

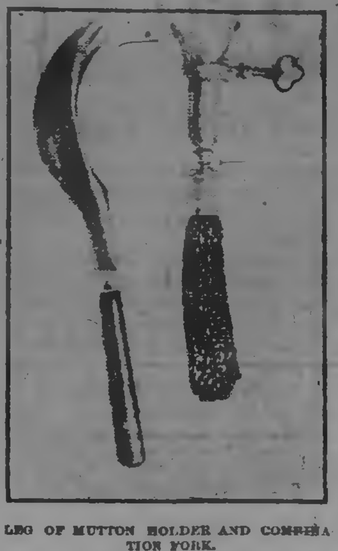
"That depends. When I shave you, for instance, I always shave down."

Encouragement.

Jack—I am afraid that if I ask you to be my wife you will treat my proposal as a joke. Molly—But all jokes are not rejected, Jack.

FOR THE TABLE.

Innovations That Are to Be Found In Shops.



LEG OF MUTTON HOLDER AND COMBINATION FORK.

The leg of mutton holder is quite an innovation that will be appreciated by the housewife. A horn handle to which is attached a steel clamp which is regulated by a small key is all there is to it. The clamp holds firm the bone of the leg and with perfect ease the meat can be carved.

The other queer looking object is a combination fork and knife for a one-handed person.

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

SOCIETY
WEDDING—PERSONALS

DAVIDSON — HALL

This afternoon St. Paul's Presbyterian church was the scene of a quiet wedding when Isabella Charlotte (Chattie) eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hall, of 88 London street, became the bride of Mr. Archibald Davidson of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Pogue. The bride was given away by her brother Mr. J. B. Hall, of Toronto, and was unattended. Mr. Allan, organist of the church, played the wedding marches.

The bride wore a brown travelling suit and brown velvet hat with ostrich plume, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lily of the valley.

The happy couple left on the Montreal express for points west. Upon their return they will reside at 222 Rubidge street, where they will be at home to their friends after the New Year.

Mr. J. T. Gleeson of the firm of Gleeson and Foley, is in the city on business.

Miss Gibson of Port Hope is the guest of friends in the city.

Misses Rose and Austin and Mr. E. Rose of Toronto have returned home after spending a vacation at Stoney Lake.

Rev. Dr. Sullivan of Montreal is a guest at the Oriental.

Mr. W. H. Lyons of Kingston is a guest at the National Hotel.

Mrs Oscar Bracken, Havelock, and baby Gladys, are visiting Mrs. S. A. Hamon, 573 Rogers street.

FORTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF PIONEER FLORIST

Mr. Frank Mason, the pioneer florist of Peterborough, yesterday celebrated the fortieth anniversary of his start in business in this city.

Mr. Mason's business has gradually developed, and now he has enlarged and improved his greenhouse and added the latest features. He has installed an artic refrigerator for the purpose of keeping certain flowers.

Mr. Mason was the first publisher of the Canadian Florist, and he has seen Peterborough grow from a town of 4,000 people to its present flourishing condition as a city with a population of over 20,000. The formal opening will be held on Saturday.

THE CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY AND THE NEGLECTED CHILDREN

Tag Day Saturday October 18

The Children's Aid Society aims to prevent neglect and abuse, homelessness and destitution in the child world.

There is no philanthropic work in this world which good people can take hold of with greater prospect of success than that which concerns children. This is a truth which is generally admitted, and yet it cannot be too often emphasized for there is still much to be done that is now but feebly attempted. The criminals in our jails, the useless and burdensome paupers in the almhouses, the feeble-minded and the self-destroyed inmates of our asylums all point with more or less force to a neglected youth and to golden opportunities allowed to pass unimproved; while the stern fact that these classes cost the people of Ontario nearly one-third of the public revenue gives an additional reason for a wise and vigilant system of child-protection.

Few people realize that nearly all confirmed criminals and paupers are made such in early youth, and yet there is hardly any other condition so clearly confirmed by facts than this. Bad environment and bad example and training will almost inevitably produce a bad citizen with all the consequence of crime, terrorism and public expense.

Nearly all juvenile offenders are the victims of conditions and circumstances over which they had no control, and are the logical outcome of the early dangers and temptations to which they were subjected. It was to help such children to a better life and to protect society from the increase of crime and pauperism that the Children's Protection Act of Ontario was enacted.

This Act aims at a utilization of that vast force of human love and sympathy that goes out to the homeless or unprotected child, rather that to the creation of a state system which would in time become more or less official.

FATHER OF MRS. (DR.) COUGHLIN

Passed Away in Belleville— Interment Here

Mr. Wm. Picket, father of Mrs. (Dr.) Coughlin, formerly of this city, and now of Belleville, passed away at Belleville yesterday.

The body will be brought to Peterborough to-morrow morning, and will be conveyed to St. Peter's Cathedral. Interment at St. Peter's cemetery.

NO WORK ON DENNISTOUN AVE

Improvements Must Stand Over Till Next Year

All the aldermen at the Board of Works meeting last night wanted work done. Ald Johnston asked that attention be given to the request of Dennistoun Ave. residents that the street be improved. He held that the residents had every right to have the street attended to.

But it appears there is a lack of funds and when the matter was put to a vote, the decision was that the work be not done this year.

If egg shells are to be used for clearing coffee the eggs should be well washed before they are broken and the shells should be kept in a covered receptacle until needed.

To Prince Arthur and His Bride—Canadians Remember Royal Pair

LONDON, Oct. 16.– Prince Arthur of Connaught, son of the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, and Princess Alexandra Victoria Duchess of Fife, eldest daughter of the widowed Princess Royal, Louise were yesterday made man and wife in the ancient chapel of St. James' Palace, where both had been baptized There was room for less than 300 in the simply, though daintily decorated chapel, but not since the coronation of King George had there been such a gathering of notable personages.

Besides King George, Queen Mary, Queen Mother Alexandra, the King and Queen of Norway, and other royal relatives of the couple to the number of a score or more, the congregation consisted of members of the diplomatic corps, of the British Cabinet, and of the royal household and of a few distinguished persons. Lord and Lady Strathcona and Lord and Lady Mountstephen were among the very few to whom invitations had been issued.

The bride, who entered the chapel between King George and her mother looked charming in a dainty dress of white charmeuse, embroidered with pearls and diamonds and adorned with exquisite Brussels applique lace, of which the bridal veil also was made.

Much admiration was expressed at the appearance of the five bridesmaids who were Princess Mary, daughter of the King and Queen; Princess Maud, only sister of the bride; Princess Victoria and Princess Helena of Teck; daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Teck, and Princess Mary, the little daughter of Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck. Their frocks were made of delicate shell pink charmeuse and cream lace and they carried beautiful bouquets of carnations and lilies, the same flowers as decorated the chapel royal.

The pages were little Prince John the King's youngest son, and Prince Olaf of Norway, whom everybody in the British Isles adores.

Prince Arthur wore his uniform as a captain of the Royal Scots Greys, with its bright scarlet tunic and high bearskin busby, and all the men among his royal relatives also wore military uniforms covered with decorations. The King was dressed as a field marshal. The Queen and other ladies were in beautiful costumes dazzling with jewels.

The ceremony was extremely simple and was performed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of London, as dean of the chapels royal, and canon Edgar Sheppard, sub-dean of the chapels royal, before an altar embellished with gold candelabra Prince Arthur and his bride uttered the responses in firm clear voices.

The presents include jewels in abundance, gold and silver plate and antique and modern furniture. One estimate places the value at $750,000.

Among those of interest to Canadians are the following: From Premier Borden and Ministers of the Cabinet of Canada, hand-engraved silver dinner service, of Canadian workmanship; from the Canada Club, a grand piano; from Earl Grey, a statuette; from Viscount Haldane, a despatch box; from the Connaught household in Canada, loving cups; from Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, a silver tray; from Lord Aberdeen, wine stands; from Lord Minto, a fire screen; from Lord Mountstephen, a silver plate; from Sir Charles Ross, a rifle; from Lord Strathcona, a diamond brooch and an automobile.

Prince Arthur is a fortunate sufferer from a duplication of presents, receiving twenty cigarette boxes, seventeen clocks, fourteen ink stands, twelve walking sticks, eleven pairs of sleeve links, and nine paper knives.

Prince Arthur Frederick Patrick Albert of Connaught was 30 years of age in January. He is a Knight of the Garter, a G.C.V.O., a P.C., a D.L., and a personal aide to the king. As captain in the 2nd Dragoons, he served in the South African war, and later represented the King as a special envoy to Japan.

WILL STUDY AT ROME

Basil T. Kingsley of Lindsay, left yesterday morning on a long journey his destination being Rome, where he will take a four years course in theology and the language. It is understood that Mr. Michael O'Brien of this city, will leave Peterboro and undertake a similar course at Rome.

THE SHEPHERED OF THE HILLS

"The Shepherd of the Hills," Harold Bell Wright's novel, which holds the record for being the largest selling American work of fiction, has been made into a play by its author with the assistance of Elsbery W. Reynolds. It will be given its first production in this city at the Grand Opera House, commencing Saturday October 18th, matinee and night.

The play is a story of the Ozark mountains and its people are all of that vicinity, which promises stage characters out of the ordinary. The production, which has been made by Messrs. Gaskill and MacVitty, is said to be one of extreme beauty, this picturesque mountain country lending itself to the best in the scenic artist's art.

MAY A. BELL MARKS

The plays that May A. Bell Marks will present will be a variety of comedies and dramas so as to please the majority of theatre goers as well as presenting Costume Plays. The plays are all given complete productions and mounted in the most superb way. Mr. Marks has even a new idea in advertising which will show that his attractions are different from all others.

Mr. Marks has also kept in mind the love of the spice of variety that the public desire and has a company of singers, dancers and fun-makers so as to enable him to give to his patrons a variety that is unexcelled in the way of musical introduction which occur during the action of his plays. Upon this one point Mr. Marks prides himself as being the only one capable of organizing such a company.

It is believed that when such an organization visits the city that it will be given good attendance at every performance, especially when the prices are at such a low figure as 10, 20 and 30 cents. Grand Opera House for nine performances six nights and three matinees (Monday, Wednesday and Saturday.) opening Monday, Oct. 20th, Thanksgiving Day. Special matinee. Prices 10, 20 and 30 cents. Seats reserved for Monday matinee on sale at box office, Friday at 9 a.m.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To The Editor of The Review,

Dear Sir— In reply to the letter appearing in last night's Examiner headed "Objectionable Advertising" and referring to a small optical notice by the Tait Optical Company, I would say "I am inclined to think that "A Constant Reader," (and we all know who he is) is the same person who wrote to the wholesale optical houses and asked their assistance to put the Tait Optical Company out of business in Peterboro. This is all we wish to say on the subject, as we are too busy examining eyes and making glasses to enter into a newspaper controversy. But I am not a writer of anonymous letters.

Signed,

B. J. TAIT.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—When I read in Monday evening's Examiner Rev. R. Pogue's pulpit reference to a petition that is being circulated throughout the city in support of a license transfer that is waiting the decision of the License Commission, the thought came to me what a pity the pulpit does not raise its voice in protest against the rowdyism that is going on nightly on Brock street. I venture to say it would not be tolerated for one night in front of any place of business where liquor is sold. We should bear in mind the fact that the intemperance of the pagans was not confined to the indulgence of eating and drinking alone, and judging from the conduct of our young people of both sexes on the street, we are forced to the belief that there is more intemperance in the race after pleasure than there ever was after liquor.

Hoping you will pardon me for trespassing on your valuable space, I remain respectfully yours,

CITIZEN.

To The Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir,— On Saturday next, our citizens are to be afforded another opportunity of showing in a practical way their sympathy with one or our most worthy charities, namely the Children's Aid Society.

Let us all then, without stint and ungrudgingly respond to the call of the "taggies" who have been allotted districts and marshalled into line by the energetic committee of faithful ladies, who are giving their valuable services for the advancement of this noble society.

Yours truly,

W. H. BRADBURN,
Mayor.

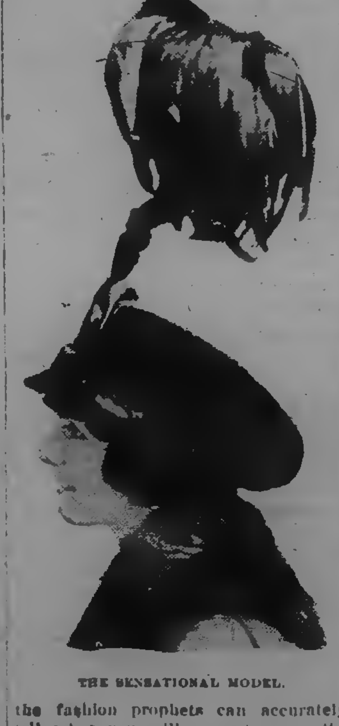
Early Autumn Hats.

Signs of the season's changes have heir accurate sources in two quarters -the weather man and the fashion prophets. As to which is the more reliable authority is an open query, left that way for diplomacy's sake. Certain it is that the weather man can advise you on the wisdom of rubber shoes or a sunshade for tomorrow; the fashion prophets can accurately tell what you will wear two months from now.



THE SENSATIONAL MODEL.

In your hats it will be mainly velvet, the richness of that material to be used in abundant contrast with chantilly lace and malines.

The sensational hat, however, of the season so far is to be seen in the illustration—the visor cap, with a black velvet puffed crown and visor front covered with heavy ribbed silk. The "prodigious" coque feather placed directly in front of the creation is startling enough to make this model felt wherever it is worn

ZEPPELIN AIRSHIP EXPLODES AND THIRTY SIX ARE DEAD

Big Airship Was Travelling Nine Hundred Feet From Earth, When Disaster Assailed Her

Canadian Press Despatch.

BERLIN, Oct. 17.—The new Naval Zeppelin airship "L Two," exploded in the air near Johannisthal to-day and was completely wrecked. All the crew were killed.

There were about thirty persons aboard, including Commander Benisch, and other members of the Admiralty Trial Board, who were observing the ship's action before accepting her for the government.

The airship exploded at 10.15 this morning, when about nine hundred feet in the air and fell onto a main highway, its blackened and twisted aluminum frame work blocking the road.

She had only just left the shed and had traversed barely a quarter of a mile towards Berlin. The exact cause of the accident is unknown. Spectaters saw a mighty pillar of flame shoot from the centre of the balloon and the next instant the craft was a mass of flames, plunging to earth, burying those aboard beneath the wreckage.

The "L Two" was the latest and largest of the new Zeppelins measuring five hundred feet in length. There were 27 men aboard, and of these 26 are dead and Liuet. Baron Von Bleul was injured very seriously. Many of the bodies were burned beyond recognition. It was on September 9th that the "L One" was wrecked in a hurricane on the North Sea with a loss of fifteen lives, and this second catastrophe has caused consternation.

LATER.—The first explosion evidently occurred in one of the motors of the centre gondola. The six inmates of that gondola were driven through the sides and fell to the ground, while so rapid was the destruction of the dirigable that she alighted a shapeless, fiery mass only four hundred yards further on. As she descended, fire having reached gasoline tanks filled with about a ton of explosive fluid, a second and more violent explosion occurred which killed all of those remaining. Two were alive when removed from the wreckage but one died instantly, and Baron Von Bleul with his eyes burned out and otherwise desperately injured, was taken to an hospital moaning "kill me." It is said Zeppelin engineers had planned this ship so that she might cross the Atlantic.

LAST OFFICER OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, Oct. 17. — Sir George Orby Wombell, the last of the officers who took part in the Charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava, died to-day, aged 81.

He was lieutenant in the Seventeenth Lancers, and had two horses killed under him in the charge.

THE DEATH OF GEO. W. NEELY

Member of East Middlesex Died This Morning

Canadian Press Despatch.

NORTH DORCHESTER, Oct. 17. — George W. Neely, member of the Legislature for East Middlesex, died this morning from artereo sclerosis and heart trouble. He had been seriously ill for some time and since Wendesday had been paralyzed. This makes the third legislator from this riding who has died within a year, other two being Sutherland and Eason.

CANNOT BE READY

LONDON, Oct. 17.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—If some Liberal newspapers are well informed the Government is considering the navy estimates for the coming year. Unless there is a sudden and unexpected change in Canadian political conditions, says The Mail, the three Canadian Dreadnoughts cannot now be ready by the date when Winston Churchill has declared they will be absolutely necessary for the world-wide defence of the British Empire. At the same time, the enormous additional programs of Germany's Mediterranean allies have passed beyond the region of project to the land of fact.

"The British Government is now, without openly admitting the fact, trusting to the French navy for the defence of Mediterranean interests, continues The Mail, "but the point has been reached where the whole strength of the French navy will be unequal to the task. Assistance must be forthcoming from the British navy. Ships to give that assistance cannot be spared from the North Sea unless the British program is markedly increased."

MAN-TAILORED LADIES' GARMENTS

Mr. M. J. Hickey, Merchant Tailor, Adds New Branch in the Interests of Ladies

It will be news of special interest to the ladies of Peterborough to learn the coats, suits and skirts made by men to whom the making of ladies' outer garments has become second nature, can now be produced in faultless style by Mr. M. J. Hickey, of 43a George Street. Mr. Hickey has built up a large tailoring business for men and has now been induced to add this new branch for the benefit of ladies.

To describe the unspeakable comfort and distinctive smart effect which can be given to ladies' outer garments when man-tailored, can only be done by experts. Coats and suits conformed to the present dress vogue, and designed and fitted by an expert cutter from New York, in touch with the proper styles in costumes can now be duplicated for Peterborough ladies. Wonderfully smart coats will be a feature. A leading characteristic of any suit is the splendid qualities and excellence of tailoring. In fact, nothing of time, trouble and skill will be spared to make this branch acceptable to the ladies. In fabrics, the most up-to-date patterns and materials in beautiful designs and shades are shown and Mr. Hickey extends a cordial invitation to ladies to come and see.

MILNER NOMINATED

Reeve of Brampton Is Liberal Candidate in Peel.

BRAMPTON, Oct. 17.—Great enthusiasm marked the Liberal convention yesterday afternoon to nominate a candidate for the coming provincial bye-election in Peel county. The convention met in the Town Hall, and fully two hundreds persons were present, including about one hundred and thirty-five delegates.

The polling takes place on Nov. 3.

Eight candidates were nominated, seven of whom retired in favor of Mr. A. H. Milner, reeve of Brampton, who was accordingly chosen by acclamation. The seven retiring nominees were Messrs. A. Rutherford, Bolton; John Newhouse, Shelgrove; W. J. Lowe, Snelgrove; Robt. Smith, Bolton; H. W. Dawson, Brampton; E. A. Orr, Clarkson, and Wm. Algie, Alton.

THE PRINCESS THEATRE PURCHASED BY MOVING PICTURE MAGNATE

Mr. H. Clayton Will Now Control Royal, Red Mill and Princess Theatres

Local theatre-goers will no doubt see a big improvement to the Princess Theatre now under the capable management of Mr. H Clayton, who now retains full control and management of the three local picture and vaudeville houses in this city. High class vaudeville will now be introduced at the Princess Theatre combined with the very best pictures and latest illustrated songs that can be obtained. A new Bell Piano has just been purchased from J. P. Cunningham of the Peterborough Music Co., and other alterations and improvements are now under way. When completed the local patrons wihll no doubt appreciate the painstaking efforts of Manager Clayton, whose motto has always been to serve the public with nothing but the very best moral and refined pictures that can be obtained.

A CANCER CURE

Chicago Physician Has Had Success With Remedy

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Officers of the Chicago Medical Society yesterday commented guardedly, upon the possibility that the cancer treatment discovered by Dr. Max Reichmann of Chicago, may prove a cure, following a demonstration given by Dr. Reichmann at a special meeting of the society.

The Reichmann treatment consists of injecting eight grams of quinine and 800 grams of distilled water into the tissues, followed by the application of the X-ray machine for a few moments. Within an hour and a half after the removal of the X-ray, according to Dr. Reichmann, the solution will have reached a cavity. He brought to the meeting a woman who had suffered from cancer for fifteen years, and who declared that after twelve of these treatments the cancer appeared to be permanently exterminated.

Nervy Young Sailor.

BOSTON, Oct. 17.—At the age of thirteen years little Harold Delaney of Allston has qualified as one of the youngest mariners on the New England coast. During a terrific gale on Tuesday, he stood lashed to the wheel of the two-masted schooner Robert Pettis, and steered her safely through the storm. "He's the nerviest little fellow in the world," declared Captain Nutter when the vessel arrived here from Tusket, N.S.

Toronto Man Dead.

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 17.—John A Hogle, aged 58, residing at 527 1-2 Dufferin street, Toronto, was found dead in his room at the Central Hotel at six o'clock yesterday morning when called to take his train, the Toronto G.T.R. local, of which he had been employed as baggageman for several years.

MADE SHORT CIRCUIT

Concrete Mixer's Mishap Tied Up Street Car Traffic.

TORONTO, Oct. 17.—It all happened in a moment, but it took civic and street car company forces over four hours to straighten out the damage done when a concrete mixed short circuited the current from a trolley wire to the track yesterday. Tracks were torn up, the huge concrete mixer was crippeld, overhead wires were wrenched down, and the wooden casing through an overhead bridge were ripped to pieces. Fortunately there was no loss of life.

It took place with the suddenness of a dynamite explosion. The great concrete mixer, which weighs some seven tons and stands about fifteen feet high was being moved near the corner of Gerrard street and Carlaw avenue at 4.30 yesterday afternoon. It was being driven by Mr. Robert Pullman of 79 Leslie street, a driver for the Burns Ice Co. He escaped instant death from the fact that instead of sitting on the machine driving he was walking beside it.

He was driving eastward at the crossing of the G.T.R., the wheels on the car tracks. As the mixer started under the bridge its top unexpectedly touched the overhead street car wires. Instantly a short circuit of some 5,000 volts was created—and all kinds of things happened. The street car tracks were ripped up for eight or ten feet, while a big wheel of the mixer, melting almost instantly under the terrible heat of the current, was welded to the rails. One-quarter of one of the wheels was burned off entirely. Overhead wires were ripped and torn in all directions, the damage extending for two hundred yards between Logan and Pape avenues, while under the bridge the wooden casings were completely demolished.

POLITICS IN PRISON

Pre-election Promise Displayed to Kingston Officials

Messages From Harty and Aylesworth Promising Higher Pay

KINGSTON, Oct. 17.—Politics figured in yesterday afternoon's session of the prison reform commission, when evidence was presented to show that on the eve of the general election of September, 1911, a telegram was received by Hon. William Harty, ex-M.P., from Sir Alan Aylesworth, in which the latter stated he had recommended an increase of salary for penitentiary officials. This telegram, together with a letter from Sir Alan, following up the same matter, was shown to officials at the penitentiary.

H. A. Stewart, K.C., of Brockville, who is attending the investigation in the interests of the Justice Department, submitted the letter and telegram to the commissioners as evidence of partisanship.

"There is too much politics in the penitentiary," remarked Chairman G. M. Macdonnell. "One party is as bad as the other."

John Smith, a former night watchman in the penitentiary, who was suspended over the Chartrand escape on March 29, 1913, was called at the morning session and told of the circumstances surrounding that event. The witness had reported a number of discrepancies two weeks before the escape. A piece of electric wire, some oil, etc., were found to be missing. Chartrand and Slaughter, another convict, both had violins they had made for themselves, which they were allowed to use. The result was that when the violins were being played one could not hear the bars being cut. He did not know when the deputy had made any investigation of the condition of the bars, but the regulations call for a thorough inspection twice a month. The witness had been suspended for six weeks.

Smith further told of going to the deputy warden's house on January 4, 1912, to get permission to take his child to the hospital to undergo an operation. He was very curtly received and sent back to duty. When he got off it was too late and he lost his pay for the night.

A parole prisoner from Toronto testified on behalf of O'Leary. He had been well-used in the institution and felt kindly disposed towards the deputy warden. He wrote a letter to the deputy after Russell's story had been published in Toronto and volunteered to come before the commission to disprove his statements. The witness, who is a Protestant, denied that there was any discrimination against Protestants convicts. Of course, he could not speak so positively about the officers. He did hear comment on the fact that the Roman Catholics were always "in the wing," a preferred position. Speaking about the food, he admitted that sometimes they got a poor shipment of pork, but it was usually pretty fair, and he knew because he worked in the kitchen.

The sessions of the commission were adjourned until next Wednesday. Deputy Warden O'Leary and Dr. Phalen have not yet been called.

Another batch of witnesses will be summoned for next week's hearing. Mr. Stewart intimated that further charges might be lodged against the officials of the penitentiary before the next sitting.

RAISE FOR POSTMASTERS

Minimum Will be Increased From $35 to $50

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.—The Postmaster-General, Hon. L. P. Pelletier, with the approval of the Government, has decided to increase the minimum salaries of rural postmasters from $35 to $50 per year. The necessary legislative action to give effect to the decision will be taken at the coming session of Parliament.

The last increase to rural postmasters was granted in 1909, when the salary was increased from $25 to $35. Since then there has been a constant agitation for a further increase to $50, as was advocated by Mr. Borden when in Opposition. The increase will affect several thousand rural postmasters in all parts of Canada. The postoffice surplus for the present year will be much more than sufficient to meet the additional charges on revenue.

Charge of Counterfeiting.

MONTREAL, Oct. 17.—The four Germans, Paul H. Henderson, alias Sacke; Fitz Munding, August Kamacker and Goldwick Sania under arrest here as alleged counterfeiters and who, the police believe, were organizing a scheme to flood the United States and Canada with bogus American five-dollar bills, appeared in the arraignment court yesterday. After they had pleaded not guilty they were remanded until Oct. 23.

U. S. Government Awaits His Next Move in Mexico.

Relations Between the Two Countries Are Virtually at an End and Only the Elimination of the Provisional President Will Satisfy Washington—Britain Watches and Says Nothing.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17. — The Mexican situation last night, from the viewpoint of the administration here, is relations between the United States and the de facto government of Mexico virtually have been broken off. Before taking another step in the crisis it is admitted by the administration officials exists, there must be some move by Gen. Victoriano Huerta.

Only the complete elimination of Huerta will rest the friendly relations with the Mexican capital. "Mexican capital" is used because President Wilson no longer has friendly feeling for the de facto government. He has the deepest friendly feelings for the Mexican people.

There is not a single official in the national capital who believes that Huerta will liberate the deputies from imprisonment and restore them to their places, as members of Congress. Some contend that Huerta cannot do this, that his act of declaring himself dictator constitutionally removes the deputies from office. There are others, however, who believe that the act of Huerta in declaring himself dictator was unconstitutional, and that he could straighten matters by liberating the deputies and by a decree restore them to office.

A recognition of the revolutionists as a de facto power will come only after Huerta shows clearly that he does not intend eliminating himself. Under no circumstances will there be a recognition of the revolutionists as belligerents, because to do this the President of the United States would, under international law, jeopardize the claims of Americans against the Mexican Government, which amount to several million dollars.

Ex-Minister Has Fled.

VERA CRUZ, Mexico, Oct. 17.—Manuel Bonilla, who was Minister of Communications in the late President Madero's Cabinet, sailed from here yesterday on board the Hamburg-American liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie in disguise.

Fearing arrest he has fled from Mexico. He arrived here yesterday morning and went on board the liner which was due to sail at one o'clock for Cuba, Spain, England and Germany.

Arrangements were made yesterday for 200 refugees from Torreon to be taken on board the Texas City at Tampico. The American consul, William W. Canada, and Rear-Admiral F. F. Fletcher supervised the arrangements. The Texas City left here yesterday.

Britain Is Watching.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The British Government has adopted a waiting attitude in regard to the Mexican situation. It considers the matter thus far as an entirely internal affair of Mexico and does not contemplate any action, although it is watching events closely.

The British Foreign Office has not received any information from the legation in Mexico City in respect to the reported conference of the members of the diplomatic corps there, and the fact that Germany is reported to have sent a warship to a Mexican port has not influenced British policy.

Steamship Fire Put Out.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The Royal Dutch West India mail steamer Jan Van Nassau, Captain Van der Eat which arrived yesterday from the West Indies, reported that on the outward passage from Amsterdam, Oct 4, between the channel and the Azores, fire broke out in the coal bunkers, spread to the cargo in the forehold and raged for four days until the vessel succeeded in reaching St. Michael's, when the flames were got under control.

About 800 tons of cargo was destroyed, besides all the coal in the bore bunkers. There was only one passenger on board.

The Jan Van Nassau is a new steamer, and this is only her second voyage to New York.

REVOLVERS NOT USED

Capt. Inch Denies Stories of Cowardice on Volturno

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Francis Inch, the boyish-looking Briton, who commanded the burned steamer Volturno, came to port last night bringing with him 87 survivors, passengers and crew, of his ill-starred vessel. His story of the disaster, in which 136 lives were lost, had preceded him by wireless, but in a cabin of the Kroonland, which brought him here, Inch told his tale in simply phrased, and modestly spoken detail, that described more vividly than the wireless could picture, the panorama of the Volturno's loss and the rescue of more than 500 of those she had on board.

Cowardice, there was none, either among officers or crew. Inch says. There was no rush of seamen, which made it necessary for him to warn them back with his revolver. His only weapon, he left in a drawer in his cabin, and it burned with the ship. And no one on board drew a revolver. These statements he intends, should refute the stories told by steerage passengers, who arrived Wednesday on the Grosser Kurfuerst.

The Volturno's master, besides defending his own officers and men, said he had no criticism to make of the tactics of any of the boats that stood by.

Greedy Seamen Arrested.

MONTREAL, Oct. 17.—It has been customary for English seamen who have been signed on at British ports for round trips on Atlantic vessels to demand and secure a bonus for returning in them after they have grounded on this side of the water. In an effort to stop this practice the C.P.R. yesterday morning secured the arrest of Harry Stock, Arthur Boldridge and Albert Weatherby, the spokesmen of a number of seamen on the Mount Temple, which recently grounded in the St. Lawrence and was temporarily repaired in the Vickers drydock here, who demanded a bonus for working the ship, which they contended was not seaworthy.

Vote Was 43 to 12— Is Disqualified From Holding Office Again

Canadian Press Despatch.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 17.—Governor Sulzer was removed from office to-day by the High Court of Impeachment by a vote of forty-three to twelve.

The vote to disqualify him from again holding office was in the negative and practically unanimously.

ALBANY, N.Y., Oct. 17.—Governor William Sulzer was yesterday found guilty by the High Court of Impeachment on three articles preferred against him. They were 1, 2 and 4. He was declared innocent on the charges contained in article 3.

To-day he will be removed from office, but not disqualified from holding office in this state in the future unless there is a substantial change in the informal vote reported to have been taken by the court on these questions in secret session yesterday.

For the same reason it is expected that he will be found not guilty on the other four articles still remaining to be voted upon when the court adjourned last night.

Lieut.-Governor M. H. Glynn, who has been acting governor since the impeachment of Sulzer, will become chief executive of the state. He is an Albany newspaper owner. Robt. F. Wagner, a New York attorney, will become lieutenant-governor. He is the majority leader in the Senate.

The vote on articles 1 and 2 was 39 to 18, a bare two-thirds' majority. The former article charges that the governor falsified his statement of campaign contributions; the latter that he committed perjury in so doing.

The vote on article 3 which charges that the governor bribed witnesses to withhold testimony from the Frawley investigating committee, was unanimous in favor of the governor.

The vote on article 4 was 43 to 14, six members changing their votes on articles 1 and 2 from "not guilty" to "guilty," and two from "guilty" to "not guilty." This article charges that the governor suppressed evidence by means of threats to keep witnesses from testifying before the Frawley committee. Among these was Duncan W. Peck, state superintendent of public works, who testified at the trial that the governor had asked him to commit perjury.

The secret informal vote to remove the governor was said to be 43 to 14, the same as on article 4, and the vote not to disqualify him was said to be unanimous.

Article 6, which charges that the governor committed larceny in speculating with his campaign contributions, was said not to have been sustained in the secret session by a vote of 50, declaring the governor not guilty to seven against him.

Article 5, which charges that he prevented a particular witness, F. L. Colvell, from attending the sessions of the Frawley committee; article 7, that he threatened to use his office and influence to affect the vote or political action of certain assemblymen, and article 8, that he corruptly used his influence to affect the prices of securities on the stock exchange, were reported to have been also decided in favor of the governor in the secret session by a practically unanimous vote.

Of the judges of the Court of Appeals, presiding Judge Cullen voted for the acquittal of Mr. Sulzer on all the articles that came before the High Court yesterday. It was predicted that he would vote against his removal from office also, the only member of the Court of Appeals branch of the Impeachment Court to vote for the continuance of the high respondent in his present office. On articles one and two Judges Bartlett, Cullen, Chase and Werner voted for acquittal, and Judges Collin, Cuddeback, Hiscock, Hogan and Miller for a verdict of guilty.

It is predicted to-day that the decision of the High Court will be unanimous in favor of not depriving him of the opportunity to hold positions of trust, honor and profit under the state in the future.

ONTARIO WINS

First and Second In Apple Contest at Winnipeg Go to This Province.

TORONTO, Oct. 17. — Ontario achieved first-class honors yesterday at the Canadian Land and Fruit Exhibition at Winnipeg.

A telegram received at the Parliament buildings yesterday afternoon stated that the main provincial exhibit of fruit, chiefly apples, pears and peaches, had received first prize.

The individual exhibit contest for the best five boxes of apples was a double victory for Ontario. W. C. Hamilton, Collingwood, was awarded first prize, and the Bethon Breck Orchard Co. of Watertown, Wentworth County, second. A British exhibitor came third.

The success of the Ontario exhibits was anticipated in view of Ontario securing first prize for the continent for apples a few weeks ago at Cleveland.

THE CANADIAN CLUB AND GOLDWIN SMITH

The late Professor Goldwin Smith may not have been an enthusiastic Canadian, but he nevertheless served a useful purpose even by his chronic pessimism. There is one thing to be said in favor of the pessimist, and that is, that he sees things, disagreeable things they may be. The optimist is inclined to close his eyes to the disagreeable, and when the pessimist comes along and points out some disagreeable fact he is not always thanked for his information.

Goldwin Smith was one of the finest scholars and literary men that ever lived in Canada, and with all his faults and crankiness, he was a deep-seeing if not a far-seeing philosopher. It was Goldwin Smith's pessimism as to Canadian Nationality that goaded Mr. McCullough into founding the Canadian Club with the object of disproving the dismal prophesies as to the future of Canada as a nation.

Mr. McCullough is an enthusiast, and a club man to his finger tips. But he is a club man who believes he has a mission. He insists upon the missionary aspect of the Canadian Club movement. He regards it as essentially a spiritual movement in the highest sense. He is not a club man out for a "good time," although he evidently enjoys the association of his fellow Canadians, but he is out for the creating of a distinct national consciousness and individuality.

He does not care what our forefathers were, we are now Canadians and we're proud of the name. There may be a slight tone of jingoism in this teaching, but Mr. McCullough's object is to bring all the different nationalities of which the Dominion is composed to feel at home in this northern part of the American continent.

One very laudable purpose, and a charitable one, will be served by these clubs if they can foster a spirit of trust and confidence between native Canadians and new emigrants. There is often a feeling of suspicion and jealousy on the part of Canadians toward the Englishmen. This may in some cases be well founded, but not always. If these clubs can bring the native Canadian to a better understanding of his English brother they will do much to build up Canada as a nation, and to strengthen the bonds of Empire.

THE IMPORTANCE OF THE TAG

The word "tag" has various meanings, but all of them relate to some small thing which is of no use in itself, and is only of value when it is attached to some thing of greater importance.

There is the tag of a boot-lace which is very convenient, and facilitates the process of dressing when one is late for business, and while it is a very small thing it is nevertheless annoying to have to lace a boot with a tagless lace.

When, therefore, a little girl who is an indispensible tag to some family, comes to you on the street and offers you a tag, do not spurn the offer as a mean one, nor regard the tag of no importance.

The tag is of no value to the buyer only the man without a tag to-morrow will have very little peace on the streets of Peterborough, so that if it is only for self-defence every person ought to get tagged at the earliest possible moment.

The tag is a small thing, the cost of it is small, and you will not miss what you pay for it, but when at the end of the day these small amounts are brought together they will make a very valuable tag to the Children's Aid Society, and considerably help these good people to take care of the lost and neglected tags of our city. Remember when you buy a tag you are helping the little one. "In as much as ye did it to the least of these."

WHY IS AN EMIGRANT?

A persistent correspondent, who fails to give his name and calls himself "A Traveller," writes once more on the emigrant, or rather, the immigrant question. Here is his letter:

Peterborough, Oct. 15, 1913.

Sir,—When does an immigrant cease to be a traveller? The Star would say after he had put the "can" in Canada. As regards previous question. I hoped for legal information. The question of when an immigrant ceases to be one having been before the U.S. courts, Rt. Hon. Samuel is going to find a place for Imperial Naturalization in the statute book of the Empire. But questions of domicile come forward, the Civil Service requiring three years' residence from a British subject; but I cannot see any grounds for treating a British subject as an emigrant on his going to another part of the Empire. He certainly does not emigrate whatever else he does.

A TRAVELLER.

The point raised by our correspondent is an interesting one, but to say that a British subject does not emigrate when he goes from one part of the Empire to another is not correct unless he is merely on a trip.

"To emigrate," says the dictionary, is "to depart; to remove from one country or state to another for the purpose of residence," therefore a person who emigrates is an emigrant.

The fact that the Civil Service requires three years' residence from a British subject is no reflection upon the subject. There are many minor restrictions in municipal life in England which affect strangers coming in from other towns. It is questionable if a newly arrived Englishman could take up a position efficiently in the Civil Service until he had got used to his new conditions.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Peterborough Times says:

The Major is now inspector of penitentiaries. From 1593 until March, 1913, he was connected with Portsmouth Penitentiry here in several capacities."

Surely it is time this Major retired on a good substantial pension.

A criticism of the cement paving was heard yesterday on Hunter street when two farmers, viewing the operations, were heard to complain that it would wear out the horses' shoes too fast. They said nothing about their horses' shoes wearing out the city's pavement.

Apropos of the pending protest of the Hon. Sydney Fisher in reference to Chateauguay, it may be said that had the election in the riding of West Peterborough gone wrong last time there would have been a number of arrests. The long-drawn out and doubtful process of a trial is a poor way of getting at election crookedness there is a much better way, namely, to arrest the men involved and have them tried separately for their offences.

EXCERPTS

Protecting the Bank Note.

A special staff of examining clerks devote their attention to detecting forgeries in the Bank of England. Of late years there have not been many cases of forged notes, but during the eighteenth and early part of the nineteenth centuries the bank suffered severe losses from counterfeit notes. The story of the first recorded forgery forms a unique chapter in the book of romance. A certain linendraper, named Vaughan, was passionately in love with a fair maiden whose father was a man of considerable wealth. The love-sick swain knew that the quickest way to win the girl was to give some proof that he was a man of means. To this end he employed several men to engrave for him a Bank of England note for £20. When twelve of the notes had been worked off he presented them to his lady fair. Unluckily the imposition was soon discovered, and poor Vaughan was hanged.

All Old.

Discovery of a prehistoric Turkish bath in Ireland suggests again the thought that most of the things about which modern civilization boasts are ancient. An automatic machine was in use to supply sacrificial water in an ancient Greek temple. Queen Maria Theresa had an elevator in her house at Luxembourg at least as early as 1777, and an omnibus was running in Paris in 1662. In 1667 Robert Hooke conveyed sounds to a distance by distended wire—telephone, in fact.

SON OF GOVERNOR GENERAL

The Royal Bridegroom

Apart altogether from the fact that he is the son of H. R. H. the Duke of Connaught, a good deal of interest attaches in Canada to the personality of H. R. H. Prince Arthur of Connaught, who is now the husband of H. R. H. the Duchess of Fife. He is a man of many parts. Soldier, diplomatist, athlete, fine shot and excellent horseman, he has been rightly termed the "Admirable Crichton of the Royal Family." His love for athletics was developed at Eton, and he holds very strong views concerning the spectacular side of sports. "Unfortunately," he once said, "it is the tendency of the age for men and boys to watch other people play instead of playing themselves. When I was at Eton I was told that unless I played football five times a week I should probably find standing easier than sitting."

There was one Eton episode, however, which made the Prince blush furiously at the time. This was when Queen Victoria during the time of her Diamond Jubilee went to the school, called for Arthur and embraced him to his obvious reluctance and confusion, before his class colleagues.

HIS BOYISH AMBITION

The boyish ambition, however, of "Marcus" as the Prince is known to his intimates, was to be a watch and clock maker. But this ambition was quickly given up when his father made him go round with the man who wound up the clocks at Bagshot Park. For the Prince came to the conclusion that the occupation lacked excitement and turned his attention to soldiering.

From Eton, he went to Sanhurst, and entered upon his military duties in his usual characteristic, thorough-manner. "It is a pity," Lord Kitchener once remarked, "that His Royal Highness was born a Prince for that fact has probably prevented him taking the prominent position in the army to which his abilities entitle him." For the Prince is regarded in the highest military quarters as a very capable and keen soldier.

MILITARY SERVICE

He has served with the (Queen's Own) Hussars, the Royal Horse Artillery, and the Scots Greys, and to make himself a thoroughly efficient officer he has undergone instruction courses at the signalling and musketry schools.

Once at Aldershot a curious lady visitor asked a private which was the Prince. She was conducted to the regimental coffee bar, and saw a young officer, pipe in mouth, gravely reckoning the coppers in the till and entering them up in an account book. "Don't look much like a prince, does he!" tersely remarked the private.

JUST LIKE THE MAN

The Prince is greatly interested in the Boy Scouts and Boys' Brigades, and it was on the occasion of an official inspection of a large body of the latter that an accident occurred which illustrates His Royal Highness' presence of mind. A little girl on the edge of the crowd got flustered, and fell crying hysterically on the ground. Quick as lightning Prince Arthur whisked the mite up beside him on his knee, where she sat quite contented viewing the boys. Ultimately the Prince lowered her down, a very happy little girl, just before the march past.—Montreal Mail.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

Hon. W. S. Fielding left Montreal yesterday on a trip to England for two months, and will, on his return, take up his duties as president and editor-in-chief of The Daily Telegraph.

Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, will return to Ottawa soon from the west, and Hon. G. H. Perley will leave for a trip to Europe. He will likely be away a couple of months.

Joseph Boyle, engineer, and James Sothern, his fireman, in charge of a heavy T. H. & B. freight train, stalled in the Hunter street tunnel at Hamilton yesterday, were nearly suffocated.

A Cardiff despatch says all hope has been abandoned of saving any of the entombed miners in the Universal Colliery. Yesterday 49 bodies had been recovered and 360 were still in the pit.

The ruling has been given by the customs board in a case submitted to it by parties who wish fertilizers from slag made free. The interpretation given is that it is subject to a duty of 10 per cent.

After discussing the Ulster situation the Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association decided to raise a corps of 100 fully equipped nurses to accompany the Winnipeg Orange regiment if it should go to Ulster.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotation in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc

CHICAGO, Oct. 16.—Stop loss selling on a large scale broke the wheat market to-day, notwithstanding that the season's low price record had already been smashed twice in the previous 48 hours. Bearishness in Wall street had much influence. There was a heavy feeling at the close, which ranged 1⅛c to 1⅜c under last night. Corn finished ⅛c off to a shade up, oats at ⅛c decline, and provisions varying from 5c loss to a rise of 10c.

Liverpool grain closed: Wheat ⅜d lower. Corn, ⅛d to ⅜d lower.

Berlin closed 1⅛ lower. Budapest 1⅛ higher.

Big Reception to Tank Ship.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The oil tank steamer Narragansett, which "arrived with the milk in the morning" on the scene of the Volturno disaster, and by scattering tons of oil on the raging sea, helped so much in the rescue work, was given a great reception on her arrival in the Thames at noon yesterday. A band on board a tug met her down the river and played her to her berth to the strains of the "Conquering Hero," and a succession of national airs. The sirens of all the vessels in the river crowed and salvos of cheers from those on shore when they reached the Anglo-American Co.'s wharf. She had a number of survivors on board.

A STORY OF 1925

By F. A. MITCHEL

The nineteenth century, so prolific in inventions and discoveries, laid the foundation for some remarkable steps in knowledge of the functions of the body. During the first decade of the twentieth experimenters in institutions for original research became aware that there was an intermediate state between life and death, since life in many organisms could be suspended by being frozen in liquid air and afterward resuscitated.

It was found that bacteria, the lowest plant organisms, have enormous powers of resisting death. Bacteria of various diseases were frozen in liquid air at a temperature of minus 380 degrees F. There are instances of the lives of frogs, rats, snails and fish being suspended by this freezing process, yet on being "thawed out" after several weeks they revived.

These animals were found to be perfectly normal when placed in a refrigerating jar filled with liquid air at a certain temperature. After a short time the animals appeared lifeless. A month later they were removed and on being massaged showed signs of life, often reviving completely.

It does not appear that these investigators made experiments with human beings. Doubtless human beings objected to being thrust into a glass tank filled with liquid air 280 degrees below zero.

Since then there has been no effort to discover whether human beings could be frozen and brought to life.

In 1885 a party of tourists started from the town of Chamonix, in Switzerland, by the old route to climb Mont Blanc, the railroad to the summit not then having been built. One of the guides, Hans Twingle, twenty years old, was to be married on his return to Anna Bishof, three years his junior. The lovers, in the first freshness of youth, bade each other goodby, the girl in tears, for she had dreamed that she had been separated from Hans till she was an old woman near sixty, when she met him again, he being a youth of twenty. At that age he had no sympathy for an old woman and turned his back upon her. At the parting she feared that her dream boded some trouble either for her lover or herself.

And so it did. When the party returned to Chamonix Hans Twingle was not with them. He had fallen into a crevasse on the glacier hundreds of feet deep, and no effort was made to recover his body. The glacier moves at such a rate that it would bring Hans' body down to a point where the ice would give it up in exactly forty years. Anna Bishof, though she married, all her life hoped that she would live to look once more on the lover of her youth when he should be returned from his icy grave.

A few years ago Dr. Donenshunner, an investigator of the Institute For Original Research, went to Chamonix and heard the story of Hans and Anna. He found the latter an old woman and on questioning her as to the date that Hans had disappeared learned that the body was due to come forth from the glacier during the summer of the year 1925. On the 1st of July last the doctor went over to Chamonix and waited for the appearance of the body. He did not reveal his purpose, since it seemed so quixotic that he feared derision. It was to determine with the assistance of the latest scientific methods whether Hans was dead or in the suspensory state and, if the latter, whether he could be brought to life.

It was late in September before Hans' body appeared. Dr. Donenshunner had revealed his intention to the deceased relatives and secured their permission to resuscitate him. He had secured a bathtub, which he filled with water at 33 degrees, or one degree above the freezing point. He placed the body in this tub and gradually advanced the temperature, massaging the thorax about the heart and extending the operation over the whole body.

A record of what further expedients the scientist resorted to he turned over to his institute, where they are on file. Doubtless they would be too professional to be given here. The point I wish to mention especially is how his former sweetheart's dream came true. When Hans, still a man of twenty, had been restored Anna, attended by her granddaughter, was introduced to the apartment where he was. Hans sprang up, brushed by his former sweetheart, nearly knocking her over, and, throwing his arms around the granddaughter, exclaimed:

"Anna, dear heart, I am back with you in time for our wedding!"

"Gott in himmel!" exclaimed the old woman. "My dream has come true. He spurns me!"

"What is the old hag saying?" queried Hans.

"Old hag!" whined Anna. Then, losing control of herself, she seized a broom standing in a corner and belabored him unmercifully.

Dr. Donenshunner blames himself for a scene that was too much for a heart that had been frozen forty years. He did all in his power to bring Hans back to life a second time, but his efforts were futile.

The incident had a singular effect upon the granddaughter, who was but seventeen years old and not prepared for such a strain. She accused her grandmother of having murdered Hans. The people of Chamonix say that the girl gave her heart to a man old enough to be her grandfather.

Favors Tax on Bachelor Maids.

A tax on bachelor maids as well as bachelors was advocated before the legislative committee on taxation in Massachusetts by Mrs. Frank W. Page, who described herself as an "old schoolmarm." Women as well as men, she said, enjoyed freedom of life, and she said it was worth a tax of $3 a year to some of them to remain teaching school or working in the stores. Mrs. Page told the committee that 62 per cent of the men in Massachusetts who could afford marriage neglected to marry, most of them willfully.

Great Dreamers.

Robert Louis Stevenson was a great dreamer, and could dream in sequence, continuing a dream from the point where it had broken off the night before. It was in this way that the greater part of "Jekyll and Hyde" was put together. Dante, too, is said to have dreamed many cantos of "The Divine Comedy," and Voltaire records how the "Henriade" came to him in sleep. "Ideas occurred to me," he wrote, "in spite of myself and in which I had no part whatever."

On the Box

By THOMAS R. DEAN

Years ago there were two men living in one of the great cities on the eastern coast of the United States who, though they were father and son, were chums. They were rich and ultra fashionable, which meant then something far different from what it would mean today. In those days the fashionable people of the land were refined and intelligent. Now to be ultra fashionable has a questionable sound. One may be ultra fashionable, yet devoid of ordinary breeding.

The two men referred to looked like gentlemen and acted like gentlemen Shakespeare has described them in his words "to the manner born." They were always seen together on the street, and one looking at them would think them a pair of noblemen belonging to some lordly English estate. In society they were known as "Dombey & Son."

The father, who was a widower, drifted on, thinking that their companionship would last as long as they lived. What a shock, then, was it to him when his son announced to his father his engagement! The older man could not believe his senses. But when he learned that his son was to marry a girl with no fortune, that the young couple could not retain the position in society that their ancestors, the Van G.'s, had held for 200 years, his desolation was complete. He could not conceive of himself failing to appear at the functions he had from his youth been accustomed to attend, and to go to them without the companion who had always gone with him would be worse than not going at all.

The first quarrel the two had ever had followed. "You shall not marry," said the elder Van G., "unless you marry one of our set and one with sufficient fortune to enable you to keep up a position as a married man."

"I have asked a lady to be my wife," replied the son, "and I will not turn upon my invitation."

"Very well, then, you must shift for yourself."

Harry Van G. married a lovely girl; but, since it would have required an income equal to his father's to take her in the society he had been used to going with, he did not attempt it. But this in comparison with the young couple's real condition was a bagatelle. They had nothing whatever to live on and sank rapidly into poverty.

The elder Van G., though it nearly broke his heart to go to functions without his double, chose what he considered the lesser of two evils and went. He saw nothing of his son—not that he blamed him or was angry with him, but that he considered Harry out of the chosen set who had composed society since colonial days and it would be contamination for him to associate with any one except the elect.

One day the elder Van G.—this was several years since he had parted with his son—stepped out of his club to a carriage that had been called for him. Elegantly dressed, as usual, his head covered with a shining silk hat, his feet with white spats, his hands with tan gloves and carrying a cane, he stood for a moment looking up and down the street, then went down to the cab. The coachman annoyed him, for instead of looking straight ahead of him he turned his face in the opposite direction.

Mr. Van G. got into the carriage and told the cabman to drive him to the home of a lady social leader. On arriving at the door some friends of the aristocrat happened to pass, and he stopped on the sidewalk to speak to them. When doing so he happened to cast his eye to the coachman and recognized his son. He was too well bred to show surprise or shock at even this contretemps. Nor did he in any way recognize the fact that his own offspring was his cabman. When his friends passed on he went into the house before which he stood and after making a call came out, directed the coachman to drive him to his home, tipped him and went inside.

The next day the same cab was called at the same club for the same man. On this occasion Mr. Van G. was dressed in his most ordinary costume. As he entered the cab without looking at his cabman he gave his directions as to where he wished to be driven.

The cabman started. He was directed to take his fare to his own humble domicile. He whipped up his horse with as much sang froid as if he had been directed to drive to a railway station, considering as he proceeded what he should do. It was evident that his father had recognized him and was going to see him and his wife, but what for he did not know. Harry and his wife lived in a small suit of rooms in a cheap flathouse. On reaching it his father without the least unbending said:

"Can you direct me to the rooms of Harry Van G.?"

"Certainly, sir," said the coachman, touching his hat respectfully, and he, leading him to his rooms, rang. And the door was opened by Mrs. Van G.

Once across the threshold, a marked change came over the visitor. Taking his son's hand in one of his own, his daughter-in-law's in the other, with wet eyes, he said:

"Come home, my dear boy and girl. I can stand this no longer. I shall give up society for you."

That ended the estrangement. The father was getting old and found more comfort at home than in society.

No Promotion.

The late Bishop Doane of Albany, a strict conservative, had his own views as to woman's place in the world. No feminist this good Tory bishop, no advocate of "newness" of any sort.

Bishop Doane believed in marriage of the real old fashioned kind, and to bridegrooms at weddings he used sometimes to make a little speech.

"My young friend," he would say to the pale and nervous bridegroom, patting him on the back, "you are now embarking on a long, hazardous voyage, and I bid you remember the Finnish proverb.

"For the Finnish sailors have a proverb to this effect:

"'The man who on the ship of matrimony signs as mate will never get promoted.'"—New York Tribune.

Better Than a Clock.

"My father," said the small boy to the lady who was calling on his mother, "is a great man. He knows what time it is without even looking at his watch."

"What do you mean, Tommy?" queried the visitor.

"Oh, when I holler out an' ask him what time it is in the morning, he always says it's time to get up. An' when I ask him what time it is in the evenin', he allus says, 'Time to go to bed, Tommy.' Oh, I tell you my father is a great man!"—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

CANADA A NATION WITHIN THE EMPIRE

Founder of Canadian Club Movement Addressed Peterboro Branch Last Night

Last night about fifty enthusiastic Canadians gathered in the Y.M.C.A. Hall, to dine and to hear Mr. C. R. McCullough of Hamilton, speak on the Canadian Club movement.

This was the first dinner of the season for the Peterboro branch of the Canadian Club, and considering this there was a good assembly of members.

Mr Morris, the vice-president of the Peterboro Canadian Club, introduced the speaker of the evening. He said that the Club was honored by having Mr. McCullough, the founder of the Canadian Club, to address them.

Mr. McCullough upon rising to speak, was greeted with cheers. He said it was very good of the Club to ask him to come down and see that in this rapidly growing city they have a Canadian Club. He had visited and inspected the industries of the city that day. and was surprised to find industries which he had not known were in existance in Canada, he referred to the Colonial Weaving Company.

PETERBORO CANOE

He was particularly interested in the canoe industry, those canoes which were known as the "Peterboro Canoe" all over the Dominion. He said he had been in Peterboro 13 years ago, and was surprised at its growth. He noticed particularly the number of workmens dwellings that were going up so rapidly, and he hoped that the civic authorities would see to it that they guard against slums.

Mr. McCullough then went on to review the formation and the progress of the Canadian Club movement. He said that twenty-one years ago, a distinguished man, Professor Golwin Smith, issued a book in which he belittled Canadian nationality. And it was from the reading of this work that the idea came to him, (the speaker) of founding a club that would foster the national spirit.

GOLDWIN SMITH'S PESSIMISM

Mr. McCullough said that Goldwin Smith was not a Canadian at heart, he regarded Canada through the head merely; he was a Continental Unionist. "I did not agree with him" said the speaker, "and so I set to work to found a Canadian Club, and after twenty-one years I feel that Canada in not lacking in unity as in 1892.

Professor Goldwin Smith believed that the Western Provinces would not combine with the east, but to-day, if you travel from east to west of the Dominion, you will find a long list of Canadian Clubs the same as there is in Peterboro. He had the pleasure on one occasion, in British Columbia of introducing the President of the Halifax Canadian Club to the President of the Club in Vancouver.

THE REBELLION

In the early days, things were not so bright in Canada; there was a feeling of depression and drifting; and the pessimism of Goldwin Smith was likely to lead them astray. Then a wave of patriotism went over the country at the time of the rebellion and Goldwin Smith himself said that even the Crimea has not aroused such national enthusiasm.

The speaker urged the members of the Peterboro Club not to be discouraged, for small beginnings are not to be despised. They had 1.700 members in the Hamilton Club, and the movement was growing all over Canada.

NATIVISM AND IMPERIALISM

Speaking of Imperialism, as compared with what he turned "Nativism," he said that there is no real difference between the two. A good Nativist is a good Imperialist, and a good Imperialist is a good Nativist. Every part of the Empire must develope along its own lines; all that is peculiar to Australia, New Zealand Africa, and Canada, should be developed. "What an Empire it would be if we were all on a dead level—that is not the genius of the race to which we belong."

Mr. McCullough said he looked forward to the time when these clubs would be established throughout the Empire, even in the British Isles themselves, to conserve the National characteristics of each country.

He said there was a time when the best of our young men were going over into the States, but that time was past, and to-day they are coming back again. Americans themselves are emigrating to Canada and are making splendid citizens.

A NATION WITHIN THE EMPIRE

He pleaded with Canadians of all shades of politics and religion to get together and make one race, and reconcile all those things upon which they differ, and so build up Canada as a distinct nation alongside the other nations that compose the great Empire.

Canon Davidson expressed the appreciation of the Club for the splendid address of Mr. McCullough. It was a good thing to be able to gather round this table, differing as they did in religion and politics, yet all united in this one thing that they were Canadians.

The meeting closed with the singing of God Save the King.

NO CHARGE FOR OUTAGES WHEN IT'S MOONLIGHT

Lights at Smith Street Bridge to Receive Attention

That the Peterborough Light and Power Company be not charged the fine of twenty-five cents for lights that are out on moonlight nights, was the conclusion arrived at by the Fire, Water and Light Committee last night. Mayor Bradburn said that the Company did not have to light up these lights on moonlight nights unless they did so of their own accord.

After a short discussion Ald Buller of the Works Committee promised to have the matter of fixing the lights on the Smith street bridge attended to without delay.

MISS ADA PAYNE WAS REMEMBERED

Presentations Made by Friends at Bethel Church

Miss Ada Payne, of Hall Glen, left recently for Toronto to take a course in the Deaconess Training School, after which she expects to go to China as a Missionary. Before her departure Miss Payne was made the recipient of an address and present from her class in Bethel church. The address was read by Miss Ida Jory, and a gold pin, set with pearls, was presented by Miss Dora Payne. On Sunday, at the close of a missionary service at Bethel Church, Miss Payne was again surprised, when Mr. Nathan Payne read an address, appreciative of her work as teacher of the senior Bible class, and organist of the Church. This was followed by a beautiful gold watch being presented by Mr. Jacob White.—Norwood Register.

LINDSAY GROWING IN POPULATION

From information received at the Town Clerk's office it has been learned that Lindsay's population is now 7,400, an increase of 200 over last year, says the Lindsay Post. This is a very healthy increase, taking everything into consideration, and the prospects are that during the coming year a still greater increase will be recorded.

THEATRICAL

Guy Brothers Minstrels presented by George R. Guy, made a decided hit last night at the Grand. The endmen were exceptionally good, while the musical numbers were a treat.

Mr. Albert Guy's contribution of "Last night was the end of the world" was well received, while Jim Harding's "Im going back to Carolina" took the house. The dancers were good and the negro farce, "Malinda's Wedding Day," introducing George R. Guy and Harry Prince, America's greatest buck dancers, was thoroughly enjoyed.

Put pockets on the underside of aprons near the right-hand edge and they will be found just as convenient for use, yet will not catch on doorknobs or get torn.

DIPLOMA AND MEDAL FOR MISS BLACKBURN

Presented by Bishop O'Brien on the Occasion of Her Graduating From St. Josephes Hospital

A social evening was tendered Miss B. Blackburn at St. Joseph's Hospital last evening, on the occasion of her graduating from that institution.

Her diploma and medal were presented by His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, who spoke in the highest praise of the nursing profession and gave her kind words of encouragement. His Lordship said it gave him great pleasure also to meet the members of the medical staff. He assured them he had the greatest respect for their profession, considering it one of the highest, and would be pleased to do anything in his power to assist them to make St. Joseph's Hospital proficient in every respect.

Rev. Dean McColl, who acted as chairman, called upon the various members of the staff, all of whom spoke in the highest terms of Miss Blackburn's ability.

Dainty refreshments were then served, after which a couple of hours were enjoyably spent in music and song.

Miss Blackburn, after a short holiday, will follow her profession in Peterbrough, where she is favorably known and where her superior qualifications will insue for her every success. She was the recipient of many handsome bouquets of flowers and other personal gifts.

Old hot-water bags, split open and cut into circular pieces are good to make mats for house plants.

With the October Shoe Sale on Second Floor

Although the following items are but three of the many lines we carry, yet the splendid worth that is to be procured in these, is an accurate representation of the trusty values that now hold sway throughout the Women's Shoe Department.

Women's Smart New Walking Boots That Bear a $3.37 Price Mark

The formost Canadian and American makers have contributed to this "Seven" Style lot, which we call walking boots, because the make and appearance is of that trig-style that matches so well the neatly tailored out-door garments now in vogue. And there are patent leathers with cloth tops, patents with dull kid tops, also those that are of dull calfskin throughout. These are all to be procured in a variety of natty lace and button styles, and mean to the purchaser a saving worth while, for these boots are of $4.00 and $4.25 value. October Shoe Sale $3.37

Our Specially Selected $3.50 Boot is $2.95 during the Sale

This means a reduction of fifty-five cents. And while this may not seem much, for a big sale, yet we would remind you that at the regular price, this shoe is unsurpassed in leather and workmanship. This is the $3.50 line of women's boots, that we have specialized on ever since we started the shoe section, and every season adds to its exceptional merit. For the sale there are six styles, each of them smart leading models in dull calf, patent colt, fine dongola, blucher style lace boots, and a heavy cord silk that buttons. In this silk boot there are only four pairs, but in the other lines a complete range of sizes is procurable. Special value at $3.50. This sale price is remarkably low at $2.95

Women's Dull Calf Button Boots $1.99

We do not hesitate to say that seldom does three dollars in the ordinary way, buy a better boot than this dull calf button. It is stoutly made, with extension soles and military heels, and we call it the "Peterboro" last. Being a splendid line for the price, we anticipate a big sale of this line, and though there are now all sizes from 2½ to 7 it is safe to say that a few days will make a big hole in the assortment...... $1.99

BARN IS DESTROYED

Fire Brigade Had Call to Romaine Street

At 8.20 this morning the fire brigade was summoned to 131 Romaine street, the residence of Mr. T. Williams. A barn at the rear of the house was on fire, the cause given was that a spark from a passing engine found its way to the roof. Owing to the barn being very close to the house it was feared that the blaze would spread to the residence. Mr. and Mrs. Williams are an elderly couple and Mr. Williams has been confined to his bed for several years. The neighbors gave their kind assistance and he was removed to the verandah from where he could be easily removed in case of danger.

When the firemen arrived the blaze had a good start but a couple of streams soon changed the situation and the damage was confined to the barn. In one end of the structure several thousand feet of lumber were stored and this was nearly all destroyed. Some chickens in the building were liberated before the fire reached them.

The barn and most of its contents was a complete loss, about $300 being represented. There was no insurance.

BRISK BUSINESS AT THE POLICE COURT

Numerous Cases Are Dealt With by Magistrate Dumble

Wm. O'Connor, was re-arraigned at police court this morning on the charge of stealing a horse. He pleaded guilty and on the request of the Crown Attorney he was remanded to jail one week for sentence.

O'Connor asked for leniency as he claimed he was drunk at the time.

Constables Sills and Reid, who apprehended the prisoner, will in all probability come in for the $20.00 reward.

CRUELTY TO HORSE.

Patrick Lavery, was fined $10 for cruelty to a livery horse owned by Dr. F. L. Robinson.

JAIL FOR ONE WEEK.

Because his story was not satisfactory to the court, John L. Anderson, who pleaded guilty to the charge of having been intoxicated, was remanded to jail for a week.

THIRTY DAYS.

Walter Guy's address will be "The County Jail" for the next thirty days. His wife gave evidence that he was a watchmaker by trade, but that he would not work.

BACK AGAIN.

David Henry, an ex-convict appeared once more on the charge of vagrancy, and was remanded for a week.

FINES OF $2.

Hugh Barrett, who was drunk in a public place was fined $2.

"Get out your money," was the court's greeting to Wm. Torrence, charged with the same offence.

Norman Heard, was remanded to jail for another week on the charge of vagrancy.

John Irwin was given his liberty after a week's remand in jail.

NOT APPRECIATED.

The two Toronto men, David Normans and Ed. Hamilton, charged with vagrancy, were allowed to go on their promise to get out of the city. "Toronto will appreciate you more than we do," remarked his worship.

CONGRATULATIONS TO CAPT. FEE

Millbrook Reporter,

Our congratulations to Captain Calvin Fee, who is on the list elected to the fellowship of the Royal Colonial Institute. Old Millbrook boys are looming large on the stage of activities, and we're proud of them. . . . . Mr. and Mrs. H. Dunford moved to Peterborough this week, to the regret of their many friends. They have long been residents here and most estimable citizens. We wish the mabundant prosperity in their new home.

Are You Going West This Fall?

If so, take advantage of the remarkably low one-way second-class Colonist Rates to Vancouver, Victoria, Nelson, Spokane, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, etc., in effect daily until October 10; or if Western Canada is your destination the low-rate homeseekers Excursions in effect each Tuesday until October 28. The route is one of the most scenic in the world. Bear in mind that the Canadian Pacific Railway offers the finest possible equipment and fastest train service. It is the only line operating through standard and tourist sleepers also dining cars, to Winnipeg and Vancouver. By travelling C. P. R. you avoid the necessity of changing depots. All equipment is owned and operated by the C. P. R. affording the highest form of efficiency. If such a trip is under consideration, apply to any C. P. R. Agent for full particulars, or write M. G. BIGGEST BIRD IN THE WORLD.

The Ostrich, Whose Feathers Have Been Sought For Centuries.

The ostrich is a bird long of leg and short of brain. If it ran in a straight line, a man would require a 60-horse power automobile to catch it. It runs in long curves and men on horseback catch it by cutting corners. The high cost of living does not affect ostriches much. They like rich grasses and almost any vegetation, but in the hard times eat nails, tin cans, parasols and other useless things. A full grown ostrich reaches the height of six to eight feet, and it is the largest bird now extant. The ostrich has wings but they are of no use in flying. In fact, the ostrich is not a flying bird anyway; it belongs to the class of running birds. What wings it has are used chiefly in volplaning over the Arabian deserts when the bird is pursued. Running and extending its wings, an ostrich, it is estimated, can cross the sands at the rate of 60 miles an hour.

Although the hen ostrich lays eggs that weigh about three pounds apiece, thus being equal to a couple of dozen of ordinary hen's eggs, the bird is valued especially for the fine crop of plumage it grows. Ostrich tips have been valued in the millinery art since the days of the Roman emperors. At the spectacles in the arenas at Rome many ostriches were exhibited, and their brains were considered a delicacy on the table of Heliogabalus.

So well known are ostrich feathers that they have become figures in heraldry. Three white ostrich feathers are the well known insignia of the Prince of Wales. Tradition ascribes their use in that particular to Edward, the Black Prince, who is said to have plucked a plume of ostrich feathers—not from the tail of an ostrich—but from the casque of John of Luxemburg, King of Bohemia, who fell by his hand at Crecy. Prior to that time, however, ostrich plumes seem to have been taken by the House of Plantagenet as the official insignia. Ever since the early days of heraldry and chivalry the plumes of the ostrich have been esteemed as ornaments of headgear, nor does their use decrease. Ladies in the twentieth century are as eager to have nodding ostrich plumes above their heads as kings and princes were in the days gone by. Knights Templar employ the plumes on their chapeaux and the plumed knights with glittering swords are among the most picturesquely uniformed bodies we have.

Ostrich farming has been found profitable in many parts of the world. In South Africa great ranches exist where the birds are raised for their plumage, which is plucked twice a year. The feathers are worth about $125 a pound, the price sometimes ranging as high as $250. There are 24 large feathers on each wing of the male bird. It may be seen, therefore, that there is good money in ostrich farming. Colonies of the birds have also subsisted in various parts of the United States and in other countries. The fact that the birds pick up their own living when given wide enough range, that it is necessary only to pluck the feathers and market them, makes ostrich farming an easy and profitable business, albeit somewhat perilous, because the legs of the ostrich, wonderfully strong in running, are dangerous weapons of defence and a blow from the two-toed foot has been known to knock a man down and rip him open. Ostrich farmers use forked sticks to hold the heads of the birds to the earth while they relieve them of their plumage.

Ostrich feathers do not come from the ranches fine and white and curly as we see them on my lady's hat. On the contrary they are a dirty gray in color, dirty in texture and coarse appearing. It requires the skill of the feather dresser's art to make of them the gorgeous plumes that are so beautiful and so expensive.

Professor Slocum of the college at Madison was fifty years old at a certain date. He was tall and stoop shouldered and ungainly. He was reticent and undemonstrative, and society knew him not at all. Miss Deborah Day of the same town had reached the age of forty-five. She was plain of face and frigid of attitude, and her charms were missing.

It was one Sunday in church that fate brought the old bach and the old maid together in the same pew, and they sang from the same hymn book. Fate, through a mutual acquaintance, introduced them after the sermon. A few evenings later the professor called. The talk was of philosophy. He called again, and they talked of theosophy. He made a third call, and the age of the world was under discussion for an hour. After that it was for the cow to do her part.

One evening, just at sundown, Miss Day walked forth in a meadow to gather a few daisies. At the same hour it singularly happened that Professor Slocum sought the same meadow in search of geological specimens. The lady discovered her daisies, the professor discovered his pebbles, the two people discovered each other, and together they discovered a cow. A cow may be simply an animated object on the landscape or she may be a discovery because she is enraged over the loss of a horn knocked off in some way and because she has her head down and her tail up and is charging the pebbles and daisy gatherers.

Then the fifth discovery showed up. It was a cow shed twenty rods away, a rough affair that had seen better days. The meadow was retired, and the shed was more so. They reached it just in time for the professor to find a board and bar the entrance against the cow and later on to further strengthen it. There was no doubt about the bovine being in earnest. She made frantic efforts to tear down the shed with her remaining horn, and when she could not effect an entrance she stood on guard to keep her victims from coming out. Darkness suddenly fell, and then the perturbed couple suddenly realized their situation.

"Professor Slocum, I must leave here this instant!" exclaimed the horrified Miss Day.

"And so must I!" was the reply.

"It is not proper!"

"Certainly not!"

"I shall be a laughingstock!"

"And I the same!"

"I can't go, but you must!" said Miss Day as the cow quieted down. "Professor, you must see that you must go—you must see it!"

"I do see it," he replied, "and, while I cannot depart from the shed, I can climb on the top of it."

This he accomplished by making his way through a gap in the roof. He was now in a position of propriety, but there was the cow again. When she saw him perched up there, so near and yet so far, she tried to climb up after him, and at the end of two minutes Miss Day was shrieking for protection. Down scrambled the professor, and the cow took to running around the shed to find where he had disappeared. The interior of the shed had now become so dark that nothing could be seen. In trying to strengthen the door some more the professor fell down and rolled over. In trying to go to his assistance Miss Day suddenly found herself sprawling.

Can a person maintain frigidness when surrounded by a cow shed, with a mad cow battering away at the door? Can a person be stilted after rolling in the straw and dirt? Can he or she be severely ceremonious when it is impossible to see each other? The professor wisely decided that they could not, and he reached out and clasped Miss Day's hand. She returned the clasp. Then he put his arm around her in a protecting way, and she did not shrink. Then the old cow made up her mind to melt the frost and bring out the turtledoves if she had to break her neck to do it. She gave a bellow of warning and retreated eight or ten rods and then came for the side of the shed like a runaway locomotive. She hit it fair and square, and two-thirds of it caved in like a house of sand. In the caving she was mixed up with beams and boards, and the professor took advantage of the occasion to tear the door aside and then pull his companion out into the open. Then they ran for the nearest fence. It wasn't dignified to fall down three or four times, but they fell. It wasn't eminently proper, when the fence was reached and the cow was hard on their trail, for the professor to throw Miss Day over and then take a scramble himself, but that's the way it was worked. Then as soon as the man in the case could get his breath he realized the inevitable. They were both tattered and frizzled. They had together passed through peril by flood and fire (and cow), and romance had come to their hearts at last.

"Miss Day, I have loved you from the first!" announced the professor as he took her hand.

"And I—I"— she replied after gasping for breath.

Of course she had, too, and of course that settled it then and there. The old cow looked through the rails at them, heard the cooing of the doves and with a snort of disgust turned tail and walked away. And yet she had made over two human beings to be like the average.

IS A MASTER PLEADER

"JIM" GREENSHIELDS IN DEMAND WHEN THERE IS TROUBLE.

Celebrated Montreal Criminal Lawyer Who Was Called Into Requisition For the Defence of Harry Thaw Is a Famous "Thunderer" In the Courts of the Province of Quebec —Defended Young Shortis.

It has been noted with a good deal of interest that J. N. Greenshields, K.C., of Montreal, loomed large in the recent brief visit of Harry Thaw to Canada, as counsel for that young man. It is some years now since Jim Greenshields was prominent in criminal trials, the interval being taken by Mr. Greenshields heading many important companies and piling up a large fortune as the result, says Toronto Saturday Night. However, if a man gets into a peck of trouble in the Province of Quebec, particularly if that trouble is of a very serious criminal nature, it is as natural to call upon Mr. Greenshields for help as it would be to yell for Tom Robinette in the city of Toronto, though at the same time the two men and their methods are as far apart as the poles. Jim Greenshields is credited with knowing how to "skin a cat" in more ways than any criminal lawyer in the Province of Quebec. In the court room Jim Greenshields is given to shouting at a witness until the life is fairly scared out of the unfortunate, but he shouts to some purpose, as the record of his criminal cases goes to show. Mr. Robinette on the other hand, is of a persuasive type; he is as smooth as Greenshields is rough, and, believes that more can be gained by a liberal application of molasses than by using the bludgeon. The last great criminal case that attracted much public attention, in which Mr. Greenshields figured, was the Shortis case. In this instance young Shortis, who was connected with some of England's great families, came out to Canada, and, not being in receipt of sufficient money to meet his extravagant wants, conceived the plan of holding up the pay staff just before pay day, at one of the large cotton mills, located at Valleyfield, not far distant from Montreal. In this hold-up, Shortis killed two men and wounded two more. The trial was a most sensational one, insanity being the plea. Shortis' relatives simply piled in the money, and his mother, a very handsome and engaging woman, came over from London to see her boy through. The trial ended in a conviction, but before the day came upon which he was to be hanged, Lord Aberdeen, then the Governor-General, used his royal prerogative, and Shortis was reprieved and sent to prison for life.

J. N. GREENSHIELDS, K.C.

The Charm of a Beautiful Hand.

The charm of a beautiful hand lies not so much in its beauty of form and outline as in the texture and color of the skin. The contour of a hand need not be absolutely perfect if other points are made so prominent that one forgets the defects in admiration for the soft, white skin and pink nails.

In washing your hands you should be supplied with a soap of good quality, a nice medium nailbrush and a piece of real pumice stone. The soap is rubbed on the brush, not on the skin, and then the hands are well scrubbed with soap and warm water until all the dirt that can possibly be removed in the first operation has disappeared. If necessary this scrubbing is repeated with clean water a second time, and the hands are carefully rinsed with clean water to remove all last traces of soap, for chapping is due to the imperfect removal of the soap. Before drying go carefully over the hands with the pumice stone and remove all callous and loose skin and any stains.

If the hands are badly chapped a little glycerin should be put on the brush with the soap.

After the hands have been carefully dried and the skin pushed gently back from around the nails then it is a good plan to keep the skin back and show the half moons, which are a sure sign of good breeding, by applying a little hydrogen peroxide, which will serve to whiten and contract the tissue and produce the desired effect.

Hair Arranged to Suit Hat.

The hair and the hat must be considered together, and never was more care required. It is wisest to have a difference in the hairdressing for morning and evening dress. It takes a good deal of time to arrange hair satisfactorily and cannot be hurried. Thin faces need soft hair about the brow, and gray hair (light, as it usually is) can be well fluffed beneath the large hats which were worn when powder was in vogue and so suit gray hair. The Psyche knot accords well with most of the fashionable coiffures.

Hairdressing is arranged for mature faces. Youth can adopt almost any kind with advantage. Many women now wear the head ornaments for evening wear low down on the forehead, sometimes with a pear shaped pearl falling from them in the center, just as they were in years long past, but it is a style which is more becoming if a soft curl is just visible behind.

The Poor Man's University

"JONES knows more about motor cars than any other man I know," said a man to his friend. "He has obtained his knowledge chiefly from motor car advertisements, and the catalogues and booklets circulated through them."

"All I know about photography," declared a well-known amateur, "I have learned from the men who advertise cameras, plates, papers and films."

Advertisements have been well called "The Poor Man's University," but other than poor men have been schooled thereby.

Much of what the average individual knows concerning personal and domestic hygiene, modern office methods, books and authors, electricity, precious stones, investments, and almost everything else, he has learned from advertisements.

Advertisements have stimulated our intelligence, added enormously to our knowledge, and given us aspirations which have raised us to higher levels of thinking and living. Advertising is indeed "The Poor Man's University."

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.

If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto.

THE SPORTING WORLD

FINAL PRACTICE FOR RUGBY GAME ON THE HOLIDAY

The Peterborough Rugby Club will practice at Nicholls Oval Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. It is very important that all players be at this practice, since this will be the last opportunity before Monday's game with the strong Parkdales. Coach Elliot Greene is back in town and will be on hand. Peterborough this season is represented by a strong and well balanced team, and the two defeats suffered so far this season by close scores, are attributable solely to lack of practice. This last week the team has been more than ever handicapped, since the use of the lights in front of the armories has been withdrawn. In spite of this the team is not at all discouraged and the game on Monday at the Oval promises to be hard fought and exciting.

LOST WILLS.

One Big Estate Recovered Through a Rat-Trap.

Wills are occasionally found in strange places, from weathercocks to picture frames, but there is surely but one instance of a will being found artfully tied to the leg of a bedstead. As might be surmised, it was the will of a very peculiar individual. The Earl of S—— was an eccentric peer, a morose, reserved man, who apparently suspected everybody of sinister motives. He used to hide things. Important deeds and letters and bank-notes for huge amounts he bundled into damp cellars, with disastrous results. He would ripe open chair cushions and secrete things there; and in short he had treasures of greater or less value in every hole and corner.

After Lord S——'s death the will and first codicil were readily forthcoming, mainly because they were in safer keeping than his lordship's. The second and most important codicil, however, took no fewer than three years to find. After the earl's death the bed on which he slept was pitched unceremoniously into the lumber-room, and it was by the merest accident that a servant at length discovered the long-lost codicil, cunningly tied to the bar of the bedstead leg. That paper was found folded neatly, and resting on the ledge formed by the bar where it meets the bed-post. As his lordship lay in bed it was his delight to withdraw the will from its hiding place (he could do so easily), and either dwell with satisfaction on its contents or else make any slight alterations that pleased him. It was the poor man's only hobby. As the missing codicil contained legacies and bequests to a very large amount, its ultimate production caused a great deal of excitement.

Chatsworth, the home of the Duke of Devonshire, has lately been the scene of a romantic discovery of a lost will. Mr. William Chester, the duke's head gardener, died suddenly seven years ago, leaving an estate exceeding $25,000. No will could be found, and a nephew and cousin in Australia successfully claimed and received the money, although it was known that Mr. Chester—a man of eighty—had promised to provide for his housekeeper, Miss Prince.

The affair was forgotten until recently. Mr. Jennings, the present head gardener, and his clerk, Mr. Shimwell, were engaged in a rat-hunt in the gardener's office. Mr. Shimwell stood on a pair of steps to place the rat-trap in a recess over the door, and in doing so he slipped. He clutched at the edge of the ceiling, which gave way, and down came a cloud of dust—and a document. This proved to be the properly-attested will of Mr. Chester, bequeathing the whole of his property unconditionally to Miss Prince.

Mr. Jennings was at once convinced of the genuineness of the will, and, after making a copy, he handed it to Mr. Frank Taylor, the Bakewell solicitor whose firm wound up the estate. The will was witnessed by two of the foremen under the testator. One, William Foster, is dead, but George Rydeant remembers signing the paper, without knowing it was a will.

In sleeping keep the head as low as possible so that the blood may have unimpeded circulation.

TITLES FOR POOR MEN.

Forgotten Heroes Whom No Victoria Cross Adorns.

A short while ago there was a mine explosion near Glasgow. Twenty-six men were in the mine at the time and only three escaped. Those three would also have perished had not a fireman named Charles Riley run to warn them. He then groped into the workings to alarm the others. He was not again seen alive.

Here is a story best told thus curtly. It shines enough in its own plain epic. Twice the passion to live must have sweated the soul of Charles Riley; once when he saw the first smoke, again when he had warned his nearer mates and could have escaped as they did. But he went on, into flames that "raged like a furnace"; and when they found the shell of him one of the search party cried, "That man's wife ought to receive the Victoria Cross."

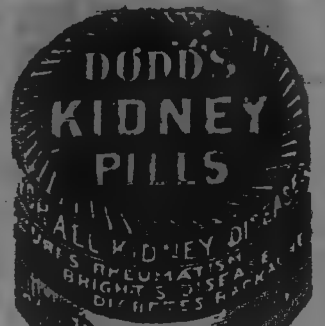
Who will not chime to the exclamation? Who will not agree that the bravest deed in the limelight of war's frenzy is paled by those hot heroisms of industrialism's stunning disasters? What is too much of honor to give these unfleshed soldiers who will run to death on a summons that need not be obeyed, whose only court-martial is a man's inner love of his fellows?

Charles Riley is not the only man of the mine who has acted this utmost knighthood of self-sacrifice. There is scarce ever a mining disaster that does not anneal in its crucible of agony some such swift-tempered hero. Here, indeed, is the coat-of-arms of democracy, the emblazonment of the great brotherhood of labor, this last sacrifice for mateship that some of them will always run to make in the face of ugly death. It happens again and again in the engine-room, in the chemical vat, the smouldering magazines, the rank well, and the lethal sewer. Sometimes the hero is unscatched; sometimes he is brought out maimed or poisoned—always, after his fleeting day in print, his name and his deed are forgotten by the world.

And so, thinking of Charles Riley, archetype of all that pale array of the forgotten dauntless, I ask why there is no title of honor for poor men who so enrich the greatness of our common humanity, a title that will be theirs for life if they survive, a wife's or eldest son's for life if they perish? If we have no title available, surely we can coin a new one? All titles must have at some time come hot from the mint. Anyway we should label our caste of heroes.

The Victoria Cross is, properly enough, reserved for the services, and everyone knows that the gainer of it has the right to the most coveted title in all the world, the letters "V.C.," after his name. But the medals and ribbons of the brave civilian carry no such lustre, though his deed be of the utmost bravery. There is, moreover, a [illegible] of all our British social ranks [illegible] men do not wear decorations in private life. So the awards of the civilian hero are hidden in his drawer, and the honor and fame of his deed repose only in the memory of his little world of workmates and neighbors.

It may be argued that true democracy has no reverence for titles of any sort. So cries (yet in his heart does not believe) the sea-green Socialist incorruptible. But true democrats, like all other men, must honor the holders of titles because the very existence of titles is a symbolism of man's aspiration for ascension. Not snobbery nor servility but a recondite virtue makes the yeoman doff his hat to the noble. For he is doffing his hat to himself.



Gladstone's Nickname.

Lord Gladstone, the Governor-General of South Africa, who has been so greatly criticized on account of his action in permitting imperial troops to be used during the recent riots on the Rand, is now fifty-seven years of age. At Eton he was nicknamed "Tuppence" on account of twopence being remitted off the income tax by his father, the G.O.M., the year Herbert first went to that classic school. That cognomen has stuck to him through life and to his intimates the Governor-General of South Africa is still known as "Tuppence."

When a boy Lord Gladstone was said to have been keenly interested in politics and in history, but he did not particularly distinguish himself in classics, but he was second to none at cricket. He was very sturdily built when a boy of sixteen, with a fine muscular development, and was an excellent gymnast. His love for the country and its pursuits even at a very early age was quite extraordinary, and besides being a first-rate shot, he knew a great deal about forestry and loved every corner of the beautiful Hawarden Park. Of animals "Tuppence" was very fond. One of his earliest deals in live stock was the purchase of a retriever puppy from the Home for Lost Dogs, at Battersea, which lived for many years, and became a very valuable dog, for which he was offered $100. Music was always a great delight to him, and he had plenty of pluck and wonderful animal spirits and always viewed the world generally through rose-colored spectacles.

Not All Blank.

"How about this shooting?"

"My client's mind is blank, judge. That ought to be sufficient excuse to get him off."

"I might consider it if the cartridges had been blank too."—Kansas City Journal.

Fear and Danger.

Nervous Old Lady (to deck hand on steamboat)—Mr. Steamboatman, is there any fear of danger? Deck Hand (carelessly)—Plenty of fear, ma'am, but not a bit of danger.

Anxiety never yet successfully bridged over any chasm.—Ruffini.

Walking Sticks.

"Does the use of a walking stick really spoil the actor's stage balance?" questions a correspondent. "In a stick shop in the Western Road, Brighton, I have noticed a quotation from a medical writer saying that the use of a properly made walking stick 'improved the carriage and tended to uprightness of body.' The fault of most walking sticks is that they are too short and tend to make one stoop. Our ancestors used sticks several inches taller than we do. I have one formerly used by a famous London physician that is nearly as long as a pilgrim's staff, and a few years ago the feminine parasol had a stick some four feet high."—London Chronicle.

Her Forebodings.

"Why are you worrying, dear?" he asked after they had got things settled in their cunning little bungalow.

"I was just thinking that if you turn out to be as great as I expect you to be and we have any children, they will have to take their places among the idle rich."—Chicago Record-Herald.

GIBSON — WEDLOCK

KEENE, Oct. 17— A pretty wedding was celebrated Wednesday evening, Oct. 15th., at the home of William Wedlock, in the western part of the village, when his daughter, Miss Margaret Wedlock became the bride of Mr. Joseph Gibson of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. K. Edmison, pastor of the Methodist Church, Keene, in the presence of twenty-five guests; the wedding march was played by Miss Laura McFarlane. Miss Lillie Montgomery acted as flower girl. The bride was dressed in a beautiful gown of white satin and married under an arch of evergreens and astors.

A great many beautiful presents were received; the groom's present to the flower girl was a gold bracelet and to the pianiste a leather glove and handkerchief case.

Mr Walter Belleghem is in Toronto to-day on business.

Mr. D. Baldwin of St. Thomas is a guest at the Oriental.

Mrs W. Spilsbury, accompanied by her grand-daughter, Miss Edna Jackson, left this morning on the 4 37 C.P.R. for Shelburne, to visit her niece, Mrs. W. Fowler, formerly of this city. Upon their return home they will visit friends in Hamilton adn Toronto.

John Pollock, the G.T.R. flagman at Brock street, was in Belleville yesterday attending the funeral of his brother-in-law, Mrs. Peter Johnson.

THE CHILDREN'S-AID SOCIETY AND THE NEGLECTED CHILDREN

Tag Day Saturday October 18

The distinctive aim of a Children's Aid Society is first of all to seek to improve the condition of children in their own homes, by encouraging, or if need be, warning parents of their responsibility toward their children. Then where necessary to receive the guardianship of children found destitute or committed by proper authority. It is worthy of note that the powers of the Society are rarely abused, and the moral tone of thousands of homes has been greatly improved by its intervention. None can tell how much this means in the sum total of human happiness but years to come will see useful lives develop that otherwise would have been wrecked before they had crossed the harbor bar of youth.

Under the provision of the Act all children coming under the guardship of a Society are required to be placed in foster homes as soon as possible, and here another field of Christian activity is opened up. No better work can be done by a childless couple than to take one of these little boys or girls and give them an assured place in the community. A child placed in a public institution still remains homeless in the real sense and it cannot be given that affection, sympathy and individual treatment so essential for its proper growth. A home for every homeless child is the ideal towards which we, the officers, of the Children's Aid Society strive, and the day ought not to be far distant when this will be an accomplished fact in Ontario. The conditions are made so simple that all who are willing to help in this way can do so, and the joyous presence of a child in the home is the surest remedy for loneliness or lack of interest in life. Some hesitate lest the child should turn out badly, but the great majority do well and even though there should be apparent failure the good seed sown in youth will not be finally lost.

Remember you can help forward this worthy movement on Saturday.

REMEMBER TAG DAY.

WORKMAN WAS BURNED IN ASPHALT PREPARATION VAT

A workman at the asphalt paving machine stationed on Bethune street was seriously burned about the feet, hands and face last evening as a result of falling into one of the vats containing the boiling pitch or asphalt, being prepared for the new pavement.

Apparently the man had forgotten that he had left the flange open and on walking around the edge of the vat he fell into the tank.

Fortunately the man's clothes saved him from being more seriously burned. The heat was about 200 degrees. Had he fallen in this morning, he would have been burned to a crisp.

Dr. Eastwood has the case at St. Joseph's Hospital.

The injured man is Frederick Hingerford of Lindsay.

AT LAST!

The introduction of asphalt on Hunter street this morning, was witnessed by a large delegation of some of our prominent business men and as usual the City Council had a fair representation on hand.

When a recipe calls for a cupful of anything it means a half pint— an ordinary cup filled level.

GOOD TIDINGS IN THE REPORT OF BAPTIST FOREIGN MISSION BOARD

Receipts Did Not Come up to Expectations and Expenditures Were Large but There Were Wonderous Results in the Foreign Fields

The receipts of the Canadian Baptist Foreign Mission Board did not come up to expectations and this fact along with other unforseen expenditures brought about a deficit. When this information was given to the delegates at Murray Street Baptist Church yesterday afternoon, several of the delegates asked for further information, but after a number of speakers had expressed their views on the question, the gathering gave almost unanimous support to the adoption of the report.

Thos Urquhart, ex-mayor of Toronto was loudly applauded for his remarks. He referred to the wondrous spiritual results of the work in India as shown in the report, and said that they were of more importance than the increase in the cost of administration.

1155 BAPTISMS

The Board which comprises the whole of Canada has missionaries in India Bolivia and South America. During the past year, there have been 1155 baptisms in the foreign fields, the largest number in the history of the Board. There are about four and a half millions of people to be evangelized by the Board's missionaries.

The amount required for new stations, education, expansion and manning the stations is $359,300 of which $100,000 will be supplied from India During the next four years, $386,000 ought to be spent in new buildings and other work in for the missions in India.

The financial statement covering fourteen months, showed receipts of $130,467.31, of which $81,317.48 came from Ontario and Quebec. The sum of $11,390.30 was given to special purposes thus the net income was $119,977.01. The receipts from all sources fell $26,000 below the budget The membership of the Church in India is 9,237. Rev. Rufus Sandford D.D., and Mrs. Geo. Churchill have completed forty years of continuous missionary service. Rev. R. R. McKay, B.A., of Ottawa, has been appointed a field secretary of the Board.

The giving of the native churches in India, increased 56 per cent during the year.

The report of the treasurer showed that the deficit now stands at about $29,000.

EVENING SESSION.

Rev. H. Bryant led the song service.

Rev. T. E. Richards, B.A., of Brantford conducted the devotional exercises

Rev M. A. McLean, M.A., of Calgary, Alta., gave an eloquent and heart stirring address on Western Missions. "The man whom God can use" was his subject.

Mr. Asa Huycke contributed a solo.

NOMINATING COMMITTEE.

The report of the Nominating Committee recommended that the following names for the Committee on Resolutions:

Dr. Sullivan, Dr. Carkner, A. B. Foster, D. D. E. Thomson, Dr. A. A. Cameron, A. McNee, Rev. W. E. Hindson.

MORNING SESSION.

At the morning session Rev. John MacNeil, B.A., Vice-President, was in the chair.

After prayer by Rev. O. C. Elliott, Rev J. H. Farmer, B.A., LL.D., of McMaster University, addressed the convention on "The New Testament or Protestant Doctrine of Salvation."

THE ADDRESS.

He first of all discussed Rom. 21-26, which is regarded as the keystone of Protestant doctrine. He said that the passage contained the essence of St. Paul's teaching. The forgiveness of sin is made possible by the death of Christ, and the Holy Spirit works in the believer to complete salvation body, soul and spirit. "God was in Christ reconciling the world unto Himself."

Peters says that we are redeemed by the precious blood of Christ, and other apostles agree in Paul in respect to the Lamb of God that taketh away sin. The Protestant doctrine emphasizes justification by faith. To-day there were voices calling us from the old teaching. "Back to Christ" must be the cry, but it must be the Christ of the Gospels rather than the whole New Testament which these theologians refer to. They have endeavored to get rid of "a bloody gospel."

The gospel introduces us to Jesus when He is thirty years of age, and one-third of the material is concerned with passion week. Great emphasis is given to the death of Jesus. A passing reference to the baptism of Jesus made it clear that Christ in that act had confessed that He had taken the sins of men voluntarily. John was impressed and God approved and broke the eternal silence with "This is my beloved Son."

The death of Jesus is not the death of a martyr according to the gospels. He approached death with horror. The cross is the explanation of that horror, when the darkness came down and Jesus cried in His agony, "My God, why hast Thou forsaken me." The death of Christ was propitiatory and expiatory, and "as Christ died for us, we must die for our brethren, that is the whole gospel."

It was a noble, scholarly and tender utterance and made a deep impression.

Rev. Dr. Sullivan at the close led the convention in prayer.

WESTERN MISSIONS.

The fifth annual report of the Western Mission Board wa sread and moved by Rev. W. B. Tighe, B.A. This showed that in Manitoba there are 13,000 Baptists, in Saskatchewan 18,000, in Alberta 19,000, in British Columbia 17,000.

Non-English churches are established amongst Germans, Scandinavians, Russians and Ruthenians and Hungarians. Colleges are located at Brandon, Man.; Calgary, Alta. and Summerland, B.C. The Western churches are this year giving $12 500 to India and Bolivia missions, $1,000 to Grand Ligne, and $18,400 to non-English work at home, a total of $31,900 for Foreign Missions.

The report was seconded by Rev. W. E. Hindson, of Guelph.

TREASURER'S STATEMENT.

The Treasurer's statement shows receipts of $23,339.33, of which $19,077.86 were from churches, and the balance from Sunday schools and individuals, &c. The disbursements were $23,312.97, leaving a balance of $26.35

CHURCH EDIFICE.

The report of the Church Edifice Board was presented by Rev. W. F. Roadhouse, the Secretary. The special mission of the Board is to aid in chapel building. The total receipts for the year were $6,897.94, while the disbursements were $6,951.35, leaving a deficit on year's work of $53.41. The adoption of the report was moved by Edmund Burke, Esq., of Toronto, and seconded by Rev. James Strachan, of Galt.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To The Editor of The Review,

Dear Sir— While approving Mayor Bradburn's appeal to the practical sympathy of citizens on Tag Day, let me suggest that the influence of the Children's Aid Society and the ladies referred to, be used toward enforcement of the Curfew Law, as a means to lessen the number of children likely to become subjects for the shelter of the jail.

Why not demand that enforcement of this law begin at the resorts where cigarette smoking, foul language and rowdy behaviour are practiced nightly? Children found at such a resort night or day are "neglected children." Their interests require at least that protection the curfew law is designed to give. Why not enforce the law?

Yours truly,

"PRACTICAL SYMPATHY"

To the Editor of the Review,

Sir,—Will you allow me a line in which to emphasize the appeal of His Worship, the Mayor, on behalf of the Children's Aid.

Both officially and personally I have had frequent occasion to note the good work of this Society in looking after some of God's little ones. Surely at this Thanksgiving time there is no better way of giving thanks for manifold blessings received than by sharing them to some extent with others. Emmerson says: "Man was born not for prosperity alone, but to give and suffer for others like the noble rock maple which bleeds and gives its sweetness for the service of man." So and only does the giver attain his best. Again, the little children, orphaned or worse, need help, and that is the best reason for giving it. Further, if we do not pay now to support and make good citizens of them, those who come after us will have to maintain prisons and asylums for their correction and reformation.

May we hope that all previous records will be broken by Tag Day of 1913.

E. C. S. HUYCKE.

REV. DR. NORTON, PRESIDENT | NEW OFFICERS OF CONVENTION | REV. J. R. WEBB, VICE-PRESIDENT

OVER THREE HUNDRED REGISTRATIONS SINCE OPENING OF BAPTIST CONVENTION

New Officers Are Elected—Secretary-Treasurer is Returned to Office.

MR. A. A. AYER,
Of Montreal, the retiring President of the Convention.

There was a full attendance of delegates at this morning's session, in anticipation of hearing Rev. Dr. Sullivan's address. Many strangers were present along with ministers of other denominations.

The Secretary was gratified to reported that over three hundred delegates ha dregistered since the beginning of the convention.

Rev. B. D. Thomas led the devotional exercises.

The expository address was delivered by Rev. Jos. Sullivan, M.A., D.D., pastor of Olivet Baptist Church, Montreal, whose subject was "The Roman Catholic Doctrine of Salvation." Dr. Sullivan was once a Roman Catholic but has been 20 years a Baptist minister.

He said that one has to be very careful of the sources of the authority when stating the views held by the Roman Catholic Church. Even in quoting Cardinal Gibbons' book, "The Faith of our Fathers," we must remember that even Cardinal Gibbons has no authority to speak for the church. The priest is apt to say things that do not entirely represent the teaching of the church.

The Roman Catholic Church says that private judgment has to be left in abeyance and the individual bow to authority.

The Roman Authorities' teaching respecting the need of salvation is based on the nature of man. The best R.C. theologians consider that man was created a neutral being capable of good or bad, according to the influences exerted.

The Church endorses the dire condition of man by nature. She brings home most strongly to the conscience and hearts of her people a great sense of sin. The Church takes all the scriptures that describes the terrible condition of man by nature, and consequently every Roman Catholic has an appalling sense of sin. Even Luther himself had it, and it never left him. The ground of salvation, according to the Roman Church, is the death of Jesus Christ. On this point Protestants can strike hands with them. One of the most solemn hours in the service of the Catholic Church is when the Eucharist is elevated and the priest says: "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world." The application of this gospel is where we come to the parting of the ways. This application that all that Christ has done for us is entirely sacramentarian.

There are seven of these sacraments: Baptism, Holy Eucharist, Matrimony, &c. Infant baptism is claimed to remove original sin. The child when it comes to years of discretion begins to sin on its own.

The sacraments in the hands of the church are the means of the application of salvation. In the last analysis salvation is in the hands of the church. She has usurped the place of Jesus Christ.

When a man dies the purgatorial fires are efficacious in applying salvation, but even this is in the hands of the Church.

In the Roman Catholic Church salvation is a thing that no one can be sure of. The doctrine of "intention" makes null and void every act of the individual, whether he be a priest or layman. A man may be in the state of grace to-day, and by reason of some sin in the pit of hell to-morrow.

In contrast to all this the New Testament teaches that we are to trust the Saviour and to entrust ourselves into His hands.

"I would not give a snap of my fingers for a salvation that will not carry me through thick and thin," said Dr. Sullivan.

He closed with the words, "Thanks be to God for His unspeakable gift." There is no salvation in works of righteousness, but only in Jesus Christ—not a priest, whether Roman or Protestant, but only in Him.

It was the address of a man who realized the seriousness of the subject, and there was nothing in either his words or his attitude which any fair-minded Catholic could take exception to. He said that he often had Roman Catholics in his congregation, and they were amazed at his moderation.

FRIDAY'S SESSION.

At the afternoon session the report of the Senate and Board of Governors of McMaster University was presented by Prof. W. S. McLay, M.A., Dean in Arts. This showed that the enrolment in Arts was 272, in Theology 49. Deducting students registered twice, the net enrolment stands at 310. In Woodstock College there were 149 students, and in Moulton College 157. These are the academic departments of the University. The affiliated Colleges, Brandon and Okanagan registered in arts 69 students and 42 respectively. The total enrolment at McMaster and the enrolment in undergraduate courses in Arts are the largest in the history of the University. Fifty-four women are in attendance, two of them being students in theology. The graduating class is the largest on record. One students has been offered two fellowships and one assistantship. Two students obtained fellowships in the University of Illinois, making seven fellows from McMaster in that institution.

The churches are taking greater interest in Christian Education, contributions having increased 510 per cent in five years. The special session was attended by 91 pastors last May and was a great success. When the financial stringency has passed it is proposed to enter upon a canvass for funds for the purpose of erecting new University buildings upon a site already secured at a cos. of $125,000.

The financial statement shows that receipts more than balance expenditures. The expense of keeping up McMaster University during the year is $66,436.98; Moulton College, $33,608.01, and Woodstock College, $35,836.90. The Forward Movement Fund shows of $90,301.83, of which $25,000 has been paid on account of new site. The general summary shows that there is a bank balance at the credit of the University of $53,343.00. Receipts from all sources were $143,212.43.

The adoption of the report was moved by Dr. D. E. Thomson, who has been on the Board for 32 years, most of the time being its chairman. His address was a strong plea for liberal education. The report was seconded by James Ryrie, Esq., Toronto, who stated that the aim of Baptist educational work is to provide leadership in the Christian work of the denomination. Baptists should not be afraid to put something into educational work if they expect to get satisfactory results. Dr. Farmer said that parents should train their children to look forward to the ministry as the noblest calling in which they can engage.

The report was then adopted.

The following were elected to the Board: Messrs. E. C. Fox, B.A.; John Firstbrook, Jas. Ryrie, all of Toronto, and J. K. McDermid, London.

NEW OFFICERS.

Following were elected as officers of the convention for the ensuing year:

Rev. W. E. Norton, D.D.—President.

Rev. J. R. Webb—1st Vice-President.

Jas. Ryrie, Esq.—2nd Vice-President.

Rev. D. E. MacLeod—Secretary-Treas.

The President-Elect returned thanks for the honor conferred upon him.

The Social Service Committee's report was read by Rev. W. C. McLean, B.A., Toronto, showed that the committee during the year has heartily co-operated with other bodies interested in social service, and than advanced legislation has been secured to suppress the white slave traffic.

EVENING SESSION.

After song service conducted by Rev. H. Bryant, Rev. A. J. Vining, College St. Baptist Church, Toronto, read the scriptures and led in prayer. Mr. Jas. Ryrie, one of the new vice-presidents of the Convention, was in the chair. Rev. F. J. Sawers, rector of St. Luke's Church, conveyed in a few very felicitous words the greetings of the Peterborough Ministerial Association.

Invitations were received from Owen Sound and Dovercourt Road Church, Toronto, for the convention meet next year. The matter was referred to the Executive Committee.

Rev. Dr. Norton, President-elect, spoke on the subject of "Education." His special theme was Christian Leadership. All the great movements and achievements in the world are based upon the leadership of a few individuals. In business and political life is honest, capable leadership The-

MEMORIAL GIFT FOR KNOX CHURCH

Donors Are Mr. and Mrs. Christian Kruger

At the close of the service in Knox church to-morrow morning, conducted by Rev. Prof. Farmer, LL.D., of McMaster University, the congregation will receive a handsome memorial gift in the form of an Individual Communion Service. The donors are Mr. and Mrs. Christian Kruger. The minister and session will receive the gift in the name of the people. The cabinet in which the set will be kept bears the inscription: "Presented to Knox Church by Mr. and Mrs. Christian Kruger as a Memorial, October 19, 1913. This do in remembrance of Me."

In the evening, Rev. Dr. Thomas, one of the most celebrated of the Baptist preachers, will preach.

MISSION BAND ENTERTAINMENT

St. John's Junior Mission Band gave an entertainment and sale, in the school hall last night.

The proceeds will be used to purchase kneelers, which the young people are presenting to St. George's Church.

United States Will Not Have Mrs. Pankhurst

TO BE DEPORTED

Canadian Press Despatch

NEW YORK, Oct. 18.—Mrs. Pankhurst was ordered deported by the United States Immigration Department in a little over three hours after her steamer arrived this morning. On her landing to-day she was taken before a special Board of Inquiry, [illegible]

CHANCELLOR INSTALLED

Rev. Dr. Bowles Assumes New Office at Victoria University.

TORONTO, Oct. 18.—A most impressive ceremony was witnessed at the Convocation Hall of the University of Toronto last night when Rev. Richard Pinch Bowles, M.A., D.D., LL.D., was installed as President and Chancellor of Victoria University. The building was filled to its capacity with students and the general public, and the platform presented a brilliant spectacle with the variegated colors of the hoods of the dignitaries of the affiliated colleges.

Dr. Carman, the venerable superintendent of the Methodist Church, presided, and after the invocation Dean Wallace of Victoria read a portion of Scripture. This was followed by a most impressive prayer by Rev. J. W. Graham, B.A., D.D.

Chancellor Bowles, in the course of his inaugural address, thanked the faculties for the welcome they had accorded him, and the students for their expressions of loyalty and co-operation, and pledged himself to give his best services to Victoria.

An eloquent tribute to the life and work of Chancellor Burwash was voiced by Rev. S. D. Chown, who in the course of his remarks declared that the ordinary man has as his ideal the creation of a profound influence for good upon one generation, the retiring Chancellor of Victoria University has made a lasting impression upon no less than three generations of Canadians.

Ex-Chancellor Burwash in welcoming the new Chancellor spoke of the new opportunities which were opening out before the younger generation. There was a vast work still to be done, and he was confident that the younger men could rely on the encouragement, support and liberality of the Methodist people.

VATICAN ORDERS INQUIRY INTO MIXED MARRIAGES

MRS. EMMELINE PANKHURST

She cannot enter the United States. Deportation is ordered

Matches Result In Tragedy.

CORNWALL, Oct. 18.—Wallace J. Robertson, the seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Robertson of Cornwall, is dead, as the result of burns received Thursday. The parents of the boy went to the barn to milk the cows, leaving the children asleep in bed. The younger lad wakened, started playing with matches and set his night clothes on fire. His screams attracted his parents, who hurried to the rescue, but the unfortunate boy was so terribly burned before the flames were extinguished that he succumbed yesterday morning.

Roman Catholic Bishops Ara Asked a Vital Question

Canadian Press Despatch.

MONTREAL, Oct. 18.—News has been received from Rome that an investigation into mixed marriages has been ordered all over the world by the Vatican.

An inquiry is ordered in a letter signed by Cardinal Rampolla in which after six questions designed to elicit the prevalence and effect of mixed marriages in each diocese the vital question is asked—"In your diocese considering particular circumstances would it be convenient in future to favor or oppose mixed marriages?"

An affirmative answer to this question from Canadian Bishops would mean the abrogation of the Ne Temere Decree in Canada.

Will Guarantee Bonds.

EDMONTON, Oct. 18.—Premier Sifton has introduced five resolutions for the further guarantee of the bonds of the Grand Trunk Pacific branch line of the Canadian Northern Railway Co., the Canadian N. W. Co., and the Central Canada Railway Co., and for the construction of light railways through a country not yet served. The Premier said he would give particulars as to the guarantees and the country to be served, when the resolutions were moved on Saturday.

LIEUT.-GOVERNOR GLYNN SWORN IN AS SUCCESSOR TO SULZER

Deposed Executive Declares His Trial Was a Political Lynching

A HORSE THIEF

In Frontier Days Would Have Received Squarer Deal

ALBANY, Oct. 18.—Wm. Sulzer ceased to be governor of the State of New York at noon yesterday. He was removed from office by the High Court of Impeachment, by a vote of 43 to 12, two members not voting.

The verdict of the court was that Sulzer was guilty of falsification, perjury and an attempt to suppress evidence against him. Of all other charges he was acquitted, the court yesterday unanimously voting him not guilty of the four remaining articles of the impeachment not passed upon when it adjourned last night.

By a virtually unanimous vote also, the impeachment tribunal decided that Sulzer should not be punished by disqualification to hold office of honor and trust in this state in the future. This would have been the extreme penalty under the law.

The ousted executive was served with a copy of the verdict of the court at the executive mansion, at a few minutes before six o'clock last night.

"Good, I thank you," he said to the sergeant-at-arms of the Senate, who delivered the document.

"Mr. Sulzer, private citizen," will leave the capitol probably on Sunday—wherefore he has not disclosed.

The outgoing executive issued a statement in which he denounced the tribunal which had removed him as "Murphy's high court of infamy."

Sulzer declared that his trial was a political lynching as far as the Tammanyzed part of the court was concerned—the consummation of a deep laid political conspiracy to oust me from office."

"A horse thief in frontier days," he says, "would have received a squarer deal.

"Had I but served the boss with half the zeal I did the state, William Sulzer would never have been impeached," he said.

MARTIN H. GLYNN.

Glynn Is Governor.

ALBANY, Oct. 18.—Two features unique in the history of New York State marked Lieut.-Governor Martin Glynn's assumption of the office of governor yesterday. He is the first occupant of the executive chair to reach that position by reason of the impeachment of a predecessor, and he was sworn into office by the chief judge of the Court of Appeals.

The constitution oaths of office heretofore have been administered almost without exception by the Secretary of State, or by some attache of his office. When Mr. Sulzer was inaugurated governor last January, he expressed the desire to have Chief Judge Cullen of the Court of Appeals administer the oath. However, the law was looked up, and it was found that no provision specifically gave such power to the head of the highest court in the state. Subsequently, at the suggestion of Governor Sulzer, the Legislature passed a law conferring upon the chief judge of the Court of Appeals power and authority to administer oaths to public officials.

Seven Miners Entombed.

ROCKDALE, Texas, Oct. 18.—Seven of the eight miners caught late on Thursday in the Vogel and Lawrence mine near here, when the roof of the mine caved in and the mine was flooded, are still alive. They are entombed by a water barrier 90 feet below the surface, but are believed to be safe as long as their supply of air holds out. One miner was drowned outright, instead of seven, as reported Thursday night.

LAD'S BODY IS FOUND

Mystery at Madoc May be Solved

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 18.—The death of Miss Minnie Frank, which occurred in Madoc Township on Saturday, Sept. 20, has been recalled by the finding of the body of her adopted brother, Edward Frank, in a discarded mine, near Madoc Village. On the day of the tragedy, the two were at home alone, and when the family returned in the evening, the body of the girl was found in the house, a bullet wound in the heart having caused her death.

At the time, the lad, who disappeared along with the gun, was suspected by many of having committed the crime. Thursday his remains were found and an inquest will be held to determine how he met his death.

ATTITUDE OF THANKFULNESS

We should be thankful at all times, not only on Thanksgiving Day. Every day is Thanksgiving day, for every day we have something to be thankful for.

A great many people, young people as well as old people, seem to think that everybody has got a lot to be thankful for but themselves. And because they are always looking at the blessings of others, they do not see the blessings that lie around them.

There are a great many things to be thankful for. If we cannot find much in our present circumstances and possessions to make us rejoice, we can at least be grateful for things we haven't got.

We can be very thankful if we are not suffering from some incurable disease. That we have all our limbs while some people have to go on crutches. What a fine thing it is to have two eyes and not one, or none!

What a good thing it is to have a mother, a father, a wife, a husband, a brother, a sister, or if you have none of these, then you must have a friend to be thankful for.

He is a poor man who cannot at the end of the day say "thank you" for something. But thankfulness after all does not arise from our physical and material condition. Some invalids and cripples are among the most grateful of souls.

It is an attitude toward life as a whole, and is the opposite to cynicism and impatience. You need to have a big vision in order to be truly and always thankful.

BERNARD SHAW AND SUICIDE

A man who committed suicide in Montreal blamed Bernard Shaw as being the cause of his rash act. It seems he had been studying that author's works and the Shawvian philosophy had proved too much for him.

Supposing it could be proved that Shaw's writings were directly the cause of this man's mind being unhinged, would it not be within the law to prosecute Shaw as a purveyor of deleterious literature?

Reading has more influence in life than many of us realize. And with the enormous increase in influence of the printed page must come a greater responsibility upon those who make and sell this mental pabulum.

Of course what is one man's food is another man's poison, and while Shaw's writings may have but a stimulating effect upon some minds, they may absolutely upset another man's mental equilibrium.

We have submitted this problem to a very broad-based intellectual Englishman in this office and he endeavoured to solve it by propounding another. "If," said he, "I were to get angry with you and strike you a blow upon the head, and you having a weak skull the blow unfortunately killed you, and I were charged with murder, I might justly claim that the blow was not intended to kill you, but merely to force into your thick head (I supposing it to be thick) some fact or doctrine that might be of importance to your welfare."

"But," said we, "what right have you to go about clubbing people over the head? In the case of this suicide the man had possibly paid Bernard Shaw or his publisher $1.25 for being clubbed in this way. If the man had known that Shaw was a dangerous literary footpad who went about clubbing innocent wayfarers to test the solidity of their skulls then he might have evaded him."

The moral of this is that all new books should be labelled like an apothecary labels his drugs, as "tonics," "sleeping draught," "intoxicant," "poison," "deadly poison," and so forth. But this would make it necessary for the creating of literary doctors or possibly brain specialists could cover the work by carefully testing the capacity of readers' skulls.

WANT GRAIN TRADE.

Marine Men Say They Can Handle Traffic This Year.

OTTAWA, Oct. 18.—A deputation of the officers and members of the Dominion Marine Association, representing practically all the Canadian marine interests on the great lakes, waited on Hon. Geo. E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, and Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine, yesterday and discussed with them important matters relating to the autumn grain movement, water carriage rates on the lakes, American competition, grain storage facilities, lifesaving appliances on vessels, and other matters.

The deputation strongly urged that the recent increase in the tonnage of the Canadian-owned vessels on the lakes was sufficient to handle the western grain crop movement at reasonable rates, and that there should be this autumn no repetition of the action taken by the Government last year in suspending the coastal trade regulations so as to permit American vessels to enter into the Canadian coastal trade and carry off more than their fair share of the grain cargoes.

Hon. Mr. Foster intimated that the Government, in view of the improved conditions, did not anticipate that it would be necessary to rescind the coastal regulations again this year.

The deputation told the Ministers that if there was to be a suspension of the coastal regulations by Canada there should also be a reciprocal and compensating suspension by the United States in favor of the Canadian marine. Emphasis was laid on the necessity for improved grain storage facilities at Canadian ports, especially at Montreal, where the chief difficulty now lay in regard to securing even terms for the Canadian route for grain export, as compared with the Buffalo and New York route.

Seeks Wolfe's Relics.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Mr. A. D. Wolfe Aylward, of Farley, Westerham, Kent, is trying to trace a Bible, on a blank page of which, written with his own blood by himself, General James Wolfe, conqueror of Quebec, prior to leaving England, expressed certain views and convictions concerning the arduous campaign upon which he was about to enter.

Mr. Aylward, who is about to publish a record of Wolfe relics, states that the Bible was in possession of Edward Wolfe Burcher (Wolfe second cousin, who died in 1827.)

Nicaragua Cities Shaken.

SAN JUAN DEL SUR, Nicaragua, Oct. 18.—Violent continuous earthquakes yesterday shook the cities of Managua, Masaya and Granada, where the alarmed populations have deserted their houses and are sleeping in the public squares and open spaces. One house collapsed in Jalta, a suburb of Granada, and it is feared that more will fall.

The tremors coincide with the activity of the volcano of San Diego.

NEW C.P.R. LINERS

Next season will see the Atlantic service of the C.P.R. augmented by the addition of two new steamers, which will make St. John their winter port of call. These two vessels will be of the one class cabin type, which are becoming so popular. Barclay Curle & Company, of Glasgow, secured the contract for the building of the ships some months ago, and the construction is well under way. They are being specially constructed for the Atlantic service and will contain every possible convenience for the comfort of passengers. Their length will be 520 feet, greatest breadth 64 feet, while the breadth of the passenger deck will be 41 feet. Each vessel will have a capacity for 520 second-class passengers and 1,200 third-class, while the dead weight capacity will be 7,950 tons, with an approximate cargo capacity for 6,000 tons. The famous cruiser stern, which is the feature of the new Empress, recently placed on the Pacific coast, is being introduced, and the new ships will also have six complete steel decks. In order to ensure safety the hulls are to be subdivided by water-tight doors and bulkheads, so as to be capable of floating when three compartments are open. These water-tight bulkheads and doors will be automatically controlled from the bridge. The speed of each vessel will be 18 knots, of 27.5. As for the interior of the vessels, each second-class state room will be fitted with a wardrobe and chest of drawers, folding lavatory with mirror, and other conveniences. The public rooms will be dining saloon, smoking room, lounge and drawing room. The refrigerating plant will be capable of making 300 lbs. of ice per eight hours. The vessel will be heated and ventilated on the thermotank system changing the air eight times each hour. There will also be a printing plant on board each vessel. 66

BAILIEBORO BOY APPOINTED COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE

Word comes from Winnipeg of the appointment of Mr. Fred W. Kerr of the Department of Agriculture, Manitoba to that of Commissioner of Agriculture from the Province of Manitoba to Great Britain. As Mr. Kerr has been prominently identified with this department for some time, he is no doubt well fitted to fill so important a position in the Old Land. Mr. Kerr is a native of Bailieboro being a son of Mr. J. J. Kerr, formerly of that place, but now of Souris, Man., and is a grandson of the late Mr. John Kerr, of Bensfort. He is also a nephew of Mrs. (Dr.) Marshall, of this city. He will remove shortly to Bristol, England, where he will reside, and where his numerous friends both in Ontario and in the West will wish him every success in his new field of labor.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotation in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—Huge stocks of wheat in Europe, leaving no apparent outlet for Canadian shipments unless the marketing be done this side of the border, kept prices today on the down-grade. After an unusually active session, and violent fluctuations, the close was nervous, 3-8 to 5-8c net lower. Corn was down 1-2 to 5-8c, oats 1-8 to 1-4c, and provisions 2 1-2 to 7 1-2c.

Liverpool close of wheat was from 1 to 1¼ lower; corn, ¾ to 1⅛ lower.

Caught a Tartar

By SAMUEL E. BRANT

John Riggs and Elmer Burch, two young men of the world, spinning about on an auto tour, stopped one day at a country hotel and, liking the lay of the land, the scenery and more especially the cuisine of the house, concluded to remain for awhile. They soon discovered a small game going on in a room behind the office and went in to look on. They were adepts at the national game of poker, but only played as gentlemen with gentlemen—for pastime and not for the purpose of replenishing their exchequers.

The game they watched was being played by four men, one of whom appeared to be a greenhorn, who was being fleeced by the other three. They had not been playing long, and Riggs saw that the sharpers were permitting the greenhorn to win. When they left the table for supper he was considerably ahead, and the others exacted a promise from him that he would give them their revenge during the evening.

The two young tourists felt sure that if the winner played in the evening the sharpers would contrive that he should lose not only all he had won, but whatever he had to lose besides. Riggs said he should be warned, but Burch suggested that he would not take a warning. Fools like that, he said, couldn't be taught wisdom. The only way he could be taught a lesson was to win his money from him, then hand it back to him with a lecture on trusting persons he didn't know.

After supper, while the two were smoking on the piazza, the greenhorn came out, and they began to chat with him. Burch said to him that he had watched his poker game and was surprised at his skill. Riggs chimed in. The result of the talk was that they invited him to cut the men with whom he had been playing and join them in a game in their rooms. The fellow seemed indisposed to deny the sharpers their revenge and asked the friends if they thought he had a right to do so.

"Certainly," said Burch. "Every sitting at poker stands for itself. If these men had won your money they would not have played again with you unless they wanted to. Isn't that so?" he added, turning to his friend.

Riggs confirmed his opinion, and the three men adjourned to a room upstairs and sat down for a game.

For half an hour the greenhorn was permitted to win with ease. He played a very poor game, but the two friends failed to bet on their good hands and always bet on their poor ones. When they had let their opponent win about $50 they changed their tactics and won it all back again. The greenhorn pulled out a roll of crisp ten dollar bills, manifesting an intention to buck against his adversaries for all he was worth.

The friends glanced at each other knowingly. The little game they were playing interested them. They were not used to spending their time without amusement, and they were getting all they wanted. The greenhorn played even worse than before, and, losing his money, he became excited and lost his head completely. One after another his beautiful banknotes passed into the hands of his opponents. A thousand dollars of his had gone into their keeping and he was diving into his pockets for more when Riggs stopped him. Putting his hand on the greenhorn's arm gently, he said:

"My friend, don't get out any more money. We brought you up here tonight to save you from those sharpers with whom you were playing before dinner. If you had joined them tonight they would have had this money instead of us. They would have kept it. We are going to return it."

The man gaped at them as though he could not understand what they were driving at. Presently he asked:

"How do you know those fellows I played with are sharpers?"

"We could see them 'playing you.'"

"And you're going to give me back all the money I've lost to you without my winning it?"

"We are."

The greenhorn grasped the hand of each of the friends promptly.

"I'm mighty glad of it. Do you know this money I've lost wasn't mine. It belongs to a dear little child for whom I am guardian."

When the man had finished his expressions of gratitude the settling up came. The money was put in a pile on the table, and the greenhorn was told to help himself to what he had lost. There was old money, as well as the new bills he had brought out.

"I'll take the ragged stuff, gentlemen," he said, "and leave you the clean money."

Pocketing the ragged stuff, he grasped his benefactors' hands again, thanked them with moist eyes and withdrew.

The next morning the friends looked for him, but did not see him. Nor were the sharpers about, either. Burch, needing change, stepped up to the hotel clerk and asked him to break a ten dollar bill. The clerk was about to do so when something about the bill caught his eye.

"By jing," he exclaimed, "if that isn't one of those counterfeit tens some one has been circulating about here lately!"

And it was. The greenhorn had their ragged stuff, and they had his counterfeits.

"I say, John," said Burch, "we warmed a serpent in our bosom, didn't we?"

"You bet."

"No, sir; never again!"

Rideau Hall Not Ready.

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.—Rideau Hall will hardly be in readiness when their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess of Connaught arrive in Ottawa, Oct. 24.

The royal party, however, will have comfortable quarters, and the work will be rushed to completion within a few weeks.

The building presents an entirely new appearance, and both the interior and exterior are greatly improved on their former condition.

Martians Trying to Signal?

LONDON, Oct. 17.—M. Lecontre, a distinguished astronomer of Geneva, is the latest to arrive at the conclusion that the inhabitants of Mars are signalling to this earth. During observations, which lasted seventeen days, the astronomer remarked a series of luminous apparitions of bluish white color like the light of a powerful electric arc lamp. The illuminations which usually lasted several seconds were observed several different nights.

To Address Federation.

HAMILTON, Oct. 17.—Word was received last night from Sir Wilfrid Laurier that he will address the Liberal Federation at a banquet to be held in Hamilton on Nov. 26. Delegates will be present at the meeting from 44 clubs in Ontario, and arrangements are being made to make the Hamilton meeting one of the largest political gatherings ever held there.

THE FALL WEATHER HARD ON LITTLE ONES

Canadian fall weather is extremely hard on little ones. One day it is warm and bright and the next wet and cold. These sudden changes bring on colds, cramps and colic and unless baby's little stomach is kept right the result may be serious. There is nothing to equal Baby's Own Tablets in keeping the little ones well. They sweeten the stomach, regulate the bowels, break up colds and make baby thrive. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Ricciotti Garibaldi Arouses Popular Disfavor In Rome.

ROME, Oct. 17.—The campaign in the general elections which will be held Oct. 26 is waxing warmer, and in some cases political activity has taken the form of violence. The governor, however, has issued orders for the prompt repression of all disturbances.

A meeting of Garibaldians was held yesterday to register a protest against Ricciotti Garibaldi, the only surviving son of the general, because he has given his support to the candidacy of Marquis Di Medici, a nephew of one of the Garibaldian generals, who is also supported by the clericals.

Ricciotti Garibaldi, crippled by old wounds, arrived here yesterday and drove through a hostile gathering. He was attacked by the demonstrators, one of whom struck him with a stick. His assailant was immediately arrested and the police restored order.

Austrians Evade Military Service

VIENNA, Oct. 17.—Samuel Oltmann, the agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co., was arrested yesterday and his office searched by the police, supposedly in connection with the charge brought against the agent of the company in Lemberg, of assisting Austrians to evade their military service by emigrating to Canada without passports. Three employes of the Canadian Pacific in Galicia also have been arrested.

Cod Liver Oil

NA-DRU-CO N D & C C TRADE MARK

Prevents Sickness

Are you one of those thousands who, though apparently well, catch cold easily and often? It's a dangerous condition to tolerate, and one which you can easily prevent by taking two or three bottles of Na-Dru-Co Tasteless Preparation of Cod Liver Oil at once—this Fall.

This pleasant-tasting food-tonic gives tone and vigor to the whole system, and so strengthens lungs and bronchial tubes that they readily throw off the colds which would otherwise take hold of you.

Restores Health

By virtue of its remarkable combination of curative and nutritive properties, Na-Dru-Co Tasteless Cod Liver Oil is one of the very best remedies known for chronic coughs and colds, bronchitis, asthma and catarrh. It is also an excellent reconstructive tonic after fevers, and in diseases such as scrofula and rickets, which are due to constitutional weakness.

Prove its worth by getting a 50c or $1.00 bottle from your Druggist. 307

HELP FOR WORKING GIRLS

Two Girls Tell Story of Their Illness and How They Found Relief.

New Orleans, La.—"I take pleasure in writing these lines to express my gratitude to you. I am only 16 years old and work in a tobacco factory. I have been a very sick girl but I have improved wonderfully since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am now looking fine and feeling a thousand times better."—Miss AMELIA JAQUILLARD, 613 Seventh Street, New Orleans, La.

St. Clair, Pa.—"My mother was alarmed because my periods were suppressed and I had pains in my back and side, and severe headaches. I had pimples on my face, my complexion was sallow, my sleep was disturbed, I had nervous spells, was very tired and had no ambition. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has worked a charm in my case and has regulated me. I worked in a mill among hundreds of girls and have recommended your medicine to many of them."—Miss ESTELLA MAGUIRE, 110 Thwing St., Saint Clair, Pa.

There is nothing that teaches more than experience. Therefore, such letters from girls who have suffered and were restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be a lesson to others. The same remedy is within reach of all.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE BIBLE STUDY ON THE REPORT OF THE SPIES.

—October 12.—Numbers 13:1-3, 17 to 14:25.—

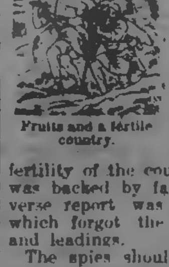
"If God be for us, who can be against us."—Romans 8:31.

THE Israelites' first journey was from Egypt to Mt. Sinai, where they remained about a year. Their second journey began after Miriam had been received back into camp. It led through a barren wilderness, scorched by the sun and very different from Sinai's valleys, in which they had rested. The journey to Kadesh-Barnea, on the border of Canaan, was approximately 160 miles. It was beset with unknown dangers—serpents, wandering bands of Arabs, lack of water, etc. The Israelites, with their cattle, sheep, etc., necessarily traveled slowly. Apparently one or two months were spent on the way, as they arrived at the time of the first ripe grapes—July.

Kadesh-Barnea, their objective point, is a delightful place, well watered. Here they refreshed themselves. Moses then proposed that they forthwith enter Canaan, full of faith in God, who already had manifested His favor toward them in many ways.

But the Israelites were timid. They had no knowledge of war, excepting a little experience with the Amalekites near Mt. Sinai. Their caution overbalanced their faith. They urged Moses to send twelve spies. These apparently were divided under two leaders, Caleb and Joshua. One party went the full length of the land, returning in forty days. The other took a shorter journey, and returned sooner.

The spies were cautious men, and gave a truthful report of the land.



Fruits and a fertile country.

The report of the ten is called evil because they presented the matter from the viewpoint of its difficulties. The report made by Caleb and Joshua is called good because it was encouraging. These two emphasized the favorable features—the fruits, the honey, the fertility of the country. Their report was backed by faith, while the adverse report was backed by fears, which forgot the Divine providence and leadings.

The spies should have considered themselves as a committee on ways and means for entering Canaan, rather than for deciding whether it was possible to enter. The possibilities were already determined by God's promises. Hence Caleb and Joshua left them out of account. If God could deliver them from the Egyptians and the Amalekites, could give them water in the desert and bread from heaven, He could surely fulfil His promise to bring them into possession of Canaan.

The Lesson For Spiritual Israel.

Each Christian has God's invitation to enter into Canaan's rest and to take possession of the promised blessings. He turns his back upon Satan and the world, typified by Pharaoh and the Egyptians. By faith he puts between him and the Adversary a firm resolution for obedience to God, through whose providential leadings he reaches the place of making the covenant.

Thenceforth as a New Creature he journeys on, beset by the trials of the wilderness, until he comes to the position of an advance soldier of the Cross. There he perceives the new life, the good things of which he would at once with faith and courage possess. The people of the land would to him represent the weaknesses and opposition of his fallen flesh. To the extent that he can overcome these he enters and possesses the promised inheritance.

THE CHRISTIAN'S FIGHT WITH SELF

Overcoming evil tendencies.

In studying this lesson, many are perplexed. They say, It seems unreasonable to believe that God gave Moses and the Israelites such a message. Agnostics inquire, Where is the justice of commissioning the Israelites to steal the lands of the Canaanites, and to exterminate the people?

To understand the Bible, we must view it from its own standpoint, and not from that of our creeds formulated in darker days. The Bible is consistent, Godlike, only when viewed in its own light.

First, we must remember that the Bible entirely antagonizes the creeds, which tell us that those slaughtered Canaanites went straight to an eternity of torture. The Bible tells us that all mankind are Adam's children, perishing because of his death sentence. When they die, they are not alive anywhere. They are dead.—Genesis 2:17, margin.

It matters not, therefore, in what way we die. In the case of the Canaanites, God declared that their iniquity had come to the full. That is, Divine Justice determined that for them to live longer would not be to any advantage. They were merely cumbering the ground.

God was making types and shadows of coming blessings. The slaughter of the Canaanites illustrates the destruction of the works of the flesh and the Devil, which God's people accomplished in themselves by fighting the good fight of faith and overcoming the evil tendencies intrenched in their own flesh.

Although God is not bound by Justice to give anybody future life, He has arranged to do so. To this end Christ has already died for the sins of the whole world. Aside from this Divine Plan of redemption the race would have perished. But by God's grace we are to be recovered from the death sentence.

King's Camp Bed.

King George always includes in his luggage when he goes shooting a little folding-up camp bed. For years he used to endure sleeping in the historic "four-poster" especially reserved for him in the royal suite in great mansions, because it had been occupied centuries ago by one of his sovereign forbears. The King at last kicked against the unhygienic distinction with its feather tick and curtains. After domestic morality George V. makes a fetish of hygiene. Even at home in the various palaces he favors the small bed with the hard mattress and insists on his sons doing likewise.

When in the spring he was visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Ward, an old-fashioned housekeeper, who has been in the Ward family for years, thought she would make his Majesty more than usually comfortable, and without saying anything to anyone piled on his bed two feather ticks. She was amazed when a few hours later the King's valet arrived with his luggage and fixed up in the gorgeous room a bed from her point of view so comfortless that she promptly came to the conclusion it was intended for some attendant. "A poor sort of bed," she said, "for a royal servant. Were I to offer it to one of mine, he'd be out of the house in the twinkling of an eye."

First-Born Children Weakest.

Primogeniture has just received another hard knock. It is several years since Dr. W. C. Rivers, of London, in studying the statistics of a great sanitarium, observed that among consumptive patients the first-born provide a larger number of subjects than any of the other children. Prof. Karl Pearson and Profs. Brehmer and Riffel collected a vast mass of statistics in England and Germany and fully confirmed Rivers' observation.

Brehmer had been teaching that the first-born children were the strongest, but he proved that the opposite was true. A medical authority states that not only tuberculosis but "insanity and criminality show a preponderating incidence among the eldest children," and quotes Prof. Pearson's statement that the earlier members of a family are more likely than the younger to inherit constitutional defects. It adds that a tendency to coddle, pamper and indulge the first child may account for a part of its

USELESS THINGS.

Ghosts of the Past That Were Formidable In Their Time.

"An enumeration of the useless," says Richard Jeffries, "would almost be an enumeration of everything hitherto pursued."

Heap up all the books that are of no possible use, the contents of ancient libraries, books of heraldries, theogonies and discarded sciences, books of wrangling and tedious arguments the world has willingly forgot, and the myriads of chaff products that pour like a ceaseless Niagara from the modern press; heap them up into one mountain, and from its top you could look down upon the Himalayas.

Think of the ruined cities of the orient, the ghostly temples of Egypt, the broken fragments of castles by the Rhine and the Danube, the Coliseum, the Golden House of Nero, the Garden of Hadrian at Tivoli! Think of the useless sciences men studied, the faded religions they once believed, the inconsequential wars of history, the reams of antiquated law, the gold gathered together only to be misspent! Think of the useless passions, dreams, thoughts and desires of men!

One is sometimes tempted to think that we front the great questions of life, love and death as freshly, with as little advantage from experience, as the cave man.—Dr. Frank Crane in Woman's World.

In sleeping keep the head as low as possible so that the blood may have unimpeded circulation.

IMPROVEMENTS TO BE MADE ON GRAND TRUNK

Road Between Peterboro and Belleville to Receive Attention

The Grand Trunk Railway have been contemplating the improving of their branch line between here and Belleville, and in the course of a few days steps are to be taken along this line of work. The gravel pit at Blezards is to be opened and more balast used along the road, which will no doubt mean a big improvement.

For years the old line between Madoc and Eldorado has been closed and the steels laying idle. Now these rails will be lifted, and as they are of a heavier type than the rails along the Belleville and Peterborough road, they will be used to improve the roadbed between Belleville and Foxboro, a distance of about eight miles.

In the near future a better class of travelling coaches will be placed in commission.

THE TORTURES OF RHEUMATISM

Driven From the System by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

The sufferer from rheumatism who has not gone about curing himself in the right way must expect a return of the torture with every change to cold or damp weather. It is not the change in the weather that causes the rheumtism, but it does start the aches and pains. Rheumatism is a deep-seated disorder of the blood. You cannot possibly cure it with outward applications or hot fomentations, as so many people in their ignorance of the real cause of the trouble try to do.

Rheumatism can only be driven out of the system by driving out the poisonous acid in the blood. This can only be done by making the blood supply rich, red and pure. It is in this way that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure rheumatism, even after other remedies have failed. These Pills make rich, red blood; they go right to the root of the trouble, and the pains and aches are driven from the system and will not return if the blood supply is kept pure. That is the whole secret of curing rheumatism, and if you are a sufferer begin to cure yourself to-day by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Among the many sufferers from rheumatism who have been cured by this medicine is Miss Mary D. Kelly, South Dummer, Ont. Miss Kelly says: "Some time ago I had a very bad attack of rheumatism. At times I would be confined to bed for a couple of days and would seem almost paralysed with the intense pain in my back and legs. At such times I could not walk and my joints were stiff and swollen. I consulted different doctors and took their medicine, but did not get more than temporary relief. At this time a neighbo radvised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I got a supply. After taking a few boxes I found they were greatly helping me, and I continued their use until the trouble completely disappeared. I can strongly recommend this medicine to others who suffer as I did from the pangs and tortures of rheumatism."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

TWO DIVERSE VIEWS OF CONSECRATION SERVICE

A Correspondent and an Editor State Impressions Growing Out of the service of Consecration Bishop O'Brien

So long as there are bodies and sects there will be radical differences in belief and practice. Especially in matters pertaining to religion and faith. In ritual and observance as well. Every denomination, by its creed or rule, affirms certain things that set it apart and keep it apart from others. This is true of the Catholic, Anglican and other churches.

As a contribution to the literature of the late ceremony of the Consecration of the Bishop of Peterborough, in the Roman Catholic church here, we print two views, one of a correspondent to the Orange Sentinel, and one from the columns of the Catholic Register, written no doubt by the editor, Rev. Father Burke. The Review steps outside its general rule this time, which is that the publication of controversy in religious matters in a secular paper, seldom effects any good end. In such disputes, no conclusion is reached. In no case can one side convince the other—or differences in churches and beliefs would be at an end. The Review believes that a secular newspaper may, by publication of such matters, keep alive a spirit of an animosity and foster ill-feeling in a community. There is quite enough of that sort of thing as it is, without adding fuel to a slumbering fire. Make your own side strong. Let the other side die, is a good axiom, in religion, politics, or personal affairs.

THE JIG WAS UP

(From the Orange Sentinel.)

PETERBORO, Oct. 1—Nothing has ever happened in Peterboro to equal the sensation caused by the exposure of Bishop O'Brien by Rev. J. R. Webb, of the Murray Street Baptist Church. The occasion was one staged with all the pomp and ceremony of which the Catholic Church loves to boast. The papal delegate, Archbishop Bruchesi, Archbishop Spratt, Archbishop McNeil and goodness knows how many common ordinary bishops and priests were there. The city had given itself over to the solemnity of the occasion. The city fathers and the mayor were there. An address was presented by them to the holy fathers. Peace and harmony reigned. The church was herself again.

But, alas! the Rev. Mr. Webb knew Latin. The new bishop knelt before the Supreme Pontiff's representative. In fact, Christ Himself was there—so the faithful believed. But Mr. Webb heard the new bishop who said that he cursed Protestants and Protestantism with all his heart and soul. He said it in Latin, but Mr. Webb knows Latin, and the jig was up. The city fathers and the peace and harmony people look as foolish as the parrot after the cyclone.

So this was the peace and harmony so loudly proclaimed by the new bishop—and after the great procession and the big talk. The like of it will not happen again for a long time.

Mr. Webb says he was glad to have been included in the number receiving cards of admission to the Cathedral for several reasons— because it was a time of rejoicing with a large and respected portion of our community; because some of his own best friends are Roman Catholics; because of the manifest reverence in the sanctuary which might well put Protestants to shame; because in Mr. Webb's opinion the man installed in the exalted office is as worthy of that honor as any man in that ancient church: and lastly, because he was privileged to hear a really great sermon by the Bishop of Calgary.

On the other hand, there were, the preacher said, certain things which might well raise questions in the mind of some of the listeners. It was no surprise to find the entire service in the Latin, but why was this so when the Apostle Paul says "Unless ye utter by the tongue speech easy to be understood by the common people. It was a service for the eye, not for the ear and the mind.

It was rather strange, the preacher said, to see the Mayor and City Aldermen present in their representative capacity listening to the public cursing of the cherished beliefs of the majority of their electors, and more strange to see these same men presenting an engrossed address to the papal delegate, who had to demand this anathema from the bishop-elect. The Roman Catholic Church, he added, should have every attention and courtesy extended to that of other denominations, and no more.

TANGLED WEB.

From the Catholic Record.

(We read in the News that the Rev. J. R. Webb, a Baptist minister, of Peterborough, attended the consecration of Bishop O'Brien, and had much to say in praise of what he saw. Dr. O'Brien, he said, was most worthy of the honor conferred upon him, and the discourse of Dr. McNally "was a really great sermon." He "found much in it that was true and helpful, and he came out of the church a better man for having attended it." Perhaps Mr. Webb should not be blamed for the shallow and meticulous criticism which he makes upon the ritual and conduct of the sacred ceremony of the consecration. They are taken at random out of the stock-in-trade of his class.

One of his worst grievances was that the function was conducted in Latin, and this, he says, was because "it was not intended to be understood by the people." The contention falls to the ground, when it is known that books containing an English translation of every word entered in the ceremony, were distributed to every person in the congregation. Mr. Webb had one of these books, otherwise we should not have some of the objections he puts forward. He objects, then, to the use of Latin. The ancient Church from the beginning has warranted the use of this tongue, and the wisdom of God's Church has been upheld by the experience of the ages. It is the official language of the Church, used in her schools and Councils, and it binds the various races together. Lloyd George, of his own Church, has commended it lately. An Italian or a Spaniard, knowing no word of English, and assisting at the Peterborough celebration, would at once recognize the unity of the Catholic Church, and have his faith warmed at the sound of the familiar words.

Again, Latin being a "dead language," never changes, and so the exact meanings of important words will always be uncorrupted, a thing of the utmost consequence as making for liturgical exactitude. There are many other reasons to be set down. Indeed, the usage of the Church inspired by the Holy Ghost is always a sufficient reason for Catholics. Mr. Webb even quotes a text against the use of Latin. When the sacred writer used the text quoted: "Unless ye utter by the tongue speech easy to be understood, ye shall be speaking into the air," he was very evidently not speaking of the ritual of the Mass, or of the Church ceremonies, but of the public preaching to the people, which, of course, should be simple, and plain, and clear. The Roman Empire was all over the world in the Apostles' time, and many of the people evangelized knew the Latin tongue and spoke it daily. It would be a strange thing for St Paul, for instance, to condemn the Romans, in his epistles to them, for using their own daily language in the Mass and ceremonies! Therefore he was speaking of the public preaching and not of the ritual, and was advocating that less ornate diction be used.

Mr. Webb is shocked beyond measure because, according to him, Bishop O'Brien was made to "curse heresy." The minister gets badly mixed up here. The words of the ritual are:

Q—"Do you also anathematize every heresy that shall arise against this Holy Catholic Church?"

R.—"I do anathematize it."

Heresy is what is here anathematized, remember. Does Mr. Webb identify himself with heresy? If not, why is he so touchy on the point? Heresy and heretics are very different objects. A father, for instance, may hate rebellion against his authority, while he may love the rebel, who may be his own son. Mr. Webb says that this anathema evinces an unfriendly disposition "towards the non-Catholic bodies." This is identifying them with heresy, with a vengeance.

Dr. O'Brien, indeed has good authority for condemning heresy. Heresy is any false doctrine opposed to the true Gospel of Christ, and here is what St. Paul says of it: "But though we, or an Angel from Heaven, preach a gospel to you beside that which we have preached to you, let him be anathema." (Galatians 1-8, 11). Therefore, according to Mr. Webb's admission, St. Paul also is one who evinces a wrong disposition "towards the non-Catholic bodies." St. Paul anathematized heresy. Bishop O'Brien did the same. What has Mr. Webb to complain of?

The puerile reference to Dr. O'Brien's receiving the blessing like Jacob, who, Mr. Webb says, was then "a deceiver and a rogue," may be dismissed as irrelevant. It is no dishonor to a Bishop to be compared to Jacob, the chosen leader of God's people, and a prototype of Christ the Lord!

Mr. Webb, finally, makes a great parade of the text: "No man cometh unto the Father, but by Me," and thinks that it excludes the idea of a sacrificing priesthood. He is welcome to his opinion. It is only his opinion, and carries the weight of an individual interpretation alone. Are Aaron and the Levites to be condemned as interlopers because they "come between the people and their God?" Priests were ordained in the Old Law to minister unto God: "Thou shalt anoint Aaron and his sons, and shall sanctify them, that they may do the office of priesthood unto me." (Exodus 30-30). Priests were also ordained in the New Law for the same purpose: "And when they (Paul and Barnabas) had ordained for them priests in every church, and had prayed with fasting, they recommended them to the Lord, in Whom they believed." (Acts 14-22) And Christ said to the first priests: "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them," etc. (Matt. 28-19); "Whatsoever you shall bind on earth, shall be bound also in Heaven and whatsoever you shall loose upon earth shall be loosed also in Heaven." (Matt 18-18). These are God's mandates to His priests, and they are sufficient warranty for all the offices of the priesthood which Mr. Webb repudiates. He says he has "sympathy" for Catholics who believe this. Catholics do not need his sympathy. It is himself who needs sympathy and pity, since he cannot understand the plain words of the Lord.

Next time the Rev. Mr. Webb goes to Peterborough Cathedral, he should take a more humble and a less captious spirit with him there, or if he goes as a critic, he should be careful not to stultify himself by raising foolish objections that cannot be sustained.

churches need strong, consecrated leadership. The relationship of university life to the development of leaders is of very great importance. The university should train men and fit them for the spheres in which they are to live their lives. The university should do its work with the idea in mind that it is a mighty factor in the production of leaders. McMaster University is endeavoring to live up to this idea. Christ is recognized as the leader and head of the university life. Jesus is centre and source of all truth.

REV. DR FRANCIS.

Rev. H. A. Francis, D.D., of the Clarendon street Baptist Church, Boston, Mass., spoke on "The Kingdom of God." He had been brought on by the Social Service Committee to bring this work before the Convention. He said that the biggest single phrase ever uttered is The Kingdom of God. As Jesus is a finality in individual character, so the Kingdom of God is a finality in human Society. The Kingdom of God covers every square inch of the area of human life. The realm of business and amusement is part of the Kingdom of God just as much as the realm of the spiritual. The church may not be a finality but the Kingdom of God is. The church is a means to an end. The work of Christian church is threefold;

To make Christians, that is fundamental, that is foundational. If you cut the nerve of evangelism you cut the nerve of the supernatural.

The second task of the Christian church is to train and develop these Christians so as to make them good Christians.

The third duty of the Christian church is to create communal conditions fit for a Christian to live in. The ideal Christ places before the individual is Himself. We shall be like Him. The ideal He gives society is the likeness of the society in Heaven realized down here. It is not turning aside from the gospel to attend to that. Christ had to express His gospel in deeds as well as words, and no church can adequately interpret the gospel until it [illegible] it into deeds There are people who [illegible] no decent chance to live. [illegible] mighty call for social service. [illegible] service is the further [illegible] of the thing preached. [illegible] a thousand lines of social [illegible] that can be done by the individual working as an individual. Child labor can, for example, be lessened by the individual taking a child out of bad social conditions. But men can get together and clean up things so that child labor shall not be exploited. That is a bigger thing. There are many things that cannot be righted by the individual. They require united action. The Federation of the Churches of Christ in the United States has meant much in that country. The churches must stand for an attempt to realize the Kingdom of God on earth. The place where the churches of Christendom will get together first is in respect of social service. A soup kitchen, however, is a mighty poor substitute for regeneration, and where Evangelism is neglected social service soon peters out. Only one power in the universe will hold men and women to the weary task of lifting men, and that is the mighty dynamic of the love of God.

TARIFF HURTS INDUSTRY.

Western U. S. Buyers Are Stocking Up With Canadian Thoroughbreds.

NORTH PORTAL, Alta., Oct. 18.—The new United States tariff, admitting Canadian cattle free, is affecting the cattle trade of western Canada Thursday night a shipment in a stock train of twenty cars, containing 400 head of steers from the McClay ranch, Bassano, Alberta, passed over the boundary destined for Chicago The shipment is valued at $40,000 or $100 per head. Another train of 20 cars is expected. U. S. veterinary and customs officers' work in done at Regina, and the stock train is detained but a few minutes at the boundary. U. S. customs officials here are besieged with the inquiries regarding the new tariff as it affects cattle and grain.

Buying Thoroughbreds.

GRAND FORKS, N.D., Oct. 18.—Farmers of the American northwest have a new source of supply in their movement to stock their farms with thoroughbred cattle, the new tariff measure operating in such a manner that the stock farms of Canada can be utilized for that purpose.

ASSAILS CURRICULA.

Stratford Collegiate Principal Says There Are Too Many Fads.

STRATFORD, Oct. 13.—Principal C. A. Mayberry, of the local collegiate, who is president of the Ontario Educational Association, made a slashing attack on the addition of fads to the courses of study, in a speech before the Perth County teachers here yesterday. "Our system of education, by too greatly emphasizing the value of book knowledge, is surely tending to the neglect of more important objects of training, and especially so since the knowledge acquired is of a superficial and unreliable kind," declared Mr. Mayberry.

"In my opinion, the fault lies chiefly with the educational experts, and the specialists. These men have clamored for recognition of their departments, and have insisted with the Department of Education on making additions to the old courses. It has been all addition and no subtraction, until we find the present intolerable state of things."

Lads Open Switch.

ST. CATHARINES, Oct. 18.—A light engine was thrown into the ditch on the Welland division of the Grand Trunk Railway, when a switch was opened by three small boys, aged seven, nine and eleven years, respectively. An auxiliary from Hamilton was required to replace the locomotive on the railway. The lads were reprimanded by the magistrate and allowed their freedom.

Bigamist Gets 14 Years.

ST. THOMAS, Oct. 18.—George Smith, charged with marrying five women, was sentenced to fourteen years in Kingston Penitentiary by Judge Colter yesterday and is now in that institution. Smith pleaded guilty to three charges and two other charges were not pressed. He took his sentence without flinching. All of his wives were in court.

A Sash Placed Just Enlarges the Waist Line.
Exclusive Copyright, 1913, New York Herald Company

IT is impossible to indicate the exact placing of the fashionable waist line this season. Sometimes it is up under the bust at Empire height, sometimes a little lower at Directoire depth; again, it is placed at the rather long waist line of a decade ago.

In any case it is large. No attempt is made to draw belt or girdle in tightly; it often encircles the figure in a manner that would be called sloppy were it not so artistically done.

There is no doubt that if one is long bodied the high waist line is most becoming, for it covers this defect. On the other hand, if a woman is long in proportion from the waist down a high waist line makes the figure very ungraceful and like a clothespin. So it is fortunate that with these various waist line placings one is able to choose this winter whichever is most becoming and still remain in style as long as there is no tightening of girdle or belt.

The sashes that encircle this season's dress models are delightfully varied. Moire sash ribbon with fringed ends is used on many imported models. Sashes of chiffon or tulle, matching the gown in color, will have elaborately beaded embroidered ends deeply fringed. Sometimes they look more like scarfs when they are only about a yard and a quarter long; in this case the girdle is made of the material and this scarf is simply hung or tied over it, dropping in the most effective place in each particular dress. In either this or the previous manner of placing the embroidery repetition of it is not needed on the robe; in fact, it is more striking if it is omitted.

A large looped bow of tulle is often posed like a big butterfly at the back of an elaborate afternoon or evening gown, even when the girdle is of a different material. Satin and moire girdles tie high up in front under the bust in loops, with or without the long ornamented ends. The wide sash that encircles the figure high in front and drops in the back to hip depth is not quite as new, but it is not by any means out of style. In one of the latest Parisian dresses where the waist line is very high the sash is placed above the waist line, its lower edge touching it.

Both a sash and a belt were seen on one very simple yet smart afternoon gown having a dark velveteen blouse and a lighter duvetyn skirt. The upper belt was of metal passementerie, the loops of satin tied in front with two big loops that hid the closing of the upper belt. There are sashes, too, that tie with no regard for the regular girdle, which is of the gown's color and very narrow and simple. The sash in this case crosses in front at or near the gown belt and drops very low behind, tying in fanciful fashion.

Two views of one of the latest Paris models are shown in No. 1 and No. 2. The pegtop contour is given to the skirt by the way it is draped and the waist line is placed at its natural depth. The new Chinese style touch is very evident in this gown—its sash embroidery and the panel-like lapping on the sleeve. Of the new black and yellow combination, the gown is black satin, the oblong panel on the front and the sash ends are embroidered with Chinese junks and flags done in different tones of yellow. The back is interesting as it has a bustle-like fullness; below it the skirt drapery is drawn into a slight backward movement by a couple of short horizontal tucks taken in the material.

A very high and wide waist line is depicted in No. 3 and No. 4, two views of an evening gown having an adaptation of a minaret [illegible]. Black and white are used in [illegible] in this robe, the foundation [illegible] black satin caught [illegible] and lengthening out in the [illegible] a short train. The [illegible] black tulle lined with [illegible] white [illegible] makes the corsage top. This is one of the models where the sash is placed above the waist line; in this [illegible] under the black tulle [illegible] at the back at waist depth. A jet [illegible] with pendant [illegible] the knot between the loops.

An elaborate white lace and mousseline [illegible] gown, shown here, is posed over a white satin foundation robe. It has a wide sash of old [illegible] the figure [illegible] front. The sash [illegible] and deeply fringed [illegible]. White filet lace [illegible] makes the tunic; a double [illegible] of the mousseline drops below it and also forms the short sleeves that are turned back in a point to make attractive cuffs.

Velvet Popular for Autumn Millinery.

VELVET certainly holds first place in autumn millinery, though plush and ratine are also used. Most hats are made over frames, even those sold untrimmed, and the shapes are particularly becoming, as the head enters well into the crown. A bandeau is used to raise the hat up to a becoming angle on the head if the wearer is not in her first youth.

Paradise and aigrettes no longer reign supreme. [illegible] into lovely aigrette-like ornaments [illegible]. One [illegible] could be done with an [illegible] they are [illegible] off the [illegible] ornament at the tip. [illegible] In [illegible] color [illegible] style [illegible] and [illegible] quite different from the [illegible]-like shape we are accustomed to [illegible] into millinery [illegible] the season. Worsted flowers, painted flowers and some silk and velvet [illegible] are seen on the rather [illegible]. Though there are fewer very small [illegible] models, the average Paris hat being a medium size, some of the very small hats have shaped ruffles standing on their upper brims and encircling the crown that makes the [illegible] hat [illegible]. Crin [illegible] to the [illegible] room shapes. These look [illegible] with a young, oval face [illegible] on a square jawed woman.

All [illegible] are not black by any means. [illegible]

Lace Flouncings for Tunics and Ruffles.

[illegible] dresses of diaphanous textures, and laces, to be lighter than the gown fabric, need to be of cobwebby weight and sparkling lightness.

And they are. Imagine the finest cobweb glistening with dewdrops that catch and reflect the light in a thousand scintillating points, and you have an example of one of the modern lace flouncings for evening gowns. One of these net demi-flouncings is made up of paillettes of pale blue, sewn to the net to form the background, and the lacelike design is traced by crystal beads. The demi flouncings, which are half skirt depth, are the very thing for the lamp shade tunics, that are wired along the edge to make them stand out, and the flouncings, half that width, are used for the skirt ruffles.

Metal laces, too, promise to have a great vogue, judging by the Paris importations that have arrived in New York so far. One of these lovely patterns looks like nothing so much in the world as frozen lace. The mesh of silver thread, very open, more like a guipure than a tulle, has a hand run pattern of round crystal beads.

Perhaps the most striking effect in these metal laces are the dull metal meshes and designs outlined by "lamé." "Lamé" is a very brilliant glistening silver or gold thread that looks like polished wire, but is as flexible as the rest of the lace, of course. The mesh is generally [illegible] or Brussels, with large flower patterns in closer mesh. One lovely Callot gown has one of these lamé laces used as a secondary and longer tunic on a lavender [illegible] robe, and the gold lamé lace [illegible]

Metal Thread Lace, Crystal Embroidered.

Laces with white and [illegible], as, for [illegible] French [illegible], are already more fashionable than [illegible] in Paris. [illegible] the style to be in the [illegible] rather than the cut of their dresses.

FAMOUS BY FLUKES.

How Honors Have Fallen To Men By Accident.

To become famous owing to accident — this would seem a fate to which very few were destined, yet in our time there are so many examples of fortune and distinction coming in this way as to suggest that luck deliberately chooses to operate in the most unexpected and tantalizing way.

Perhaps the most remarkable instance of "fluking" into fame is that of a certain handsome peer, who now holds one of the most coveted positions in England. He was present at a gathering graced by the presence of Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, and some of his friends thought it would be a good joke to write to him to say that "C.B.," who was then Premier, wished to see him in order to give him a certain office, carrying with it social distinction. The note duly came and the delighted peer, inwardly astonished at the mark of favor wholly unexpected, as it was wholly undeserved, presented himself at the first opportunity at 10 Downing street. He stated his errand, and "C.B." saw immediately that a mistake had been made. The astute Scotch statesman, however, thought that the idea, although not his, would not be a bad one to adopt, and he actually gave the comparatively unknown peer the position, quite realizing that it would mean bringing him instantly to the front. As it happened the appointment paved the way to an enormously rich marriage, and the lucky peer is now one of the most envied men in the three kingdoms—and all as the result of a joke which turned out trumps.

"C.B.," curiously enough, figured in another incident which unintentionally brought honor to the wrong man. He wished to bestow a knighthood on someone whose name he could not quite remember. He, however, recollected what his first name was, his nationality, and the fact that he had just married a lady whose name he recollected. So he made known his wishes and the knighthood was conferred. As it happened, however, it went to another man of exactly the same first name, who was of similar nationality and had married a lady bearing the name "C.B." had mentioned — a most extraordinary mischance, but none the less true. The lucky receiver of the unintentional honor prospered exceedingly, whereas the other man had to rest content with a minor Government position.

Most people believe the story that is told of the British Liberal Whip who got appointed owing to being mistaken for someone whose name differed only from his to the extent of a single letter, the lucky man being comparatively unknown, whereas the man who missed being appointed had done much service for his party. The same two M.P.'s were responsible, by the way, for an unfortunate contretemps in the Press Gallery. One of the pressmen there was told to do a column report of one of the M.P.'s for the town he represented, but confusing the names, as was very easy, sent a column report of the other man. The mistake was only found out when it was too late to rectify, but it is said the speech that was sent was infinitely superior to the one that should have gone. As both expressed similar political sentiments really very little harm was done.

English Holidays Plentiful.

The subject of holidays among the English working classes is being discussed with much interest. There has been a steady growth in the number of occasions when a cessation of work has become customary. Where only one day was formerly taken, now the day before the usual holiday and the day after are sometimes expected.

There are now 26 days in a year recognized as legitimate occasions for holidays in most cities in England. They are as follows: Christmas day; the following day, known as boxing day, and often the day after; Easter, beginning on Good Friday and including the Monday following Easter Sunday; Whitsuntide, two days; race week, six days; a week known as Wakes Week; August bank holiday. All these holidays are not universal over England. Instead of those omitted, many places have local holidays, as the Fair Week in Hull and the Goose Fair Week in Nottingham.

Cocaine In India.

The cocaine evil has attained such serious dimensions in India that a demand is being made for more severe penal legislation against its smuggling and illicit sale. The maximum penalty for cocaine smuggling in Bengal is three months' imprisonment, which is declared to be altogether inadequate. Some of the smugglers are very wealthy men, and it is seldom that the principals are arrested. It is suspected that smuggling is largely carried on through Goa or one of the French settlements, and cocaine is also brought into the country from Germany by means of Austrian steamers. The suggestion has been made that if the German Government would insist on the German manufacturer of the drug keeping a register of all the cocaine sent out, with the names of the purchasers, the traffic would soon come to an end.

Hereditary Thieves.

The Bhampas, a tribe scattered throughout central India, are hereditary professional thieves. The Bhampas, before starting on a marauding expedition, are in the habit of indulging in some quaintly superstitious rites. A goat is killed and a few drops of water are poured into its ears. Should the ears shake it is held to be a good omen. If, however, the animal should remain motionless it is considered a presage of evil, and the intended robbery is abandoned. Whether the omen be good or evil, however, no Bhampa ever sets out on an expedition before first visiting the shrine of the founder of the fraternity, which is situated at Kui, in the Satara district.

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

Notes by the Official Scribe

The meeting this week was chiefly taken up by the President, who delivered a speech covering what he saw, heard and did in Montreal, at the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada.

The number of representatives present was rather disappointing, nevertheless those present displayed interest and enthusiasm.

President Moore mentioned among other things:

MONTREAL A HOSPITABLE CITY

The meetings were held in Auditorium Hall a very good place for the purpose, comfortably accommodating all the delegates. President Foster of the Montreal Trades and Labor Council took the chair on the morning of the first meeting of the delegates, and there were addresses of welcome from Mayor Lavallee, controller Joe Ainee, Alphonse Verville, and others. Short speeches from fraternal delegates Thorne and McSorley, Secretary Duffy, of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Alan Studholme.

THE PRESIDENT'S REPORT

President Watters' report was a readable and interesting document, although it showed that little was done in the past year in the way of legislation for promoting the welfare of what is known as the working class.

THE SECRETARY'S REPORT

Secretary Drapers' financial statement showed receipts of $19,871.40, expenditure $10,475.44 and a balance of [illegible].05. The report shows a membership paying per capita tax of 80,801, an increase of nearly 15,000 in the past year.

LARGEST CONVENTION SO FAR

The credential committee reported 320 credentials received. This constituted a record attendance. The number registered at Guelph last year was 261.

PRESIDENT WATTERS RETAINS CHAIR

Owing to the Brotherhood of Cement Workers of Victoria surrendering their charter, President Watters who represented same gave up the chair to Vice-President Bancroft. The Credential committee having ascertained that President Watters had paid his dues till the end of the year also that he had been elected International Delegate at the St. Louis Convention declared him as legally able to retain his office, which was done amid thundering applause.

SECRETARY DRAPER SCORES BRANTFORD

Secretary Draper protested vigorously in both French and English against the action of the Brantford Trades and Labor Council, in sending out a letter that seemed to imply dishonesty in his office. He also presented his report as a delegate to the British Trades Union Convention.

A REAL HELP-MEET

Tuesday morning, representative Wilkinson told the story of the coal miners' strike on Vancouver Island. It was a lock-out in the Ladysmith and Cumberland Mines. Wilkinson is a good "speeler" and he interested the delegates for an hour or so, giving his story quite a dramatic effect at times. This happened in the telling of the arrest of a miner named Guthrie, whose young wife broke through the ranks of the soldiers who stood with "bristling bayonets," and gave a resounding kiss and a bag of fruit to cheer his heart in durance vile. Thus, how can capitalism prevail against such unionism? Minister of Labor [illegible] and Premier McBride had [illegible] in a very dilatory manner, and had given no measure of relief, and the Royal Commission was still "sitting on the matter."

It was interesting to know that the Vancouver Gas Co. was bringing coal from Japan and Australia. In the meantime the United Mine Workers were paying $16,500 a week strike money, and $460,000 had already been paid. A telegram was sent from Congress to Representative Pettigrew, who was unavoidably detained at Nanaimo, and $500 was voted as a boot and shoe fund for the stricken families.

PRESIDENT RYAN SPEAKS.

During the afternoon President Ryan of the Structural Iron Workers, was introduced to the Congress and gave a brief address.

Reports of the organizers were also presented.

The Resolutions Committee went into session afternoon and evening, the personal of which included Peterborough's representative.

MONTREAL'S FIRE FIGHTERS.

On Wednesday the Congress had only a short session in the morning, adjourning at 11 o'clock to the Champ-de-Mars, where all the fire fighting apparatus was on exhibition for the visitors.

During the afternoon all were take on a steamer up the Lachine Canal to Lachine and came down the river through the rapids.

On Thursday morning the addresses of Alex. McSorley, fraternal delegate from the American Federation of Labor, and of Will Thorne, fraternal delegate from the British Trades Unions, were heard.

Thursday afternoon was another half holiday, and the delegates were taken in a hundred hacks for a drive, visiting the new Technical School, and seeing Montreal from the mountain.

Thursday evening the delegates were the guests of the city at the Orpheum Theatre.

Friday morning was largely taken up dealing with resolutions.

One of the humorous moments of the convention was when Representative Simpson, speaking in favor of St. John as the next place of meeting, referred to the scent of the blossoms in the Annapolis Valley. As the convention will be in September this was funny, but Representative Simpson got away with it right.

The election of officers took place on Friday afternoon. There was no change in the principal officers. Alphonse Verville was elected fraternal delegate to the British Congress and Gus Francey to the A. F. of L.

The Congress had an evening session on Friday lasting till eleven o'clock; the Resolutions Committee was also in session till a later, or, to be more correct, an early hour. There were 119 resolutions presented, and about half that number dealt with by the Congress. One resolution affects us locally. It is an amendment to the constitution and debars from membership in Congress or Trades Councils chartered by it, any organization which has been expelled or rejected by the American Federation of Labor.

The Convention, presumably, was a success, but considering everything and principally the inconvenience of the dual language in doing business, President Moore is of the opinion that Provincial Federation must soon come.

BATHS IN PARIS.

They Are Something In the Nature of a Public Function.

American tourists when they visit Paris find unexpected difficulties in gratifying their desire for a bath. Conditions are slowly changing for the better, however, and some of the hotels have introduced bathrooms, an innovation brought about mainly to satisfy American demands. A writer in the New York Sun tells how the bath is usually enjoyed:

Like most intimate affairs in France the bath partakes of the nature of a public function. There is also a choice in the matter. The ambulance bath was one franc fifty a bath, or you got a season ticket for one franc twenty. A man wheels a handcart, which carries a receptacle filled with hot water, surmounted by a tub, to your door. He brings the tub on his head to your room and returns with the hot water, two covered pailfuls at a time. He then retires to the courtyard and waits till you have finished the bath. His cheerful whistle floats up to the window to the accompaniment of your splashings as a reminder that you should not linger—which you are not tempted to do in the cramped quarters of a French bathtub.

The foreign lady's bath is a sort of gala day for the neighborhood. If frequent, the event is discussed by the neighbors across the way. "Truly, that costs dear; they are bien des millionaires, ces dames Americaines!" And the children flock to count the pails as they are turned out. All of this is well calculated to make the occasion one of keen embarrassment for the foreign lady.

Twenty Nuns Among Refugees.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Twenty Catholic Nuns, members of the Sisterhood of the Incarnate Word, are among the refugees now en route from Tampico, Mexico, to Galveston, Texas, on the oil tanker [illegible] Wahnet. They fled from their institution at Monterey. The tanker also had as passengers sixteen British subjects, ten Mexicans and one American.

Modest Fitzgerald.

Edward Fitzgerald was utterly careless of his fame. He lived to be an old man, yet not one in a million of his fellow countrymen regarded him as a poet, even if they had heard his name mentioned as an old chum of Alfred Tennyson. Yet he translated "The Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam" long years before his death. He kept it "chucking about," apparently not thinking it worth publication, and when he did print a few copies nobody took any notice of it. Today it is one of the most famous poems in the world.

First He'd Heard of It.

Harry returned to Sunday school, after a long absence, on the day on which tickets for the annual picnic were distributed. He trembled in his seat when the teacher began a quiz on the lesson of the previous Sunday. Finally his turn came.

"Harry, who slew Goliath with a pebble?"

"Honest, teacher," said Harry, "I don't know; I didn't even know he was dead."—New York Press.

Are You Going West This Fall?

If so, take advantage of the remarkably low one-way second-class Colonist Rates to Vancouver, Victoria, Nelson, Spokane, Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, San Diego, etc., in effect daily until October 10; or if Western Canada is your destination the low-rate Homeseekers Excursions in effect each Tuesday until October 28. The route is one of the most scenic in the world. Bear in mind that the Canadian Pacific Railway offers the finest possible equipment and fastest train service. It is the only line operating through standard and tourist sleepers also dining cars, to Winnipeg and Vancouver. By travelling C.P.R. you avoid the necessity of changing depots. All equipment is owned and operated by the C.P.R., affording the highest form of efficiency. If such a trip is under consideration, apply to any C.P.R. Agent for full particulars, or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto.

STRONGLY ADVISES "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Because They Cured Him, And They Will Cure You.

MR. ALEX. McCARTER

WALKERTON, ONT., MAY 9th. 1911.

"I have been in Walkerton in business for a good many years and many of my townsmen know that my health, for long periods was precarious. My trouble was extreme Nervousness, brought on by Indigestion and Dyspepsia, from which I suffered in the most severe form. It was so bad that I could not sleep before about four in the morning. I noticed one of your published testimonials of how someone had used "Fruit-a-tives" for similar trouble and asked Mr. Hunter, my druggist, his opinion on the matter and he advised their use. I immediately procured several boxes and I am pleased to say that I now enjoy splendid health and could not possibly feel better. I can eat with every degree of satisfaction and sleep without an effort. I strongly advise anyone suffering from like complaints, to commence using "Fruit-a-tives". ALEX. McCARTER.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50—trial size, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

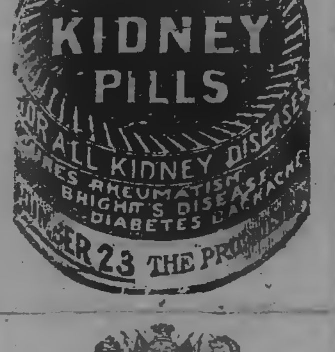
Jokes With Names.

Some parents seem unable to resist the temptation to make a joke with the Christian names of their children. The Somerset House registers testify to the existence of a Mineral Water, a Frosty Winter and an Alfred Day Weeks. There is something to be said in favor of naming children in the order of their arrival—Primus, Secundus, etc.—but it is unfortunate for a well-known Canadian named Cumber that it should have fallen to his lot to be Quintus. His name is always appearing in the papers as Mr. Q. Cumber. London Chronicle.



SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Public Building, Lakefield, Ont." will be received until 4.00 P.M., on Wednesday, November 5, 1913, for the construction of a Public Building, at Lakefield, Ont.

Plans, specification and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained on application to the Postmaster at Lakefield, Ont., at the office of Mr. Thos. Hastings, Clerk of Works, Postal Station "F", Yonge St., Toronto, and at this Department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation, and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honourable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent. (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

OBITUARY

Mrs. A. Blackburn

The death occurred yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in St. Joseph's Hospital of Mrs. A. Blackburn, formerly of Providence R.I., and who has resided in this city for about a year. She was a sister of Mr. R. Gordon, 108 Perry street.

The funeral will take place Sunday afternoon, leaving the residence of Mr. R. Gordon, 108 Perry street, at 1.455 and proceeding to the Church of the Sacred Heart, and then to St. Peter's cemetery.

Mary Halpin

Miss Mary Halpin, an inmate of the House of Providence passed away yesterday at the early age of 18 years.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral and St. Peter's cemetery.

William Douglas

William Douglas, the six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Blade, of 618 Rubidge street, passed away yesterday afternoon at the Isolation Hospital from an attack of scarlet fever. The funeral will take place privately from the residence.

Mrs. Cumberland

A well known and highly respected citizen passed away yesterday in the person of Mrs. Helen Cumberland, relict of the late David Cumberland formerly of Quebec.

She is survived by three sons, Elfred, on a survey in New Ontario, and Keith, Philip and David of this city.

Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

THE UNITED STATES MAY HELP REBELS

New Policy May Include Lifting Embargo on Arms.

Ten Days Are Expected to Elapse Before President Wilson Outlines His Plans With Regard to Mexico —Meeting Called by German Ambassador Is Held In the Mexican Capital.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18. — President Wilson, it is expected in official circles, will announce in about ten days a new Mexican policy. The principal feature of this policy will be the lifting of the embargo on the revolutionists obtaining arms and ammunition in the United States, a continuance of the interrupted relations with Huerta and a refusal to the Huerta faction of the right to obtain arms in the United States.

This became known yesterday following the receipt of a despatch from Nelson O'Shaughnessy, which gave in detail the meeting of the foreign representatives in Mexico City on Wednesday afternoon.

The meeting was called by the Spanish Minister, dean of the diplomatic corps, and was held in the German legation.

According to well-informed citizens all the representatives at the meeting with the sole exception of Great Britain, expressed the belief that the United States ought to intervene in Mexico. Great Britain yesterday announced that it did not regard interference as necessary or desirable. Because of its great British interests it would not withdraw its recognition of Huerta.

None of the representatives advised the withdrawal or recognition of Huerta. All informed their Governments it would be inexpedient to do so at this time. All advised the sending of warships to Mexican waters for the purpose of protecting their nationals and interests.

President Wilson was not surprised at the feelings of the majority of the representatives. He will not, however, allow the action of the representatives to influence him other than to strengthen his belief that it is best to have no further dealings with Huerta.

Britain's Stand Maintained.

LONDON, Oct. 18.—There is no likelihood of Great Britain's recognition of Provisional President Huerta of Mexico being withdrawn at present, as has been suggested in despatches from Washington, in the the opinion of British Government circles.

It is admitted that something might arise which would induce Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary, to take this drastic course, but it is pointed out that nothing thus far has occurred to change the official view that recognition of the provisional government was the correct policy.

It is realized here that the state of affairs in Mexico is very bad, but Great Britain is studiously refraining from interfering in any way between Gen. Huerta and the Constitutionalists.

INCH WILL GET A SHIP.

Time-Honored Rule of the Sea Suspended For Heroic Captain.

NEW YORK, Oct. 18—The unwritten but almost inexorable law of the seas, which bars a captain who loses his ship from being given another command, will not be applied to Captain Francis Inch of the Volturno. The officials of the Uranium Line made it known yesterday that the heroism of the young skipper — his desperate, though losing fight, to save his vessel and the brave part he played in the battle which resulted in the saving of such a large proportion of the Volturno's passengers and crew — will preserve him from the fate of many a master whose ship the sea has claimed.

"The line needs men like Inch," said Manager E. O. Thomas yesterday. "He will be given another boat to command and we will be glad to keep him in our employ."

CONVENTION COMMITTEES PROGRESS IN SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Superintendent of Sunday School Work Presents Report --- Rev. John MacNeill Speaks To-night

The ranks of the delegates were somewhat thinned at the morning session, but there was no abatement of the interest in final business of the convention.

There are yet several important meetings to be held, and this evening Rev. John MacNeill is to address a public meeting to-night in Murray Street church on the subject of "Young People's Work." Mr. MacNeill is from Toronto and is famous as a preacher beyond the limits of his denomination.

MORNING SESSION

At 8.30 o'clock a number of delegates gathered for a prayer meeting. At 9.15 o'clock the president took the chair, and Rev. J.R. Stillwell, B.A., led the devotional exercises.

The morning exposition was given by Rev. Prof. Thos. Trotter, D.D., LL.D., who spoke of "The Doctrine of the salvation of infants." He said that one third of the human family die in infancy. What becomes of the countless millions of these little ones?

The salvation of a believer is one thing the salvation of an infant is another. The child who dies in infancy has not come to conscious moral choice. The scriptures say little about the salvation of infants. The words and acts of Jesus give us bright hopes of how God feels toward the little ones. What participation have infants in the future life? They have had no conscious moral life. Have they any participation in the work of Christ for sinners? Immortality seem to belong to the infant by the inplication and silence of the Scriptures. Has the infant any need of God's salvation? Moral evil has corrupted the whole stream of humanity. Sin is not only personal but social; there is a kingdom of sin, and the infant is part of the sinful race.

REV. DR. NORTON
He is the new President of the Convention

In what sense is the infant involved in the sin of the race? Has he a share in the sin of the first sinner, or has he only a tainted nature? Formost Baptist theologians believe that the work of Christ is sufficient for the salvation of infants. The Fatherhood of God, Christ's sacrifice, the grace of the Holy Spirit, all give grounds for a belief in the eternal salvation of infants.

How does salvation come to be realized by these infant souls; they are undeveloped souls, shall we think of them as remaining undeveloped? In the future life there is moral development for the child. There will likely be the awakening of moral consciousness in heaven.

Mystery surrounds the question as to what means God employs for the development of the child soul. But God must have some work for the child as for the adult.

The address was a tender and comforting message. Rev. B. W. Merrill voiced the appreciation of those who had lost their little ones by death.

The report of the Sunday school Board was presented, and moved by Rev. P.K. Dayfoot, M.A., superintendent of Sunday school work. The report shows that the scholars enrolled number 47,356, an increase of 1989; teachers and officers 5586, an increase of 362; total number of schools 11,788, an increase of 509; scholars baptized during the year 1606, an increase of 234. These schools contributed to missions $14,700.00, an increase of $1550.00; they gave $975.00 to S. S. Board; expended for school purposes $34,158.97, an increase of $2081.66.

The Board reports disbursments of $2921.06, and has exceeded its income by $630.94.

Rev. W. C. Pearce, B.A., of Colborne, seconded the adoption of the report.

Rev. J. R. Webb raised a question respecting the value of the Home Department.

Rev. B. W. Merrill, B.A., eulogized the work of the General Superintendent. Attendance at 12,000 miles is no small task. He is a strong believer in the Home Department.

REV. DR E. J. STOBO
Smiths Falls, Rev. Dr. Stobo, who is an old Peterborough boy, is chairman of the Committee on State of Religion. His father is an ex-pastor of Murray Street Baptist Church

The report was discussed by Mr. W.C. Senior, who spoke of the shed nuisance in the country church.

Rev. H.R. Nobles, B.D., emphasized the value of Tally Day.

Rev. H. Mullowney spoke of the problem of the bad boy.

Prof. Trotter commended detailed administration in Sunday schools.

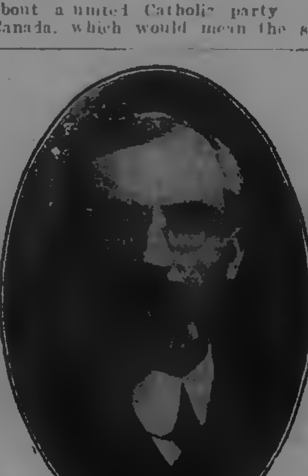
Representative on Grande Ligne Board—Rev. D. W. Terry.

GRANDE LIGNE MISSION

Rev. D. W. Terry of Coaticook, Que., presented the report of the Grande Ligne Mission, which operates in the province of Quebec amongst the French Canadians. The French population of Canada was given as 2,054,890, which is 28 1-2 per cent. of the entire population. During the year there have been 54 baptisms. The disbursements for the year were $40,564.01 and $15,076.39 of the receipts came from Ontario. There is a small deficit.

The report stated that the educational conditions of Quebec called for the serious consideration of Canadians for both religious and political purposes, and the latter to bring about a united Catholic party in Canada, which would mean the supremacy of Rome in all matters including education.



REV. PROF. FARMER

Rev. Dr. Bates, Rev. T. T. Shields, Rev. J. J. McNeill and Mr. Jas. Byrne were added to the committee.

When the skin burns and is harsh to the touch, it does not need water. It should be cleansed with cold cream and wiped with a soft cloth, then sponged with a mild solution of benzoin and alcohol.

ARE HELD AS HOSTAGES

Forty-three Germans Are in Hands of Mexican Rebels

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 21. — The holding of 43 Germans at Torreon by Gen. Francisco Villa as hostages against an attack by the Federal forces has aroused the German Government to make strong demands upon the Mexican Foreign Office to insure their safety.

Gen. Villa permitted the Americans to depart from Torreon, but held the Germans, about the same number of French residents, ten or twelve Britishers and several Spaniards, declaring that his purpose was to use them as a foil to deter the federals form attacking the city. He also let it be known, according to advices here, that they would be sacrificed unless the effort to retake Torreon was abandoned.

What action the Foreign Office proposes to take has not yet been determined.

Would Drag In Europe.

PARIS, Oct. 21.—The Figaro, according to an article published yesterday morning, has received information that a group of Mexican statesmen, whose names are not disclosed, have approached the French and British Governments, calling attention to the resulting advantages if the United States was not the sole power directly interested in Mexican affairs.

The Figaro says: "The group suggested particularly that prudently directed action would increase French and English prestige in Mexico and establish a precedent in conformity with justice and international law.

"Intervention," adds the paper, "would be justified because of France's and Great Britain's large Mexican interests."

Servia Complies.

BELGRADE, Oct. 21—The Servian Government yesterday notified the powers that it had ordered its troops to withdraw immediately behind the Albanian frontier fixed by the peace conference held in London at the conclusion of the first Balkan war.

The step complies with Austria's ultimatum.

Arthur Chamberlain Dead.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—Arthur Chamberlain, chairman of the great ammunition firm of Messrs. Kynochs, is dead. He was the youngest brother of the Rt. Hon. Jos. Chamberlain, and was a strong opponent of Joseph's tariff reform program.

Lake Superior Stormswept.

DULUTH, Minn., Oct. 21. — A northwest storm which whipped Lake Superior Sunday night, caught the rudderless steamer Lackawanna, being towed into Duluth by the tug Sabin, and some fear was expressed here for her.

The storm delayed the steamer W. L. Brown for ten hours. The E. C. Pope, the Shenandoah, and numerous other vessels were delayed.

The boom of the Inter-state bridge was broken by the storm and traffic will be blocked in the Superior channel until repairs can be made.

Weather reports on the Vermillion range indicate low temperatures with snow fall at Tower, Ely, Winton and reaching to Fairbanks. This is the first snow of the season.

Suggestion Coldly Received.

BERLIN, Oct. 21.— The proposal by Winston Spencer Churchill, First Lord of the British Admiralty, that Great Britain and Germany should declare a "naval holiday" in 1914, was received without sympathy by the German Government which regards it as not calling for a reply. It is generally considered doubtful whether any official notice will be taken of the suggestion, although it is thought Imperial Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg may perhaps refer to the subject later on in his course of the debate in the Imperial Parliament.

IMPEACHED GOVERNOR STARTS AT FOOT AGAIN

He Receives a Pressing Invitation From a Large Number of Progressive Voters in the Sixth Assembly District to Run for the Leglisature and Accepts —Republicans not Altogether Pleased.

NEW YORK, Oct. 21. — William Sulzer, impeached as governor of the state, was nominated for the Assembly last night by the Progressives of the Sixth Assembly district. Mr. Sulzer in 1889 began his public career as a member of this branch of the State Legislature.

The nomination of the impeached executive was brought about against the desires of state and county leaders of the Progressive party. The sentiment among the Progressives throughout New York and in other states was generally against the move, according to State Chairman Theodore Douglas Robinson and County Chairman Francis W. Bird.

Mr. Bird in a letter to Mr. Steindler before the meeting began cautioned him regarding "the unwisdom of nominating Mr. Sulzer."

After Mr. Sulzer had been nominated last night there was a demonstration in the East Side meeting hall. Bands in the street outside played national airs. The nomination was made unanimous, and Mr. Sulzer accepted.

A few minutes after the Progressive convention met last night in New York, Wm. Sulzer issued a statement telling why he had consented to come back to Albany as a member of the assembly.

There never was any doubt but that he could have the nomination if he wanted it, he declared. Nor does he doubt that the first of January will see him back where he began his political career twenty years ago. He and his friends also are convinced that he will go from there to the speakership and thence back to the People's House."

To-day Mr. Sulzer will go to New York to begin a campaign for the Assembly immediately, and speak by day and night up to election time.

The rabbis of every synagogue in the sixth district called at the executive mansion yesterday to urge Sulzer to make the race. With them they brought petitions asking Mr. Sulzer to run. There are said to be only 5,700 voters in the entire district.

For a time the former governor refused to give his callers an affirmative answer. He told them that his wife had urged that he get out of politics. Then the rabbis told her it was the duty of the impeached executive to make the race. A statement issued by Platt quoted her as saying:

"Accept. The people call you. Fight for the cause—win or lose."

SIMCOE, Oct. 21.—The steamer Elphicke, of Duluth, went ashore and broke in two this morning near Long Point. She carried [illegible],000 bushels of wheat.

TO CALL OFF TRIAL.

"Ritual Blood Murder" Hearing In Kiev May Be Stopped.

LONDON, Oct. 21—The Standard's St. Petersburg correspondent says that there is ground for stating that the Minister of Justice intends to intervene in the Kiev "ritual murder" trial. He will order the case suspended, a further hearing to take place only after a strict inquiry is made into all the circumstances connected with the affair.

The St. Petersburg Gazette has published a sensational statement relative to the Kiev case, and reports that one of the convicts of the Lodge prison, named Baggnlern, serving a term of twelve years of penal servitude, to which he was sentenced in Kiev, has declared to fellow-prisoners that he murdered the boy, Yushinsky, with the aid of accomplices. They were paid for doing so. The Gazette adds that the confession should be taken with reserve. An inquiry, however, has been ordered, which may throw light on the case.

NEGRO SLASHES FOUR MEN

One Victim is in a Critical Condition

TORONTO, Oct. 21.—Enraged by a dispute over the amount of money he had laid on the bar in Smith's Hotel, an unknown negro ran amuck at eleven o'clock last night, slashing four people with a razor, one of whom, John Consworth, a porter at the hotel, lies at the General Hospital in a critical condition. The negro, up to an early hour this morning, had not been caught by the police.

Walking up to the bar in Smith's Hotel, the man laid a five-dollar bill on the counter and called for a drink. After he had received the drink and his change, he declared that there were two bills stuck together, and wanted more change. He was refused and commenced to show fight, upon which, Consworth, who has been a porter in the hotel for fourteen years, attempted to eject him. Drawing the razor from his pocket, the negro slashed Consworth across the neck, inflicting a deep wound which missed the jugular vein by one inch.

At the door his progress was obstructed by William Mackay, who attempted to hold him for the police, but once more the razor fell and Mackay stumbled forward with a gash in his neck.

The next victim was William Thompson, a merchant, living at 3 Henry street, whom the negro met opposite the Queen City Hotel, at the corner of Queen and William streets. Stepping up to Thompson, and exclaiming, "What do you want?" he slashed at him, inflicting a wound which extends from the neck six inches down the left shoulder.

Land Tax Planned.

EDMONTON, Alta., Oct. 21.—Direct taxation upon the unearned increments of the province is new legislation planned by Hon. Arthur L. Sifton, Premier of Alberta. The bill, which has been discussed at length by members of the Government at Cabinet meetings here, probably will be submitted at the present session of the Provincial Legislature, and it is expected the measure will receive immediate attention.

To Investigate Emigration.

VIENNA, Oct. 21. — Official announcement is made that the great increase in emigration is evidence of the widespread secret organization for encouraging the emigration of persons liable for military service. The emperor has shown much interest in the situation, and has ordered an investigation of all emigration bureaus in the empire.

MRS. PANKHURST FREE TO DELIVER LECTURES

PRESIDENT REVOKES EDICT

She Will Depart After Filling Her Lecture Engagements

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21. — America's doors were opened yesterday to Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, and during the few weeks covered by her lecture engagements the British militant suffragist leader is free to go where she will in the United States. An order releasing the much-discussed visitor from detention at Ellis Island, N.Y., and revoking the deportation order of the special enquiry board was issued yesterday after President Wilson had conferred with Secretary Wilson of the Department of Labor, and a formal hearing before Immigration Commissioner Caminetti on Mrs. Pankhurst's appeal had been concluded.

Secretary Wilson announced that he and the President had agreed that Mrs. Pankhurst should be admitted "on her own recognizance," with the understanding that she should depart when she had fulfilled her lecture engagements. Both the President and Secretary agreed with Commissioner Caminetti in the opinion that there was an element of doubt as to whether the acts for which Mrs. Pankhurst has been convicted in England constituted moral turpitude, or were political in character.

MRS. EMMELINE PANKHURST.

Commissioner Caminetti last night issued a formal statement outlining the reasons for his decision in the case.

"Upon carefully considering the entire record and all of the circumstances of the case, I conclude," he said, "that the best disposition to make of the matter will be to accept the assurances of all parties concerned, and admit Mrs. Pankhurst on her own recognizance to depart from the country at the termination of her engagements, and so recommend."

Acting Secretary Post and Chief Parker of the law division, sat with Commissioner Caminetti and the array of attorneys was drawn up in a battery at a line of tables.

There was a rush for admission to the small chamber, and it quickly was filled with women who did not reveal their sympathies.

Herbert Reeves, attorney for the British leader, first presented a long brief, reviewing first, the facts, and then contended that the acts of which Mrs. Pankhurst had been convicted in England, were purely political offences.

"It is respectfully submitted," he said, "that at the time of the commission of the acts complained of, there was an uprising or revolt on the part of the present women in England, that this uprising or revolt was of a political nature, and that any crimes committed by Mrs. Pankhurst, if any were committed by her, were crimes purely of a political nature and not such as to involve moral turpitude."

At the end of his argument, Mr. Reeves announced that in the event of a decision against Mrs. Pankhurst, which, he said, parenthetically, he did not expect, he would ask Commissioner Caminetti to admit her under bond to fill her lecture engagements.

Starved Leader at Meeting.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—A dramatic appearance at the weekly suffragettes meeting was made yesterday by Miss Annie Kennedy, organizer of the Women's Social and Political Union, the militant suffragette organization. Suffering from the effects of a "hunger strike" in Holloway Jail, the idol of the women's movement looking extremely feeble, was borne into th hall on a stretcher and given a me morable reception by the crowde audience of women who stood o chairs and cheered until they wer weary.

This was Miss Kennedy's first ap pearance in public since her releas and she reached the hall in an am bulance, escorted by a guard of mil tant suffragettes in taxicabs.

The stretcher, supported on chair was placed in the middle of the pla form, where Miss Kenndy lay mo tionless and only able to whisper few words to her friends.

GOOD BYE TO THE DELEGATES

The BaptistConvention, which has been held in Murray Street church for the last six days, and which closes this evening, has been a notable event in many respects. Its effect will not only be felt by the Baptist churches in the city and throughout Ontario and Quebec, but its influence is bound to be for good upon the other churches, and eventually upon the community.

Men with such noble purposes, who separate themselves for the uplifting of their fellows, cannot gather together, as these Baptist ministers have done, and commune one with another without disseminating some of their zeal and enthusiasm, as well as sharpening their own countenances. "As iron sharpeneth iron, so doth the countenance of a man his friend," says Bacon, "Conference maketh a ready man." If this be true, then every Baptist parson of the convention ought to go back to his work ready, readier, and better equipped for the fight.

The friends of Rev. J.R. Webb will be specially gratified at the honor bestowed upon the pastor of Murray street church in his election as Vice-President for the coming year.

This convention must have brought home to many the vitality and quiet vigor of the Baptist church in Canada. Many have the notion that the followers of John the Baptist (in the form of baptism that is) are of small account in Canada, but although they may be few, they are by no means contemplating extinction.

We will express the feeling of the press in Peterboro when we give special thanks to the "Press Man" of the convention, Rev. Dr. Stobo. He is a kindly Christian gentleman, as well as an able and efficient scribe. If it is true that some parsons are in the ministry because they are good for nothing else, it is certainly not true in the cause of Dr. Stobo. He ought to have been an editor. He has edited the Peterboro papers on the convention this last week, and he has, at least, the Review's thanks. We are indeed sorry to lose him.

Peterboro wishes the delegates a very happy and profitable year, and that their warmth and light will be none the less for having imparted a little of it to us.

THE PHARISEE

The charge of bribery and corruption in elections is a two-edged sword which cuts both ways. It is a charge not only against the candidate but against the constituency.

The Globe in an article on the subject says: "The bribe curses him who gives and him who takes." And the giver and taker are therefore on a par. The giver in this case, according to the Globe, is Mr. Morris, the Conservative candidate who won the election against Hon. Sydney Fisher; the taker is the Liberal voter who has for so many years been under the sole tuition of the Liberal party.

The question arises; If the Conservatives have won Chateauguay this time by corruption, what did the Liberal candidates win by in the past? It is evident that the election would never have been won without the Liberal vote being turned over, and if these Liberal voters were so degraded as to sell their convictions for a few dollars it does not speak very highly for their Liberal education. It rather suggests that they have only voted for Liberals in the past from ulterior motives, and not from any convictions as to the divine mission of Liberalism.

That there is corruption, and there has been in both parties in the past, it is vain to deny. But let not Liberals hold up their hands in pious horror over Chateauguay, lest they expose the uncleanness of their own palms. Corruption and sin cannot be got rid of by Pharisaical eye-rolling and public thanksgiving that "we are not as others men are."

The Liberal party has reason to smite its breast and cry: "O fate be merciful to me a briber."

THE HORRORS OF PEACE

There has been an epidemic of fatalities within the last week, which seems to prove the old adage that misfortunes do not come singly.

The first was the burning of the Volturno in mid-ocean, then came the terrible explosion in the Cardiff colliery, and then perhaps the most horrible of all the mid-air calamity which assailed the Zepplin dirigible and brought it and its human freight, plunging to destruction.

This latter appeals to, or rather shocks the imagination more forcibly because of its unusual and spectacular nature. It seems to be a literal fulfillment of the words of Tennyson's passage in "Lockley Hall":

"Heard the heavens fill with shouting,
And there rained a ghastly dew
From the nations' airy navies,
Grapling in the central blue."

The "ghastly dew" that fell in Germany the other day, would be as nothing to the bloody and ghastly torrent that wuld fall in a war waged in mid-air with such frail craft.

We believe in military efficiency but the extent to which modern implements of destruction are being developed makes one wonder if peace is not becoming as horrible and expensive as war itself.

CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY AND MORAL AND SOCIAL EVILS

To the Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir,—In a recent editorial one of your contemporaries calls attention to the beneficent work of the Children's Aid Society, the need of vigilance, the dangers of an atmosphere of vice and loose morals and the evils that come in the lives of girls through lack of maternal care. "If," says this editor, "the authority of the Children's Aid Society were expanded to cover cases of children of larger growth where evidence of maternal incapacity in regard to maturing girls is shown, its beneficent work would be greatly widened." He cites by way of example an incident of the day before—a girl picked up in a western street for a drive to the country by two men and brought back sitting upon the knees of one of them.

Now it is reasonable to suppose that young girls do not as a rule take to such dangerous adventures without previous experience of bad example or environment or the opportunity of association with bad company. Does our editor know that such experience is easily acquired at some public resort open to attendance by both sexes and patronized by the young and inclined to be wayward, and we can understand that a resort open to all who choose to loiter there, and that girls accustomed to such an atmosphere easily go for a drive with any man who wants them.

About such a resort nothing is wanting in the way of opportunity to meet and invite young girls in directions they should not go. That something more than invitation is sometimes the experience of girls the writer has reason to believe.

In lamp light one evening I saw two girl frequenters cross the street from this resort accompanied by a man who conducted them toward a buggy standing in the shadows of the trees. The buggy was occupied by two men one of whom alighted upon the sidewalk. Seeing this one of the girls returned to the resort; the other was held by her male companion who, assisted by the man on the sidewalk, attempted forcibly to place her in the buggy. Her evident resistance called me to the spot. Upon my appearance the men got quickly into the buggy and drove away, while the girl returned to the resort across the street. I have seen many occurences similar to this in which the actors were frequenters of this resort.

Templemore Towed to Port.

BOSTON, Oct. 21.—The steamer Templemore, abandoned on fire off the Virginia Capes on Sept. 30, was towed into port yesterday by the revenue cutter Androscoggin, which picked her up, still burning, off the Georges Banks, six days ago.

The steamer probably will be turned over to the agents of the companies in which she was insured.

LIONS AT LARGE.

Circus Animals Created Panic In Streets of Leipsic.

LEIPSIC, Germany, Oct. 21.—Five lions belonging to an American circus obtained their freedom in the streets of Leipsic Sunday night owing to a collision between a street car and their cars while it was on the way to the railroad station, after a performance. The cage was torn open by the shock, and the appearance of the wild animals in the centre of the city created a panic among the thousands of people here to attend the celebration of the centennial of the "Battle of the Nations."

One of the lions entered an hotel, rushed upstairs and proceeded along the corridors, driving the visitors before it into their rooms.

It was sometime before policemen arrived and shot the animal. The other four also were shot and killed in various parts of the city. Nobody was attacked by the lions.

Twenty-Two Were Killed.

MOBILE, Ala., Oct. 21.—Victims of Sunday's troop train wreck on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad at Buckatunna, Miss., were brought to Mobile early yesterday on relief trains. The list of known dead at eight o'clock was twenty-two, most of whom are members of the 17th Coast Artillery.

There were 74 seriously injured soldiers in Mobile hospitals, while a number of the less seriously hurt were taken to the Government Hospital at Fort Morgan.

Flights Countermanded.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 21.—Because of the disaster to the Zeppelin dirigible balloon, the Minister of War has countermanded all the proposed ascents of the military dirigibles, Zodiac and Belgique for this year.

He has also decided to suspend, and probably will abandon altogether the intended purchase of a new dirigible of the German rigid type.

The MacTavish Mystery

It Occurred on Long Island In Colony Days.

By F. A. MITCHEL

In the olden time when New York was called New Amsterdam, when the rotund Dutchmen of Manhattan, increasing and multiplying, were spreading eastward on Long Island, meeting the lean Yankee, also increasing and multiplying, from Connecticut, there lived on that coast a family named MacTavish, but recently arrived from bonny Scotland. Long Island in those days was not crowded with settlers, and the Indians were getting scarce.

The MacTavish family lived a lonely life, their home being built on rising ground overlooking the ocean. All day long they listened to the waves rolling in on the sand and watched the gulls hovering over the water, every now and again descending to pounce upon some luckless fish. Farther out on the horizon at rare intervals a sail would appear and while passing served to lessen somewhat the loneliness, for, though they could see only a spot of white canvas, they knew that there were living human beings there.

MacTavish was both farmer and fisherman, giving his personal attention to the latter, while his wife and his eldest son, Alex, attended to the former. The bulk of the product both of the farm and the nets was consumed by the family, but MacTavish would occasionally in summer sail to New Amsterdam with a load of vegetables and when the weather was cold enough to transport fish would carry his hauls to the same market.

One autumn he bade goodby to his wife and children, intending to take a cargo of potatoes and other vegetables to Manhattan. They watched him sail out of the inlet where he kept his boat and, riding the waves, grow less and less in the distance till at last they could see him no longer. Then Dame MacTavish gathered her children about her in the house, as she always did when her husband went on his trips, to keep off the loneliness that persisted in stalking in as he sailed away.

MacTavish was usually absent a week, sometimes more, sometimes less. A week passed, and his family began to look for his return. One, two, three days more elapsed, and they saw nothing of him. When two weeks had gone by and he did not appear his wife began to worry, for he had told her to look for him in from a week to ten days. Still another week slipped by and no sign of the father of the family.

Mrs. MacTavish, now thoroughly alarmed, determined to go to New Amsterdam to learn if her husband had been there. Her only route was by land, and in those days there was no public conveyance. So the family horse was saddled, saddlebags were put on him, containing, besides clothing, a stock of provisions, and leaving Alex, a boy of sixteen, in charge of the other children, she sallied forth on her quest.

Having reached the bank of the East river, leaving her horse, she was ferried across and proceeded to the house of Dietrich Van Vorst, who she knew was accustomed to buy her husband's produce. There she met with a shock. Van Vorst told her that he had seen nothing of her husband. Had MacTavish been there Van Vorst would undoubtedly have seen him, for the town was then a mere cluster of houses gathered about the Battery.

Mrs. MacTavish, though without hope of receiving a different answer, asked others the same question. No one had seen MacTavish. What had become of him? The weather had been fair at New Amsterdam and at the MacTavish home. There could have been no storm to swamp the little boat, nor had there been any fog. The disappearance of the husband and father was a mystery.

There was nothing for the poor woman to do but go back to her home and wait. She started, hoping that she might find her husband there on her arrival. She was disappointed. He had neither come nor sent any word.

Every day that passed added to the discouragement of the mother and her children. One day, a month after MacTavish had sailed away, a neighbor living some ten miles eastward of the MacTavishes went to New Amsterdam. Hearing that he was going, she sent to him requesting him to make inquiries in the town with a view of getting news of her husband. The traveler returned and said that a British ship had arrived and reported having seen off Sandy Hook a deserted fishing smack, with nothing whatever in her except a few scattered potatoes and onions. She was not considered worth bringing in and left where she was. When last seen she was drifting southward along the New Jersey coast.

It was believed that this was MacTavish's boat. If so he must be alive. But why had he deserted her? What had he done with his stock of vegetables? And why had he not returned to his home? In these days men's disappearances are usually attributed to a woman's influence, and the missing man's accounts are investigated. But at that time the women were all married and settled in their homes when very young, and their time was all spent in taking care of their numerous progeny. As to funds, MacTavish had only what his cargo of vegetables would bring, a matter of about $20 in the currency of the present day. Moreover, Mrs. MacTavish was as sure of her husband's affection for her and his children as she was of the rising and the falling of the tide. After the finding of the fishing smack she believed that he was alive. What was keeping him away from her she could not know, but she believed that some day he would return to her. He might do so when she was away, and in this case she wished that he might find everything in condition for his reception. He had always occupied a bedroom alone. His wife kept his room just as it was when he went away so that should he return at night it would be ready for him. Whether her comfort was at the bottom of her action is uncertain. It is likely that the poor woman was trying to comfort herself in knowing that his room was as it had always been and in thinking that it would in time be again occupied.

Two years passed, and not a word was heard from MacTavish. Then one day the family on Long Island received a terrible scare. Toward evening of an autumn day a sail was seen to the westward, much nearer the coast than it was usual for ships to pass. As it came nearer its hull was seen to be very low and its masts very high, enabling it to carry a large amount of canvas. It floated no flag.

These were the days of the buccaneers, whose depredations were largely on the Spanish main intercepting galleons laden with gold from the mines of Mexico, but not averse to attacking any merchantman worth making a prize or ravaging a craft. Long Island had received one or two such visitors though there was scarcely enough plunder among the scattered settlers to make a landing worth while.

The fears of the MacTavish family were confirmed by seeing a horseman come dashing eastward, who passed the house without stopping, shouting: "A pirate! She's coming up the coast. Go inland as quick as you can!"

Mrs. MacTavish cast a glance at the rakish vessel and, gathering the few valuables of small compass she possessed and taking her children, ran as fast as possible and kept running until she had put several miles between them all and the coast. Coming to a thicket, she entered it, and, sinking on the ground, the family occupied themselves in regaining their exhausted breath.

They remained there the rest of the day. At evening they saw from their hiding place the man who had warned them and called to him. He was looking for them to tell them that he had seen a man dressed in the fashion of a buccaneer on their farm. A fog had rolled in from the ocean and enveloped the pirate ship. They should make sure that the pirate he had seen was not there before they returned. Then he rode away.

Mrs. MacTavish kept her children in the thicket till late that night. Then they began to cry for food, and she concluded to take them to a point near the farm, leave them there and go forward herself to reconnoiter. It was after midnight when she came to a clump of trees a short distance from her house. Leaving the children in care of Alex, she stole forward. There was no sound except the splashing of the waves on the beach beyond nor sign of any one within the building. The fog had cleared away, and the moon in the third quarter shone brightly. Entering the house, she listened. The door of her husband's room was open, and she heard some one breathing in sleep. Tiptoeing to where she could get a view of the chamber, she looked inside. A man was sleeping in the bed.

She drew back. Clothes were on a chair—clothes that she recognized as a pirate's garb. Several pistols and knives lay on a table. The man in the bed must be the pirate who had been seen in the place. She was about to retire in terror when, casting a glance at the buccaneer's face, lighted by the moon, something in it reminded her of her husband. Advancing to get a nearer view, she struck a chair. The man opened his eyes.

"Mary!" he exclaimed, and, throwing off the covers and jumping out of bed, he clasped her in his arms.

Her thought that her husband might return when she was away and find his room ready for him was realized.

After the children had been brought in and the younger ones had been embraced by their father and put to bed MacTavish told his story. On his voyage to New Amsterdam he had been met by a buccaneer, who appropriated his vegetables and gave him the option of joining the pirate crew or walking the plank. He had chosen the former alternative, hoping eventually to make his escape. After he had lived a dreadful life in the West Indies for two years the buccaneer sailed for the north. She passed the Long Island coast and sent boats ashore to loot the settlers and gather provisions. MacTavish had been in one of the boats, and the coming of the fog enabled him to get away from his companions under its cover. The ship had sailed without him, and finding his home deserted, as was to be expected on account of the vicinity of the buccaneer, he had decided to go to bed and await the return of his family.

There was a long period of rejoicing in the MacTavish family at the return of the husband and father, and that was the last of his taking his produce to the city by water.

Mrs. MacTavish lived to be an old woman, and to the day of her death when any one of the family was away from home she would keep the absent one's room ready that it might be occupied by its accustomed inmate. There were frequent departures, but no one of the family ever returned in a pirate's garb.

GIN PILLS Brought Relief

Larder Lake, Ont., March 26th.

"I had been suffering for some time with my Kidneys and Urine. I was constantly passing water, which was very scanty, sometimes as many as thirty times a day. Each time the pain was something awful, and no rest at night.

I heard of your GIN PILLS and decided to give them a trial at once. I sent my chum 60 miles to get them and I am pleased to inform you that in less than six hours, I felt relief.

In two days, the pain had left me entirely. I took about half a box and today I feel as well as ever and my kidneys are acting quite natural again."

TORONTO WOMAN WELL AGAIN

Freed From Bearing Down Pains, Backache and Pain in Side by Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Toronto, Ont.—"Last October, I wrote to you for advice as I was completely run down, had bearing down sensation in the lower part of bowels, backache, and pain in the side. I also suffered terribly from gas. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am now entirely free from pain in back and bowels and am stronger in every way. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound highly to all expectant mothers."—Mrs. E. WANDBY, 82 Logan Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

Consider Well This Advice.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for nearly forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

HE WAS SQUARE

By MARTHA V. MONROE

"That new hand I hired today," said Farmer Jinks, "is the homeliest man I ever set eyes on. He's long limbed, knotty jointed, red headed, freckled, clear eyed, snaggle toothed, and when he smiles one would suppose he had the stomach ache."

The farmer spoke these words early in July, when the wheat was being cut. One day in August, when the corn was ready to be gathered, Newton Simmonds stepped up to his employer and said:

"Mr. Simmonds, would y' mind my keepin' company with your darter, expectin' to marry her?"

"What do you mean, you red headed galoot?"

"Just what I say. Eunice is the purtiest gal I ever seen, and I'm dead gone on her. But I wouldn't say anything to her about it without gittin' your permit. There ain't nothin' underhanded about me."

"See here, Newt," said the farmer, struck with the man's sense of honor, "my daughter is spoken for. She's goin' to marry Hasbrouk's son; you're not in the race at all. Now just put it out of your head."

"I won't put it outen my head because I can't, but I won't say nothin' to Eunice, either, seein' you don't want me too. When a man brings up a darter, the apple of his eye, its darn mean for a feller he don't want to have her to go steal her away from him."

"You're dead right, Newt. I'm very much pleased to hear you talk like that."

This dialogue occurred in the barn, and the subject of it, Eunice Jenks, was in the chicken house gathering eggs at the time, so she heard every word of it. She was engaged to marry young Tom Hasbrouk and satisfied to do so, for he would one day own the Hasbrouk farm, and her parents desired the match.

Farmer Jenks said nothing to his daughter as to the new application for her hand. One day soon after it was made he saw Eunice walk down to where Simmonds was at work. She chatted with the farm hand for a few minutes, then went on her way to the village. Her father thought nothing of this and soon forgot all about it.

The next day while Simmonds was cutting hay he saw Hasbrouk walking rapidly toward Simmonds, who was driving a reaper. Simmonds stopped his team and Hasbrouk stood by him talking angrily, though Jenks could not hear what was said. Presently Simmonds jumped down from his seat and aimed a blow at Hasbrouk. Then followed a rough and tumble fight in which Simmonds downed Hasbrouk and sat on him. Presently he let his enemy up and Hasbrouk walked away.

"That must be about Eunice," said the farmer. "I wonder how Tom got on to the fact that Newt wants her?"

From a window Eunice had watched the fight and seen her lover worsted. She had been the cause of the trouble but this did not prevent her from going out later to Simmonds and asking him what was the matter between him and Hasbrouk.

"He riled me with his talk," Simmonds replied.

"Talk about what?"

Simmonds hesitated for a moment, then said, "Reckon, Miss Jenks, you'll have to ask Hasbrouk about that."

Eunice didn't press the matter, because she knew all about the cause of the trouble already.

"Dad," she said one day not long after this episode, "it's all up between Tom and me."

"What!" exclaimed the astonished parent.

"I reckon I don't want him."

"I'm mighty sorry about that," said the farmer, disappointed. "I kind o' thought you was provided for in case anything should happen to me. What's the matter?"

"Oh, nothin'; we just don't happen to work in harness together."

The farmer, knowing that he could not force his daughter into a match that did not please her, said no more. He must wait for some other suitor for his daughter's hand. Who that suitor would be he did not know. Eunice went quite often to the store and he rather suspected that one of the clerks there had excited her sympathies.

One day Newt stepped up to him and said:

"I hope y' won't blame me, Mr. Simmonds."

"Blame you for what?"

"Why, Eunice told me to come to you to ask you for her."

"Eunice told you to ask me for her! What d' y' mean?"

"That's what she said for me to do. I told her you wouldn't like it. I hope you won't blame me."

The farmer looked at his employee some time before he replied. At last he said:

"No, Newt, I don't blame you. You're the soul of honor. If there's any blame in the matter it belongs to Eunice. I'll see her and find out what it means. I don't propose that she shall treat an honest feller like you any way but square."

The farmer conferred with his daughter with the result that he gave his consent for her to marry the homely farm hand. "I'd ruther you'd marry the ugliest man on earth," he said to her, "than one that wasn't square, and Newt is squar'."

MATCHING PEARLS.

Orientals Believe In Sex and Affinity In the Gems.

Most brides are partial to pearls, and in some eastern countries no other jewels are allowed to figure among the bridal ornaments.

In Persia the notion prevails that the pearls themselves are susceptible of married bliss. Among the hereditary jewelers of the Persian court it is an article of faith that pearls have sex and that every one has its mate, its equal in size and beauty. The surest way to avoid the dreaded pearl disease is to mount the pearls in pairs. If deprived of their mates they languish and lose luster; hence the desire to match pearls which has led to such extravagance.

It is said that the great glory of the ropes of pearls given to Queen Alexandra by some of the princes of India was the perfect matching of almost all of the pearls. Thus the eastern experts believed they were assuring long life for these jewels. It is believed to foretell misfortune for the owner of pearls when they contract the pearl disease.

Some readers may remember that the first whisper of coming misfortune for the beautiful Empress Eugenie arose when the news was spread abroad that her pearls were spotted and crumbling away. Of course, the French jewelers would have derided the eastern notion of sex and affinity in pearls, but the keepers of the shah's jewels believe in it, and they have preserved many of the crown jewels for centuries. Modern jewelers are always on the lookout for opportunities of matching pearls. You do not find them so anxious to match diamonds or rubies. And it is curious that persistent searching generally discovers that all pearls have doubles in size, luster and weight.—New York Sun.

Lords of the Raven.

According to Scottish Highlanders the appearance of the raven foreshadows death and disaster to the chiefs of the great clan Campbell. The other day the heir presumptive to the Dukedom of Argyll, Lord Archibald Campbell, passed away at Inverary, the headquarters of the clan. Prior to the death of his lordship the townsfolk were struck with the behaviour of the ravens on Duniquaich, the well-known hill close to Inverary Castle. Rare as that bird now is in many parts of Scotland, it was lately observed in scores between the castle and the hill, and as many as five were seen together on the day previous to Lord Archibald's death, though they are all supposed to be far up the glen preparatory to nesting. When Lord Archibald's father, the late Duke of Argyll, died, ravens are said to have hovered over the hill, circling round and round the steep, wooded slopes.—Ireland's Own.

The Difference.

Harry—Do you know the difference between capital and labor?

Jack—No.

Harry—Well, if I loaned you 25 cents that would be capital, and if I tried to get it back that would be labor.

THE SOUTHERN CROSS.

Its Name Does Not Quite Fit This Wondrous Constellation.

The Southern Cross, wonderful alike to those living in the southern half of the world and to the tourist thereto, is one of the most conspicuous and interesting of all the southern configurations.

Situated at a distance of about thirty degrees from the south pole it is plainly visible in all regions south of the equator, and also to some distance north, about as far as the tropic of Cancer. The farther south one travels the higher in the heavens will appear the cross, and naturally the more conspicuous it becomes.

It seems to have received its name, not like the northern constellations from the ancients, but, like most of the southern configurations from the Portuguese navigators, during their explorations into the southern waters. It is said that when Dante came out from "Inferno" he declared that he had seen a mighty cross set in the southern firmament, and the navigators set about to find such a figure and settled upon this one as best fulfilling the conditions. That it is difficult, at first glance, to picture this as a true cross, is not surprising, for had it been named the "kite," a much closer representation could have been imagined. The so called "false cross," midway between the cross and the bright star Canopus, although composed of fainter stars, is much more regular and symmetrical in shape.

Taken all in all, this constellation of the Southern Cross, which has been the wonder of centuries, still holds its place as a remarkable curiosity, even with the advance of astronomical investigation, and with the data obtained from the spectroscope and the photograph, our efforts still find unlimited problems yet to be solved. And above all others, that of the Southern Cross is yet far from a complete solution.—Leon Campbell in "Peru Today."

SCARF PIN FOR MR. ALF. HEYES

Fellow Employes at C.G.E. Made Presentation

About twenty fellow workmen and friends assembled at the White House on Thursday evening last to bid farewell to Mr. Alfred Heyes, who is returning to the Old Country. A very pleasant evening was spent and at the conclusion of the festivities Mr. Arthur Paget presented to Mr. Heyes with a valuable scarf pin, on behalf of the oil switch department of the C.G.E. On making the presentation, Mr. Paget in a few well chosen words, expressed the general feeling of regret that was shared by the entire department, at the loss of Mr. Heyes, and sincerely trusted that in his new sphere, Mr. Heyes would have his lot cast among people who would be able to appreciate his many sterling qualities. Several other fellow workmen also testified to the recipient's popularity and expressed good wishes for his future well being.

Mr. Heyes thanked his friends briefly, but was too much overcome to do justice to his reputation for fluent speaking. He mentioned however, that after settling up the family affairs, which were the reason of his leaving Peterboro, he might possibly return, and settle down in the place where he had spent so many happy hours.

The evening was brought to a close by singing "For he's a jolly good fellow," and "The King."

PATRIOTIC SERMON

At St. John's Church by Rev. Canon Davidson

A patriotic sermon was preached by Canon Davidson at St. John's on Sunday evening, in connection with Thanksgiving Day. The preacher showed that national strength did not so much lie in bulk and numbers as in strong character and distinct and united aim at lofty national objects. If Canada stood, as was claimed, for "equality of opportunity," we must set ourselves more vigorously to give a square chance to all newcomers to our country, and to encourage men without reference to position or racial distinctions to do their best as our fellow citizens. This was in line with their mercy and love of God. Our interests should be extended so as to include people outside our social business or church connections, and our thoughts and ambitious centred on the advancement of Canada and the Kingdom of Heaven. Thus would we become broader and more generous in our conceptions and sympathies which was one main purpose of religion.

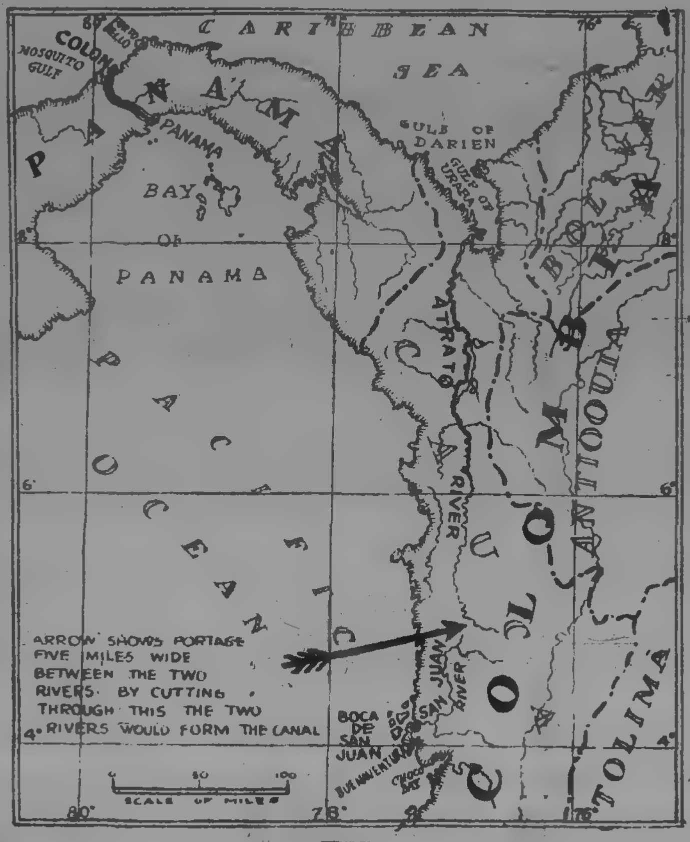
At the conclusion of the sermon "O Canada" was sung, followed by the National Anthem.

Hospital Patients

Mr. Leonard Shaughnessy, formerly of this city, and of late employed near Port Hope as a lineman, was taken suddenly ill in Port Hope Sunday, and was brought to this city yesterday morning and taken to St. Joseph's Hospital. He was suffering from appendicitis, and his condition is very critical.

Miss Loretta Goselin, daughter of Mr. I. Goselin, Romaine street, was suddenly seized yesterday afternoon with appendicitis and was removed this morning to St. Joseph's Hospital, where she was operated on. Latest reports state that the operation was successful, and her recovery is practically assured.

ENGLAND GETS COLOMBIAN CANAL OPTION SOUGHT BY UNITED STATES, IS REPORT



ARROW SHOWS PORTAGE FIVE MILES WIDE BETWEEN THE TWO RIVERS. BY CUTTING THROUGH THIS THE TWO RIVERS WOULD FORM THE CANAL

That the United States in the last month of the Taft regime tried to obtain an option for an ocean to ocean canal route through Colombia via the Atrato River is shown in documents received by Jose Carlos Martello, Colombian Consul at New Orleans, La.

Ernest Klepetko, a mining engineer who passed some time in Panama en route from Peru to his home in New York, brought the report that officials of the Isthmian Canal Commission are convinced that an understanding has been reached whereby the government of Great Britain will build the canal for which the United States sought an option. It is said plans for the work already have been drawn.

NEW CHURCH FOR ROMAN CATHOLICS OF EAST CITY

May be Erebted on the Hospital Grounds

It was announced in St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday that a new Roman Catholic Church would in the near future be erected in East City. Since the Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D. has been raised to the Episcopate this section of the city has been supplied with a separate school and now His Lordship is further satisfying the wants of that portion of his flock by arranging for a new church.

Very Rev. Dean McColl informed the Review this morning that the site has not as yet been selected but there is a possibility of it being erected on the hospital grounds.

All those now attending St. Peter's and who reside on the east side of the Otonabee River, will attend the new church. The style of edifice has not as yet been decided.

CONVENTION OF CITY AND COUNTY TEACHERS

The annual convention of the teachers of the city and county of Peterboro, is to be held in this city this week.

On Thursday evening the convention will be addressed by D. J. Goggin, LL.D., of the Education Department, Toronto, on the subject— "A Practical Education."

Dr. Goggin will deal with the common subjects of study and also with the more [illegible] to the course.

Dr. Goggin is an able and fluent speaker and his address should appeal to all interested in education.

The general public are cordially invited to attend this meeting which will be held in the assembly room of the Collegiate Institute.

A short musical programme will precede the address. Admission free. Programme to begin at 8 p.m.

TWO MONUMENTS WERE UNVEILED

Local Woodmen Took Part in Ceremony at Lindsay

Some thirty members of Sherwood Forest Camp No. 50, Woodmen of the World, journeyed to Lindsay yesterday afternoon, where the unveiling of two monuments to deceased brethren was held. One of the monuments erected was to the memory of the late Thos. Graham, a brother of Mr. Andrew Graham, of this city. Mr Ed. Waterman acted as Master of Ceremonies.

CLOSING ADDRESS AT CONVENTION

To-night will see the close of the big Baptist convention, with the Rev. John MacNeil, of Toronto, as speaker. Mr. MacNeill is a powerful speaker and the public will doubtless be well repaid for their attendance to-night.

ISAACS CHIEF JUSTICE.

British Attorney-General Succeeds Lord Alverstone.

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The appointment of Sir Rufus Isaacs, the Attorney-General, as Lord Chief Justice, was officially announced Saturday. He succeeds Baron Alverstone, who recently resigned. Sir J. A. Simon, Solicitor-General, is appointed to the Attorney-Generalship. Stanley Owen Buckmaster succeeds to the Solicitor-Generalship. Baron Alverstone has been created a viscount.

The appointment of Sir Rufus Daniel Isaacs to succeed Lord Alverstone was generally expected, although in some quarters his connection with the unpleasant Marconi episode was regarded as seriously prejudicial to his prospects. Sir Rufus is the first member of the Jewish faith to hold the high office to which he now succeeds. Born in London 53 years ago, he was educated in the University College School and later at Brussels and Hanover. He became a bencher of the Middle Temple in 1904, six years after being made a K.C., and entered Parliament as Liberal member for Reading in 1904, having since continued to represent that constituency.

SUNDAY MOVIES UPHELD.

Alberta Court Sustains Appeal From Fine of Lesser Tribunal.

EDMONTON, Alta., Oct. 21.—Operation of moving picture theatres on Sundays, by placing collection plates at the doors, in lieu of selling regular admission tickets is not, in violation, directly or indirectly, of the Lord's Day Act in Alberta, according to a majority judgment just handed down by the Supreme Court of the province sitting in Edmonton.

The ruling followed certiorari proceedings in the case of Grant Churchill, an American, who with three other theatre-owners in Edmonton, was fined $40 and costs by Inspector Raven in the municipal court on the charge of opening their houses on Sunday.

The ruling touched numerous points, one being that the fiat was not issued by the Attorney-General of the province, though he was in Alberta at the time. L. F. Clarry, Deputy Attorney-General, intimates that the cases will not be appeal to a higher court, but that another line may be adopted by the crown to enforce the law.

FORESTERS AT COMMUNION

Yesterday morning at St. Peter's Cathedral the members of the local branch of the Catholic Order of Foresters attended eight o'clock mass and received Holy Communion in a body. About one hundred and fifty were present. A requiem high mass for the deceased members was sung by Rev. Dean McColl, and at the conclusion His Lordship Bishop O-Brien spoke a few words commending the Order on the fairly large turnout and assuring them of his hearty approval of their beautiful and [illegible] practice of assembling at different times during the years for the purpose of praying for the departed brothers.

INCREASE IN THE BUDGET

Report Recommending That $225,000 be Raised is Adopted

The Baptists are going in for greater things this year as is evidenced by the increase in the budget. That committee reported at the session on Saturday afternoon recommending that $225,000 be raised and the report was adopted.

Women's Moreen Underskirts

THESE SKIRTS ARE OF $1.25, $1.69 AND $1.98 VALUES, the reason that they are priced so low, being that the manufacturer made them a little wider than present style demands. But considering the splendid value one receives for 69c, it is a trifling task to alter the skirts to prevailing narrow proportions. Made of a very good quality English Moreen, in black, pearl, dark grey, navy, and black and white plaid. Each Skirt has a deep fancy flounce, and every woman who is familiar with the long service that a good Moreen renders, cannot fail to see what a big saving there is in these Skirts on Wednesday. DR. SULLIVAN DEALS WITH PROTESTANTISM

AN APPEAL TO HISTORY

He is not an Ex-priest But is Often Taken for a Priest—Is Home Ruler

The Protestant Federation held two meetings on Sunday in the Opera House for the purpose of giving the general public an opportunity of hearing Rev. Dr. Sullivan, of Olivet Baptist Church, Montreal, speak on the subject of Protestantism.

Dr. Sullivan has been attending the Baptist Convention at Murray street Church, and has given several addresses before that body on subjects relating to Roman Catholicism.

NOT AN EX-PRIEST.

It was announced in the press that Dr. Sullivan was a converted priest, but this was contradicted by the doctor himself at the Opera House. He had been out of the R.C. Church nearly thirty years. He said that he was often taken for a priest. He supposed it was because of his "beautiful Irish face" that the Catholic students in Montreal saluted him. He said he did not blame those who had accused him of being an ex-priest. They might have said worse, and he gave them full absolution.

It would take up too much space to give a full account of all that Dr. Sullivan said, and then it would not give a fair account of the man or his message.

Dr. Sullivan is not the proverbial bull in a china shop. He is an Irishman with a rich brogue, and he can perhaps wield the shilalah on occasion, but he is very sparing with that thorny weapon.

He said that the age of mud-slinging was gone, but he hoped the age of insipid Christianity had come, when men were afraid to give a reason for the faith that was in them.

HISTORY OF PROTESTANTISM.

His subject for the afternoon was "The History of Protestantism." He covered a large stretch of history and showed how Protestantism first came into existence, not with Henry VIII. or Luther, but with John Huss, Wycliffe, &c.

He traced the history of Christian churches from the days of the Apostles. He gave great credit to the early Roman Church when martyrs had suffered horrible tortures under Nero. But he showed how it had become corrupt by the introduction of pagan superstition and ritual which took the place of the simple faith of the early Christians. For instance, 'Maia was substituted for Mary, and from this sprang the worship of the Virgin Mary. He warned Protestants against any tendency towards disrespect for the mother of Jesus. They need not err on that side because Romanists have erred upon the other and made Mary equal with the Son of God Himself.

Dr. Sullivan said that if ever there was to be a reunion of Christendom it would be along the line of historical study. All these errors of Catholicism would be dissipated in the clear light of history.

THE CONFESSIONAL.

The confessional was first of all a public affair, something like the Methodist class-meeting. Then there were appointed elders to hear, in private, confessions which were not fit to be uttered in public, and from this grew the professional priesthood and the confessional. "No man," said Dr. Sullivan, "has any right to say, 'I absolve thee,' for all sin is against God and must be confessed to God, and only God can give absolution."

He told how four firemen were killed in Montreal. Three of them were Roman Catholics, and they were buried at the expense of the city. At the conclusion of the funeral the Roman Catholic Bishop sent in a bill for $400 for Masses said for the souls of the three firemen whom they had buried. "I raised my voice against it," said the doctor. "Though I honor the memory of my dead mother who was an ardent Roman Catholic, I could not stand such a piece of imposition."

ROME AND POLITICS.

Dealing with the political side of Romanism, he said that it began with Leo the First, and Gregory, the two greatest men in the Church. The Bishop's interference with the press in Quebec, and the trouble between the North and South of Ireland were not one of religion or creed. There was no real quarrel between the French and English in Canada. The bitterness which existed was due to the political influence of the priests, whose policy is to keep the people in ignorance.

The lecturer said that Protestantism was primitive Christianity, the religion of John, Peter and Paul. He asked: Had Protestantism done nothing for the world? "The Protestant nations are leading the vanguard of civilization.

EVENING MEETING.

At the evening meeting Dr. Sullivan said that, as he understood it, he was the real Catholic. He differentiated between the Catholicism of politics and superstition, and that of the simple faith of the fathers.

He believed that Romanism was not holding its own. The Bishops are past-masters in making politicians believe they have power. They were making a big display, but that was part of their business to scare the politicians.

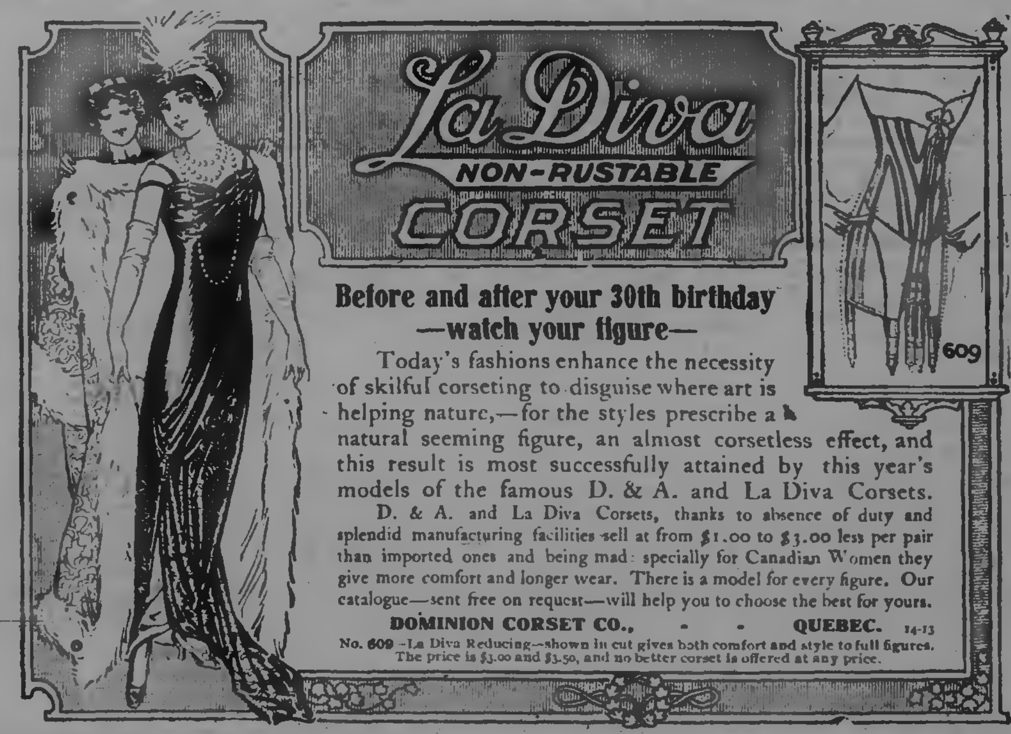
A HOME RULER.

He said he was in favor of Home Rule, but he would have it spelt with an H. and not with an R. Rome was not progressing in England. The Roman Church in England is no larger to-day than it was fifty years ago.

"No religion, no church has any future that does not appeal to the reason of the people," said Dr. Sullivan. "The boys of to-day are standing upon our shoulders, and they are looking into the future and they will see things that we never dreamed of."

Salmon well minced and mixed with a yolk of egg and sufficient lemon, pepper and salt to season well, makes a delicious filling for sandwiches. It is equally good with white or brown bread.

When the suede belt or purse becomes greasy looking, try rubbing it with a fine emery paper. It will look like new.



La Diva NON-RUSTABLE CORSET

Before and after your 30th birthday —watch your figure—

Today's fashions enhance the necessity of skilful corseting to disguise where art is helping nature,—for the styles prescribe a natural seeming figure, an almost corsetless effect, and this result is most successfully attained by this year's models of the famous D. & A. and La Diva Corsets.

D. & A. and La Diva Corsets, thanks to absence of duty and splendid manufacturing facilities sell at from $1.00 to $3.00 less per pair than imported ones and being made specially for Canadian Women they give more comfort and longer wear. There is a model for every figure. Our catalogue—sent free on request—will help you to choose the best for yours.

DOMINION CORSET CO., - - QUEBEC. 14-13

No. 609 —La Diva Reducing—shown in cut gives both comfort and style to full figures. The price is $3.00 and $3.50, and no better corset is offered at any price.

HELPLESS CRIPPLE FROM RHEUMATISM

Toronto Lady Took "Fruit-a-tives" And Cured Herself.

4 HOME PLACE, TORONTO,
DEC. 15th. 1909

"I was a helpless cripple from Rheumatism for nearly a year. All down the right side, the pain was dreadful and I could not move for the agony. I was treated by two physicians without benefit. I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised and decided to try them. After taking one box, I was much better.

When I had taken three boxes, I could use my arm and the pain was almost gone.

After taking five boxes, I was entirely well again. The cure of my case by "Fruit-a-tives" was indeed splendid because all the doctors failed to even relieve me. "Fruit-a-tives" cured me."

PUZZLES OF SLEEP.

Noise and Slumber and the Marvelous Rapidity of Dreams.

Both Bismarck and Pepys found that noise enhanced the value of a night's rest. Bismarck confided in his old age to an interviewer that he could "never sleep in Berlin at night when it is quiet, but as soon as the noise begins, about 4 o'clock in the morning, I can sleep a little and get my rest for the day."

Pepys records in his diary on Sept. 27, 1661, that he slept at Welling "and still remember it that of all the nights that ever I slept in my life I never did pass a night with more epicurism of sleep; there being now and then a noise of people that waked me, and then it was a very rainy night, and then I was a little weary, that what between waking and then sleeping again, one after another, I never had so much content in all my life."

The probability that we get snatches of sleep at odd moments when we suppose ourselves to have remained continuously awake is supported by the phenomena of dreams. Mark Twain accounted for his own "disappearing visitor" by the belief that he had unconsciously had a very short nap, and many have explained visions of ghosts as due to dreams during such short naps.

For nothing is better established in connection with dreams than that an apparently very long one can occur during an almost infinitesimal time. Alfred Maury had a long, vivid dream of the reign of terror, including the trial of himself before the revolutionary tribunal and his execution, and was able to show that it all happened during the moment of awakening by the fall of a rod from the bed canopy upon his neck.—London Chronicle.

Nogi's Nerve Tonic.

Having been dedicated to the profession of arms, General Nogi was taken, while still a small boy, to see a criminal decapitated and was rebuked for shuddering at the spectacle. After nightfall, when all was darkness and silence, he was required to go alone to the burial ground and bring back the culprit's head. The ordeal was designed to strengthen his nerves and teach him to fear nothing, living or dead.—Francis E. Leupp in Atlantic.

Our Language.

An intelligent foreigner is said to have expressed himself after the following fashion on the absurdities of the English language: "When I discovered that I was quick, I was fast; if I stood firm, I was fast; if I spent too freely, I was fast, and that not to eat was to fast. I was discouraged. But when I came across the sentence, 'The first one won one $1 prize,' I was tempted to give up English and learn some other language."

Neatly Turned.

Jack—I hear that you called on your girl's father. How did you come out?
Tom—So so! I said to him, "Mr. X., I love your daughter." He said, "So do I; now let's talk of something else."
Jack—And then—
Tom—Then—well, we talked of something else.—Boston Transcript.

IS LINK WITH NELSON

AGED TORONTO WOMAN HAD UNCLE ON "VICTORY."

Mrs. John Campbell Is Niece of a Gunner's Mate on Board Famous Flagship at Trafalgar and Can Well Remember His Stories of the Great Sea Fight—Rose High In His Profession.

She was just a gentle, kindly faced old woman who lay and smiled in the sunshine. 'Here's a gentleman to see you,'" said her daughter, and a slim hand came groping out from beneath the bedspread, till it met the fingers of the stranger and enclosed them in a grasp, the strength of which was a surprise.

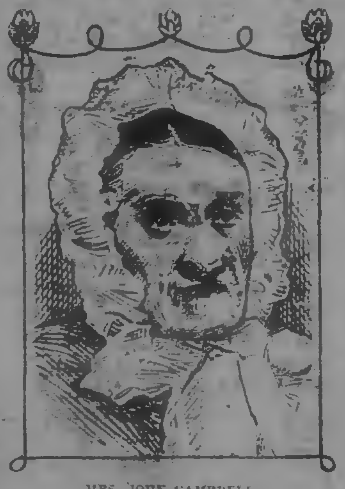
The younger woman stooped beside the bed. "He wants to speak to you about your uncle, who was at the battle of Trafalgar," she explained, and a flush of pride and pleasure came to the wrinkled cheeks of the old lady.

She is Mrs. John Campbell, aged eighty-two years, and lives with a married daughter at 15 Bishop street, Toronto, says a writer in The Toronto Telegram.

Her uncle, John McMurchy, of Mulrease, in the Isle of Kilmeny, off the coast of Argyllshire, was a gunner's mate aboard the Victory at the battle of Trafalgar, where an English fleet of twenty-seven ships defeated the combined fleets of France and Spain, numbering thirty-three ships in all. Mrs. Campbell has been in this country for thirty-three years. She is a widow, who has been blind for nearly half a century. With increasing age slight deafness has come upon her. But her mind is still clear as to the manner of man her uncle was.

"A tall man and strong," she said when questioned regarding him. "Last time I saw him his face was clear and bright as a young man's should be. He fought the French for twenty-four years. Aye, twenty-four years," she mused. "Was 'pressed' when he was nineteen, taken prisoner at his first fight, and held in France for a year; but he made them pay for that—he made them pay for that.

"A great and a brave man he was. Gentlemen came from all o'er the country to speak tae him of Nelson an' the fights wi' the French." She was losing the preciseness of speech which marked her first words. "I couldna tell ye all that was said for some of the men only spoke English, an' t'was kin' o' hard on me those days was English, for I first learned the Gaelic—an' I hae it yet," she said proudly.



MRS. JOHN CAMPBELL.

"But I was tellin' ye about my Uncle McMurchy, the graun' man that he was. Reared me like a very daughter, he did, for he had neither chick nor child of his ain. Oft I hae heard him tell o' that bluidy battle o' Trafalgar. He was gunner's mate on the Victory, an' it was his crew helped fire the first broadside. An' I've heard him tell o' the shot which felled Nelson, an' how the admiral raised himsel' up on his elbow an' continued gien' orders whiles the life's bluid ebbed away.

An' I mind him tellin' the gentlemen who came to see him, that Nelson truly said, 'Thank God, I ha' done my duty,' before he died, to say naething o' words to the effect that the enemy were beaten.

"He helped carry Nelson below an' then went back to the fight, where the bluid was boilin' in the men that served the guns that day, so that some men were crying, and the wicked among them were swearing terrible things against the enemy—an' they fought, an' fought, till they won the battle. For so my uncle told me an' others beside.

"Some brave thing my uncle did about the time of the battle of Trafalgar—I dinna ken just what t'was now, for he was not the man to talk over much of what things he had done—led the captain of the ship to say, 'McMurchy, ye can hae whatever you like; name it, an' it will be given tae ye.'" she smiled. "An' what do you suppose he asked for? Why, nothing more or less than that half of his pension should be paid to his wife after his death. She was much younger than him, and she lived to get about thirty pounds a year from the Government, to say nothing o' prize money, an' the like, which had made my uncle quite a well-to-do man."

Her voice began to falter a little, but after a moment's pause she went on. "Oh, ay, I come o' guid stock. My uncle was as high rank as he could be when he left the service, an' all the officers had a guid word for him, for he was a graun fighter an' a great an' willing worker." She paused again, then, "Why wouldn't he be?" she said. "All his fowk were born beside the sea, or made their living on it, captains an' sailors, an' fishermen, an' a'. But I'll be bidding you 'good-bye,'" she said suddenly. "I'm tired wi' talkin', though it's done me a deal o' good to speak to someone concerning my uncle who fought at Trafalgar, an' many other places in the wars with the French an' the Spanish."

Potatoes should boil slowly to prevent the skins from curling off.

A Somnambulist

By ALBERT J. KENYON

My uncle, with whom I went to live at the death of my mother—my father had died when I was an infant—had an only child, a daughter, Alice. She was much younger than I, and I saw very little of her, for when she was ten years old I went to college, and after completing an academic course I studied a profession. When I returned after having finished my education she was a girl of seventeen. One day my uncle called me into his study and said to me:

"As you know, Alice has inherited a fortune from her mother. If the property were mine to will I would leave half of it to you. I wish that you and Alice would make a match, for I consider you both as my children and would like you to enjoy the fortune in common. I can do nothing to bring about such a result and shall not mention my desire to Alice. I am her guardian under her mother's will, with power to appoint a successor to take my place if I should die before Alice comes of age. I have appointed you to the position in case a successor becomes necessary, for I know of no one else in whom I have the confidence I have in you."

My uncle died about a year after speaking these words to me, and I became Alice's guardian. After her mother's death her father had taken in a woman to care for the child and the house at the same time. My uncle on his death had told us all that after his demise we had better keep everything as it was, living in the house as we had been doing. Therefore we made no change. I in a measure filled my uncle's place, and this was facilitated by my being Alice's guardian, since it gave me the control of the funds. Mrs. Withers, the housekeeper, I had had little to do with, since I had been so much of the time away.

The weak point in the accomplishment of what my uncle had desired was that I was obliged to antagonize Mrs. Withers, who, having brought up Alice from a child, had great influence over her. She endeavored to poison Alice against me, but Alice had always been very fond of her "big brother," as she called me, and the poison process was not easy. Nevertheless, the gap between myself and Mrs. Withers widened as time passed and poor Alice was constantly obliged to listen to attacks upon me by the housekeeper. When every other artifice failed the latter began to insinuate that I was managing Alice's estate badly, and from that it was intimated that I was gradually appropriating it to myself.

I kept the papers pertaining to the estate in a safe, where my uncle had always kept them. Before he died he gave me the combination, telling me that no one but himself knew it previous to his imparting it to me. One day I went to the safe to look for a receipt I had taken for moneys expended for Alice's estate, but could not find it. After satisfying myself that it was not in the safe I was forced to the conclusion that I had failed to place it there. Some time after this I looked for another paper, and, not finding it in its place, it began to appear to me that either I was becoming very careless or some one was purloining my papers.

When a boy I had been caught once or twice walking in my sleep. I feared that the habit had returned to me and that I was taking papers from the safe myself while asleep. This view was partially confirmed by my waking up one night belaboring the furniture with a cane, dreaming that I was driving burglars from the house. I argued that if I had been a somnambulist on this occasion I might have been one before.

I began to notice a change in Alice's bearing toward me. Something seemed to pain her and cause her distant treatment of me at the same time. Then one day I was called upon to make a special accounting of my stewardship for Alice's estate. I found that so many papers had disappeared from the safe that it would be impossible for me to make a satisfactory accounting. At this time Alice acted in such a way toward me that I was convinced she was in the secret of my trouble, or, rather, that she had been told about it to my disadvantage.

By securing duplicate receipts for certain expenditures I managed to satisfy the court for the time being. But it was not long before I began to miss other papers and was in an agony because I saw ruin staring me in the face. I was convinced that while asleep I was making way with the papers, and since they were not to be found it was likely that I had destroyed them.

One night I was awakened by a shriek. I was standing in the door of the room containing the safe, in my nightshirt. Mrs. Withers was kneeling before the safe, which was open, staring at me. It was her shriek at being discovered that awakened me. Had she known I was asleep she might have escaped undetected.

That was the end of the mystery. She confessed that while I had walked in my sleep she had heard me repeating the safe combination and had made use of it to ruin me.

On Alice's account I failed to prosecute her, but since it was necessary to get rid of her, Alice and I, after a consultation, agreed to be married and remain as we were.

MARRY TO BECOME MEN.

In Korea Males Are Looked Upon as Children Until They Wed.

The Koreans marry very young, generally between the ages of twelve and fifteen. For a woman to reach twenty without marrying is considered a terrible thing. A peculiarity of these weddings is that they would appear to be a matter of interest to every one except the parties mostly concerned, who often see one another for the first time on the wedding morning. This is because in a Korean household the boys are kept apart from the girls, the father and the sons occupying the front of the house and the mother and daughters living in the rear of the establishment. Moreover, in their social life the boys are not allowed to mix with the gentler sex.

The parents and friends arrange the match in accordance with their own interests, and if both parties agree and the bargain is concluded the formalities are of the simplest. There is no religious ceremony and no legal contract.

Early on the wedding morn the best man arrives to tie the bridegroom's pigtail in a knot on the top of his head. This not only remains forever as an outward and visible sign of his condition, but entitles him to wear a hat for the first time in his life and to be treated as a man and enter public life. He may be a mere child, twelve years of age, but he has no longer any right to play with his boy friends and must choose his associates among old men.

He has now all civil rights and is expected to behave accordingly. If, on the contrary, a man is unable to afford the luxury of a home and a wife, he may reach the age of fifty, but he must still wear his pigtail down his back, has none of the advantages of citizenship and is expected to play with kites, marbles and such like. Any folly he may commit is excused in the same way as the naughtiness of a child who is not responsible for his actions.

The wedding ceremony itself is most simple. The whole function consists of a procession when the bride and bridegroom are conducted by their respective relations to a dais. There they are put face to face and probably, as already stated, see each other for the first time. They merely glance at one another, then bow, and the knot is tied indissolubly.—Wide World Magazine.

Fingers and Forks.

A New Yorker was speaking of a London horse show he attended.

"A feature of the show," he said, "was the magnificent riding of certain Arab chiefs. These chiefs gave a dinner one evening, an Arab dinner, and they ate the first course—kous kous—with their fingers.

"An Englishman asked for a fork for his kous kous. When it was brought to him a young chief said:

"'I beg your pardon, but I don't see how you can bear to eat with a fork.'

"'I,' the Englishman replied, 'was about to remark that I didn't see how you could bear to eat with your fingers.'

"'But my fingers,' said the Arab, 'are clean—clean. I know it. I see to it myself. But you, sir, how can you feel sure about the cleanness of your fork?'"—New York Tribune.

For a much-used ironing board, make two slips of heavy, unbleached cotton cloth and use it alternately to keep the board fresh and clean.

A delicious salad is made of bananas cut in slices, dipped in mayonnaise, rolled in minced nuts, and served on white lettuce heart leaves.

EDDIE COLLINS

John McGraw, the leader of the New York National League Club, who took second money in the recent world's series, has declared Edward Trowbridge Collins to be the greatest all-round ball player in existence. He formulated this idea with many other critics after Collins' recent performance in the post season baseball games. Collins is also a football player who has made the mark.

KICKED ON THE TIPS.

The Waiter Thought the Rule Should Not Work Both Ways.

"My bill at the cabaret restaurant on Broadway was $25, and when I gave the waiter a tip of a dollar he frowned."

The speaker was a banker from Duluth. He continued warmly:

"'What are you frowning about?' I asked the waiter. 'Isn't that a generous tip for a few minutes work on your part?'

"'In New York,' the man answered, 'the rule is always to give a tip of 10 per cent. Your bill, sir, called for a $2.50 tip. So, naturally, I feel a little aggrieved. But it is easy to see, sir, that you are not a New Yorker, and so it can't be expected that you'd know the rules.'

"Well, I pocketed the waiter's insult, and the next time I was in that neighborhood I dropped in on him again. This time I was alone, and, not being hungry, I only ate a $1.15 meal. When it was over I handed the waiter a tip of 11 cents. You ought to have seen his face. It was worse than before.

"'It's all right,' I assured him. 'It's according to the 10 per cent rule that you taught me. If a man's bill is exorbitant that makes no difference, according to the rule. Well, then, when a man's bill is small, it should make no difference, either.'

"The waiter glowered at me. He shook the 11 cents in his palm sarcastically. I said, as I rose to go:

"'And, by jove, it won't make any difference either. If you waiters insist on your 10 per cent for large amounts then you've got to take it for small amounts, too. At least, by jingo, you've got to take it from me. I'm from Duluth, but I know my way about.'"

The Duluth banker sighed heavily.

"But the fact remains," he said, "that ever since that waiter called me down I give 10 per cent on big amounts like a fool and like a fool I give 20 to 30 per cent on small amounts."—Minneapolis Journal.

FOUND A HIDING PLACE.

Then They Got a Big Surprise When Daylight Appeared.

The father of Joseph Altsheler, the writer of war stories, was a Prussian who came to this country a few years before the war between the states broke out and settled in Barren county, Kentucky. By reason of his foreign birth the elder Altsheler was not subject to draft by either army when hostilities began, but his southern sympathies made him obnoxious to a group of bushwhackers who, posing as Federals, infested the vicinity of the Kentucky-Tennessee state line.

One starless, moonless night in the summer of 1863 a neighbor came with the word that the bushwhackers were on their way to kill Mr. Altsheler and another resident of the vicinity who had been outspoken in his approval of secession. It was not certain, the messenger said, which road of two the marauders would take to reach the homes of their proposed victims; but it was certain that they would be along soon.

Mr. Altsheler and the other threatened man gathered up a blanket apiece and went into the woods to hide. In the darkness they speedily lost all sense of direction. For an hour they wandered about, seeking a suitable camping place. Finally they came to a spot that was free of trees and where the ground felt smooth underfoot. So they spread their blankets and went to sleep, secure in the belief that no bushwhacker could find them there.

The rising sun, shining in their faces, waked them. They sat up and looked around. They had been asleep all night at the only place where the raiders could not have failed to find them had their plans been carried out—at the forks of the county road.—Saturday Evening Post.

Diameter of a Fine Wire.

Should you ever find it necessary to obtain the diameter of a fine wire it may be done in this manner: Wind carefully around a piece of pencil one layer for an inch or so, that each turn is touching the previous one. Then measure exactly an inch along the wire and count the number of turns in the inch. You then have the information. Thus, if there are eighteen turns the wire is one-eighteenth of an inch diameter.

Gas In Trees.

An interesting phenomenon, says a writer in American Forestry, is the escape of gas from cavities at the base of hardwood trees in the Ozarks when the trees are cut down. "When the cavities are cut into the gas escapes with a whistling sound, and if lighted it will burn with a faint yellow flame." Decomposition of the heart wood of the tree is supposed to cause the formation of the gas.

A Mean Man.

"I never was so embarrassed in my life. I came face to face with my first husband."

"What did he say?"

"Nothing much. He just looked up at me and smiled and then said, 'Who are you nagging now, Mary?'"—Detroit Free Press.

CLAIRVOYANT MADE MONEY.

This Seer Confesses To Swindles Amounting to $500,000.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—The confession of William R. Russell, an aged clairvoyant, who admits he has swindled clients out of half a million dollars, was made public Sunday night by States Attorney Hoyne. In it Russell reveals the regulation rates for operating with police protection, and names many detectives and a "go-between" to whom he said he paid thousands of dollars.

Russell asserted that he understood this money was to go to the state attorney's office and to high police officers.

Russell, who was arrested Friday at Columbus, Ohio, where he was known as Prof. Barr, said he has been a clairvoyant for fifteen of his sixty-five years, and in that time extracted $500,000 from his victims in many cities. Advising them to invest in fraudulent stocks was his favorite method, he said.

He has been indicted here on charges of operating a confidence game.

Tom Watson On Trial.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Oct. 21.—Thomas E. Watson, lawyer, publicist and onetime Presidential candidate of the People's Party, yesterday was placed on trial in the U. S. District Court here on a charge of sending obscene matter through the mails. The specific charge against Watson is that he published in July, 1911, and April and May of 1912 certain alleged questions which he claimed were asked by Roman Catholic priests to persons in confessional, which questions, the indictment alleges, were obscene.

The questions appeared in a series of articles attacking the Roman Catholic Church and especially the priesthood.

Train Dynamited; Forty-Six Dead.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 21.—Forty-six Federals have been killed by the dynamiting of a troop train a short distance north of Saltillo, according to information from a reliable source. The troops were proceeding from Mexico City to Torreon. There were 97 cars, containing 1,500 men in the train, which ran over a road mine. The locomotive and two coaches were destroyed. The Government authorities, it is said, had been warned to send the train over another route but disregarded the warning.

Exaggerated Impressions.

"Mr. Meekton says his wife is competent to hold any office in the government."

"That opinion," replied Miss Cayenne, "is the result of his vanity. He thinks that because she can govern him she must be able to govern the entire nation."—Washington Star.

PANGOLINS OF AFRICA.

Curious Anteaters That Train With the Owls and Bats.

It is perhaps just as well to know what a pangolin is, although one is not likely to meet it outside of Africa or the London zoological gardens. The latter establishment has one of these rare mammals and is very proud of it. This specimen is of the particularly rare variety with the rather elegant given name of "white bellied." The pangolin is a sort of anteater, whose body is covered with scales. Although it is a mammal, a stranger asked to make an offhand diagnosis would certainly call it a lizard.

The white bellied pangolin trains with the owl and bats and sleeps during the daytime. When sleeping it is rolled up into an object about the size of a large croquet ball, and in this position, owing to its plating of pointed scales, is about as easy to attack or handle as a hedgehog. The sharp pointed scales give it somewhat the appearance of an "animated fir cone." Its natural food appears to be white ants, but in captivity it thrives on chopped raw meat and eggs. It is arboreal and a wonderful climber with its clawed feet and prehensile tail.

It seems to have no value to the human race except as a curiosity, although perhaps the natives in Africa eat it as they do most everything else that by any stretch of the imagination can be called edible—worms, ants, lizards, snakes, etc., ad nauseam.—New York Post.

Japanese Festival Cars.

Most Japanese towns have a shrine or temple dedicated to the tutelary deity of the city. At Ueno, in the Iga province, several beautiful decorated cars are kept at the shrine, and figure annually in a curious procession. When the day of the festival arrives hundreds of pious worshipers drag the cars by means of ropes through the gayly decorated streets of the city—thereby, they believe, greatly pleasing the gods of the shrine. The cars are wonderful examples of Japanese decorative art, richly ornamented with gilding and lacquer work.—Wide World.

How Do You Laugh?

A French paper has discovered that a person's character is expressed in his manner of laughing. If you laugh in "ha ha" fashion you are frank if a man and inconstant and incapable of keeping a secret if a woman. If you laugh "heh-heh" you are neurasthenic, melancholy and skeptical. If you adopt a deeper tone and laugh in "ho-ho's" you are generous, easy going and good natured. The proper pitch for the fair sex to laugh in is "he-he," while people who laugh with a "hoo hoo" effect should be avoided as hypocritical, scandal mongering and miserly.

Morbid Parisians.

Public executions in Paris prove very profitable to the owners of houses commanding the scene. Windows are let out for the occasion, the landlords watching for the first sign of the execution and then at once sending word to the persons who have hired the room. If an ordinary criminal is executed the charge is usually about $1 per seat, but should the offender have committed any remarkable crime the price runs up to as much as $30.

GIRLS ASPHYXIATED.

One Victim of Escaping Coal Gas Has Succumbed.

TORONTO, Oct. 21.—Grace Snelling, aged 22, is dead, and her sister, Dorothy, aged 19, is at the General Hospital in a serious condition, as a result, it is believed, of inhaling coal gas from the furnace in their boarding house at 8 Wilton crescent. Mrs. Williams, with whom the girls were boarding, stated last evening that there was no smell of gas in the girls' room when she opened the door yesterday morning. The police, on the other hand, state that when they arrived at the house there was a perceptible odor of gas all through the house. At the General Hospital, Dorothy Snelling, who regained consciousness last night, expressed the opinion that it was escaping coal gas which caused her sister's death.

The girls, who came to Canada from England six years ago, moved to 8 Wilton crescent about four days ago from a boarding-house across the street.

Mr. Todd's first experience in office work was with the Wm. Hamilton Company, of this city.

DISAPPEARANCE OF JAS. BOGUE PUZZLES FRIENDS

But They do not Think He Has Taken His Life---

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Oct. 19.—James Bogue registered at the Empire Hotel Oct. 8th, at 10 p.m., as from London, Ont., and left on the morning of the 10th, without paying his bill or taking his suitcase. The hotel people called the police yesterday and opened the suitcase, which among other things contained two unstamped letters, one to John Pringle and one to H. P. Widdowson, both of London. The former says: "Am sorry to have to deceive you. I lost 300 dollars in July. Someone came in for American money. I gave him the money but did not get any from him. I.V.P. pay car 50 dollars to some American, 300. Soon I lost two more 20 dollars. I started to tell you the day I found it out, but put it off. When I went so far, could not. I am sorry.—Yours, J. Bogue."

The letter to Widdowson says: "I have not had an hour's sleep since Monday. Have an awful pain in my head and my heart does not seem to work right. It is like so much weight at my side. I want to tell you so much, but I can't hold my pen and my eyes are nearly blinded. So farewell, a fond good-bye, Jim."

In the suitcase was a suit of clothes in the pockets of which was $3.78.

In reference to the case the London Advertiser has the following:

Bogue was moved to this city from Burford some time ago. He has been in the employ of the Bank of Toronto for about seven years, having joined the staff at Peterborough where he has an uncle, the only relative in this country.

He was well known and popular in this city, being a golf and tennis enthusiast.

For some time he boarded at a house on Dundas street, near Colborne, but removed from there a short time ago to a house on Talbot street.

The men with whom he was associated scoff at the idea of suicide, and say that Bogue left to go on his vacation he was in excellent spirits.

NOT IN TROUBLE.

Mr. John Pringle, manager of the Bank of Toronto, said he had heard nothing outside of the press despatches about Bogue being missing from his hotel in Niagara Falls.

"He was not in any trouble with the bank," said Mr. Pringle to the Advertiser. "He left two weeks ago for his annual vacation, and as his time is up on Tuesday morning I expect him back then."

The references in one of the letters found in the suitcase to the pay car, is explained by one of the bank employes as a slight mistake which Bogue made some time ago, but which was rectified at the time.

The H. P. Widdowson referred to in the other letter is a member of the Bank of Toronto staff in this city, and resides on Maitland street. He has been out of the city since Saturday and could not be located.

Peterborough friends of Mr. Bogue are of the opinion that he will turn up. His uncle, Mr. James Bogue, resides on Dublin street.

CONVENTION IS CONCLUDED; DELEGATES ARE GRATEFUL

They Appreciated the Kindness and Courteses Extend to Them During Their Visit

At the closing session of the Baptist convention last night devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. H. F. Veals, B.A., of Hamilton. When the chairman, Rev. J. R. Webb, rose to announce the first item on the program, he faced a splendid audience, which flowed over into the gallery. A resolution was read by Rev. Dr. Cameron, chairman of the Committee on Resolutions. This expressed thanks to the pastor and members of Murray street church, to the organist and choir, the hostesses who had entertained delegates, to the press, to the Ministerial Association, and to Mr. T. F. Matthews, for many favors received. Mr Matthews responded to this in a very happy little speech. He mentioned in a very commendatory way the work of the manager of the convention check room.

Rev. H. R. Nobles, B.D., of Toronto, presented the report of the Baptist Young People's Union of Ontario and Quebec. This showed that the young people are anxious to do practical work in the line of saving men. There are 210 Baptist Young People's Societies, of which 24 new unions were organized this year; 6,496 active members, 1,592 associate members, and 1,037 junior members are included within the sphere of the unions' work. 350 young people were converted through the agency of the societies. The Educational work of the union was reported to be in a most flourishing condition. Certificates are given for examination on this work. The societies raised for all purposes about $5,000. The Inter-Provincial Union received over $800 for its work, and have a balance on hand of $21.00. The Union has also during the year added its own courses of study and propose adding a department of social service. The work of making a home for souls is the greatest work on earth, and the B.Y.P.U. is trying to make a home for young people.

Rev. W. J. Pady, B.A., of Sault Ste. Marie, seconded the adoption of the report, and spoke of the stragetic importance of the Young People's Union: 1. In respect of leakages from Sunday schools and church. 2. In respect of leadership.

REV. JOHN McNEILL.

Rev. John J. MacNeill, of Toronto, is well known throughout the Dominion as a powerful speaker. He spoke last evening on the subject of "The Disposal of Personality." He chose a very good subject and one which he amply demonstrates in his character, for he has devoted his own strong personality to the cause he represents.

As a speaker he is forceful yet cultured, but with a culture which has not spoiled him, for he is essentially democratic. His flow of language is as natural as the flow of an even river, and he says deep and high things as if they were the merest common-places.

If there is one comment that might be made it is that he says great things too easily.

THE DISPOSAL OF PERSONALITY.

He said he wanted to speak with the young people about the disposal of personality. He instanced the life of Moody as an example of the giving up of a life to the Kingdom of the Son of God.

We may not all be Moodys, but we are all endowed with that precious thing personality.

Personality can be used in various ways. The parable of the talents referred to the possession of personality as well as other talents, and no man has a right to wrap it in a napkin like the man who buried his talent in the earth.

Here are a few gems of thought picked up by the way:

We are gathered together not as rich or poor, as learned or ignorant, but as personalities. That mystic thing which can flash its power to every corner of the universe. That persists through time and eternity.

In all the vast universe the greatest results are vague, nebulous and indefinite. The mightiest forces are the invisible forces, the things which are not seen are eternal.

It does cost a great deal to be a Christian. There is no gain except by loss. There will always be a garden where a man pours out his soul.

Every expenditure is justified where eternal effects are secured.

There is no other sphere where personality grows so nobly as in consecrated service. I do not know where a man's personality can run through all its moods and aspirations than in the service of Jesus Christ.

He said he had been reading the Life of General Gordon. What a wonderful life that was. Gordon was not great by anything but by the consecration of his personality to to the service of God and humanity.

There is no power in heaven or hell or earth that can destroy the smallest contribution to the service of Jesus Christ. The tooth of time will eat everything else, the catychysm of the years will bring it to the earth, but the life of service will remain.

SUES SIR THONAS FOR A TRUNK

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 22.—Sir Thomas G. Shaughnessy, president of the C.P.R., was served with papers in a damage suit when he arrived yesterday. The railroad president was just entering the office of the president of another railroad when a deputy sheriff, after displaying a bright badge informed Sir Thomas that a man in Chicago was bringing action against the railroad because a trunk had been smashed.

The action was unique as it was brought under a new law against the head of a foreign corporation temporarily within the States.

Must Give 30 Days' Notice.

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—The current militia orders announce the following with regard to troops from this country visiting the United States:

"All applications for permission for troops to visit the United States must be forwarded to the officer commanding the division or district concerned in sufficient time to admit of the application reaching his Majesty's ambassador at Washington, not less than 30 days before the date of the visit.

CONSERVATIVE RETURNED BY EAST MIDDLESEX

368 MAJORITY FOR GLASS

Sixteen Out of Twenty Municipalities Give London Alderman Pluralities in Contest for Seat Vacated by Death of Peter Elson—Vote is About 500 Short of That Which Was Polled in 1911.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 22.—Ald. S. Frank Glass of this city was elected to the House of Commons from East Middlesex, in succession to the late Peter Elson, M.P. The Conservative candidate's majority over R. G. Fisher, Liberal, is 368. Only one of the four municipalities in the riding gave the latter a majority. Of the 45 subdivisions all but 16 gave majorities for Glass. Eight of the remainder were in Westminster Township, a Liberal strong hold, which on this occasion netted Mr. Fisher 112.

The vote in detail:

	Glass.	Fisher.	Maj. for Glass.	Maj. for Fisher.
London Tp	1003	621	382	...
W. Nissouri	263	245	18	...
Westminster	424	536	...	112
N. Dorchester	363	283	80	...
Totals	2053	1685	480	112

The vote was about 500 short of that polled in the riding in the general election of 1911, when Mr. Elson was given 661 majority. Rainy weather and bad roads interfered with the getting out of the vote.

Mr. Glass in addressing a gatherin at the committee rooms declared for the doctrine of protection for Canadian industries, and in Canadian aid to the Imperial navy.

Mr. Fisher in a statement after the result was known expressed the opinion that the presence of Cabinet Ministers and election "thugs" in the riding contributed to the result.

In 1911 Mr. Elson had a plurality of 661. This means that the Liberals have made a gain of 293 votes since the last election. Conservative organizers however declare that the normal Conservative majority in the riding is about 250 and that the Government's loss is made up of those Liberals who have resumed their party affiliations since the vote against the reciprocity treaty. Mr. Elson's majority in 1908 was 249.

Another factor in deciding the result was the feeling in some quarters that the constituency should be represented by a farmer. This sentiment led to considerable friction at the convention which nominated Mr. Glass.

REVOLT IS SUPPRESSED.

Portuguese Government Puts Down a Monarchist Rising.

LISBON, Portugal, Oct. 22.—Many arrests were made in the Portuguese capital late Monday night when several groups of opponents of the Government attacked police stations and detachments of the republican guard in various parts of the city and also attempted to release the political prisoners confined in Limoeiro jail. They succeeded in setting free one prisoner from the district prison.

The authorities eventually suppressed the outbreaks and the Government declares itself master of the situation.

The semi-official El Mundo, the only journal which gives any particulars of the plot, publishes the names of several well-known men as being involved in the rebellion. Some of these have been arrested, but others were found to have fled when their houses were searched.

ENGLISH FIRM MAY GET IT.

Section Two of Welland Canal Contract Is Not Yet Awarded.

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—The contract for Section 2 of the Welland Canal has not yet been awarded, but Hon. Frank Cochrane, the Minister of Railways and Canals, who has been absent for weeks, is here to-day, and is considering the tenders.

It is understood that the tenders of Hutchinson, Brawling & Co., the English firm of contractors, and Jas. Corbett of New Brunswick, are the lowest, and are very near each other. The Toronto Construction Co. and the Inland Construction Co. of Toronto and St. Catharines were considerably higher than the two firms first named, it is understood.

CROWD WAS NOT LARGE

Mrs. Pankhurst's Meeting Not a Brilliant Success

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, addressing last night in Madison Square Garden her first American mass meeting on her present eventful trip, explained why militant methods for the cause of woman suffrage are carried on in England but not in America, and defended the employment of such methods. She criticized the British Government as the most conservative on earth and held it responsible, through failure to enact legislation desired by women for women resorting to violence to obtain the ballot. Only through dynamic means, she declared, could English women hope to secure laws dealing with white slavery, industrial evils and other conditions affecting women.

Preparations had been made for an overflow meeting at Madison Square Garden, but the big hall, with a seating capacity of some 12,000 persons, was scarcely one-quarter filled. This was attributed by the suffragettes to the uncertainty that existed until almost the eleventh hour as to whether the immigration authorities would allow Mrs. Pankhurst to make her appearance on the public lecture platform in this country.

Some leading suffragettes of the country and a few "hunger strikers" from England sat with Mrs. Pankhurst on a stage draped with a tricolored flag bearing the inscription, "Resistance to Tyranny is Obedience to God." Wearing small steel prison-bar badges signifying that their militancy had resulted in jail terms, were Miss Elsie McKenzie and Miss Mary Keegan. English girls come here to accept business opportunities and Miss Lucy Burns and Miss Elizabeth Freeman, American girls who went to England to fight for "the cause." Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Miss Lavinia Dock, Miss Sybil Wilbur, Miss Alberta Hill, Miss Fola La Follette, Miss Ida Craft and other American suffragette leaders sat with them.

Mrs. Pankhurst May Enter.

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—W. D. Scott, commissioner of immigration, said yesterday: "If Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst visits Canada as a tourist or as a lecturer, we won't bar her entry, but if she starts to smash things she will be promptly apprehended and deported."

To Welcome Vice-Regal Party.

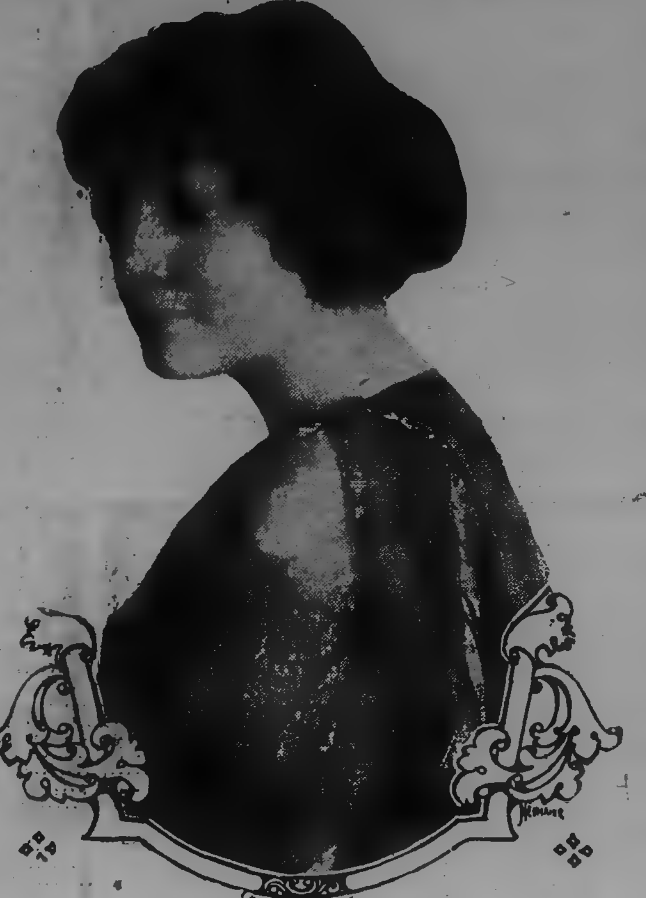
OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—Premier Borden and Ministers Hazen, Doherty and Pelletier left yesterday evening for Quebec, to welcome formally Their Royal Highnesses the Duke and Duchess and Princess Patricia on their arrival at the ancient capital, on Friday.

While in Quebec, Premier Borden and the Ministers will be banquetted by the Board of Trade and will inspect the harbor extensions and other Government works there.

Delirious Patient Killed.

NEW GLASGOW, N.S., Oct. 22.—Leo T. Joy, aged 26, a typhoid fever patient in the Aberdeen Hospital, when the nurse was momentarily absent from his room, left the bed, discarded his night clothes, and leaped head first from the window. He fell twenty-five feet and died in a few minutes.

ONE-TIME AMBASSADOR ALIENATED HIS SON'S AFFECTION, SAYS GIRL ASKING DAMAGES



MRS. CHARLEMAGNE TOWER, JR

Charlemagne Tower, one time Ambassador to Germany and the wealthiest man in Philadelphia, is made defendant in an action filed by Mrs. Georgiana Tower, asking damages for alleged alienation of the affections of Charlemagne Tower, Jr., the twenty-six-year-old son of the erstwhile diplomatist. The action comes as a climax to repeated reports current in this city that young Mr. Tower had been married while a student at Yale and repeated denials by himself and his parents of the marriage.

GERMANY STANDS PAT

No Alteration Will be Made in Navy Program This Year.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The Daily Chronicle this morning publishes an interview its Berlin correspondent had with a distinguished German naval officer, who says positively that Germany will not depart from her existing program of naval construction and development. Winston Churchill's proposal of a "naval holiday" seems never to have been regarded very seriously in Berlin. The correspondent continues: Grand Admiral Von Tirpitz, Naval Secretary of State, spoke to me very freely on the naval situation. He does not wish to give any false impression to the British Government, but desires that the British people and Government should know the facts. "There is nothing," he says, "to conceal." He does not question the wisdom or necessity of anything Britain may do. As for Germany, the navy law will be carried on to its conclusion without hesitation.

The admiral stated that there never has been any acceleration in the execution of the German program. If any ships were laid down a little in advance this was merely to maintain regularity in the work at the shipbuildig yards. He laid stress on the fact that the German navy was purely a defensive function with no aggressive purpose like that of the army. It was to maintain the security of the Empire, besides enabling Germany to raise her voice in the affairs of the world. He was unable to see why this should be denied her.

He regards a war of aggression as unthinkable to Germany. He is lost in wonder at the German navy being regarded as a danger or a menace.

SEND 'EM SOME GERMS.

Then Charge High For Cure, Is Newest Blackmail Game.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—A blackmailer with a new terror is giving the post-office secret service men a field in which to exercise their talent. He sends to wealthy families a letter filled with a million or so of deadly germs, which he alleges will infect the person opening the letter at once. Death will occur in nine days from some mysterious fever, which he does not name. But he has a serum to prevent death, which he will send his victim upon payment of $2,500. It is more than nine days ago since Mrs. Frederick M. Steele of Highland Park received the culture bacilli, and although she opened the missive and looked curiously at the contents, she is well yet, but worried. Inspector James E. Stuart says other families have received like messages. The letter is 1,800. It reads in part:

"By opening this letter you have liberated 2,000,000 of healthy bacilli, propagated by myself, and without a doubt you are infected by this time, but do not become excited—my prophylactic will destroy any number of germs of this synotic disease in the body if used by the ninth day."

MUST NOT RAISE ROW

Diaz is Given Permission to Land in Vera Cruz

VERA CRUZ, Oct. 22.—Gen. Felix Diaz, candidate for the Mexican Presidency, who is now on his way to Vera Cruz aboard the steamer Corcovado, will be permitted to land today, but there must be no demonstration.

A small army of detectives is here from Mexico City and troops are held in quarters. Should the enthusiasm of the Diaz partisans outweigh their judgment, and in the opinion of the authorities, the peace of the city be thereby disturbed, the soldiers and police have orders to shoot.

Col. Vidaurrasaga, secretary to Gen. Blanquet, the Minister of War, is aboard the gunboat Zuragosa. The gunboat has steam up, and unless the orders are changed, will run alongside the Corcovado before she docks. Col. Vidaurrasaga will request Gen. Diaz to counsel his partisans to maintain good order, and in return for this he will assure Gen. Diaz his protection.

The Corcovado should be in Mexican water to-day, but she is not expected to dock before to-night. She is a German boat, and close behind her comes the German gunboat Hertha.

Not a very great number of partisans are expected to greet their chief. Those here are headed by Jose Luis Requena, candidate for the vice-presidency. Senor Requena believes that the ticket will be withdrawn, but will have a conference with Gen. Diaz to-day on the subject.

The candidacy of Gen. Huerta and Gen. Blanquet was proclaimed in unsigned handbills which were distributed here yesterday. Adherents of Gen. Diaz profess to have information that the state officials throughout that part of the republic controlled by the Government have agreed to favor the Huerta-Blanquet ticket, and consider it probable that Diaz will readily agree with them that under such circumstances competition would be useless.

Gen. Diaz, in a wireless message received last evening, announced his intention of remaining here to-day and proceeding to Mexico City on Thursday.

PICTURE POSTCARD CRAZE WANES

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—A London cable says:

The British Postmaster-General's annual report gives stupendous figures of the nation's postal business. The number of letters delivered reached 3,298,000,000, an increase of 300,000. Postal cards show a decrease, indicating the wane of the pictorial craze.

The number of postal packets undelivered, owing to absence or insufficiency of addresses, is estimated at over 33,000,000.

More than 88,000,000 telegrams were sent.

TWO CHECK ARTISTS GIVEN THREE YEARS

WOMEN GIVEN THEIR LIBERTY

Martindale and Kindy Are Wanted in Several Places—Both Pleaded Guilty.

WELLAND, Oct. 22.—The trial of Mrs. Clara Knapp on a charge of attempting to pass a worthless Union Bank check on the Imperial Bank at Niagara Falls on Sept. 30, and of the "check artists," Martindale, alias Walker and Albert Kindy, alias Allen, on charges of conspiracy to defraud the bank, was held yesterday before Judge Livingstone. Martindale and Kindy both pleaded guilty and were sentenced to three years' imprisonment at Kingston, being convicted on their evidence contained in signed statements to Chief Kimmins of Niagara Falls, in which they confessed their guilt. Mrs. Knapp was allowed to go on suspended sentence and Miss Helen Kelley, alias Mrs. Allen, who had been held as a witness, was also allowed to go.

From the pile of evidence gathered by Chief Kimmins the two men have served time and are wanted in many places. They are wanted in Toronto, for attempting to pass a worthless $350 check on a bank branch at the corner of Queen street and Roncesvalles avenue. Martindale, who comes from Owen Sound, has a wife and child in Toronto. He was arraigned in Sandwich, Ont., Nov. 13, 1912, charged with conspiracy and theft, and sentenced to twelve months in the Central Prison. On March 19, 1913, he was tried in Toronto for a similar offence, but sentence was suspended. He was paroled from the Central Prison August 11, and had two months and twenty-six days to serve.

Kindy was sentenced to twenty-four months in the Central Prison on a charge of forgery in Cayuga, Ont. He was paroled on July 26, 1913. In 1911 he was charged with mutilating documents in the Registry Office at Cayuga and fined $250.

Union Bank checks aggregating $30,000 were found on the two men, six of which were for amounts of five thousand dollars odd. Evidently they had intended to use these.

In Kindy's written confession to the police he states that his home is Selkirk, Ont. He met Martindale at the Prison Farm in Guelph four months ago. He was released in July last, and Martindale two weeks later. They both went to Toronto, and at the Imperial Bank branch on King street presented a worthless check which Martindale drew on under an assumed name, to be deposited in a savings account. The next day Martindale drew on the bank with a false check for an amount which he says was $350.

The two told of visits to Hamilton and St. Catharines. At Hamilton they forged a check, using the name of Wm. J. Aikens of Dunnville, and deposited it at the Union Bank at St. Catharines. Other forgeries and attempted forgeries against the Dominion and other banks were told of in the confession.

The men met the two women in Buffalo. The women up to the time of their arrest, had no knowledge that the checks were forged.

TIBETANS DEFEAT CHINESE.

"Mysterious Land" and Mongolia Winning Fight For Autonomy.

PEKIN, China, Oct. 22.—News that Tibet demands complete autonomy without even Chinese official representation at Lhasa, its capital, and also asks for the indemnities from China, reached the Chinese Government yesterday from the Chinese Tibetan conference, in progress at Darjeeling, India.

Reports from the Tibetan frontier, where the Chinese troops were sent to operate, have for many months shown that the fighting has been in favor of the Tibetans, and, according to advices from various quarters, the Chinese troops there, as on the Mongolian border, display no spirit for fighting.

From Mongolia comes reports that the Mongolians are encamped within 100 miles of the great wall.

The two vast dependencies of Tibet and Mongolia, at the time of the anti-Manchu revolution, proclaimed their autonomy and have defended it ever since. China is now fighting to maintain her frontiers against both of them respectively in the Provinces of Chili and Szechuen.

SIX MEN KILLED

Double Explosion at Livingston, Long Island, Wrecks Lighting Plant.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Six men were instantly killed, four others badly injured, one probably fatally, and practically all of Staten Island was left in darkness and without trolley service last night as the result of a double boiler explosion at the plant of the Richmond Light and Power Co. at Livingston, L.I.

The first explosion occurred in a small boiler and was immediately followed by the bursting of the main boiler, which wrecked the interior of the building. The cause is unknown. Until the list of employes is checked up it will not be known whether more men are missing.

Trolley cars are stalled all over the island and probably will remain so for a day longer.

Rev. Scott Currie Missing.

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.—So far as known, up to a late hour yesterday afternoon, no trace had been found of Rev. Scott Currie, the Anglican clergyman, who on Saturday went on a hunting expedition near Glen Almond in Labelle county, Quebec, and has not since been seen. Three search parties, including a number of men from Buckingham, are in the field, and they are expected to be heard from to-day.

The theory that he accidentally shot himself is thought to be correct.

VICTIMS BURIED

BERLIN, Oct. 22.—A most impressive joint funeral service was held yesterday over the bodies of 23 out of the 28 victims of the disaster to the Zeppelin dirigible airship at Johannisthal on Friday last. The ceremony took place at noon in the old garrison church near the Imperial Palace, in the presence of the Emperor and his sons, and were accompanied by the Empress and the crown princess, while Count Zeppelin and about a thousand officers of the army and navy, together with a number of comrades belonging to the flying corps to which the dead men were attached, also attended.

Ink stains on mahogany can be removed by painting them with a solution of six drops of nitre mixed with a teaspoonful of water. Then rub well with a damp cloth and polish with a dry one.

OFFICIALS ARE ARRESTED

Over a Hundred Involved In Austrian Emigration Scandals.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A Vienna despatch to The Telegraph says that more than one hundred arrests of police, gendarmie and other persons supposed to have been bribed by the emigration agencies, are reported from Galicia. Charges of corruption are being wildly bandied about by both sides, that is the champions of the Canadian and North German Lloyd lines respectively. The Emperor is said to have ordered the strictest supervision of all emigration agencies in the future.

It is stated that letters and telegrams of the Canadian Pacific Railway have disclosed the fact that several high officials, including two important functionaries of the Ministry of Commerce and two district commanders in Galicia, have entertained compromising relations with the C.P.R.

The papers seized at the offices of the company are said to show that a number of Austrian members of Parliament were on very close terms with the concern. Several Hungarian politicians are included in the list of those alleged to be compromised.

PROTECTION FOR WOMEN.

Out-All-Night Husbands and Gay Suitors Had Better Lookout.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Oct. 22. — A protective agency, which has for its purpose the tracking of married men and near-married men, on behalf of their wives and sweethearts, has been started in this city.

Just who is furnishing the funds for its upkeep has not been disclosed, but it has been asserted that prominent ministers throughout the city are looking out for the welfare of the association. The organization is known as the Columbus Protective Association.

"Wives who have all-night husbands and girls who are contemplating marriage," said the Rev. J. I. Tisdall, leader in the organization, "will be furnished detectives to find out what wives want to know and will inform girls fully as to the conduct and habits of their beaus."

King Manuel's Bride Better.

MUNICH, Bavaria, Oct. 22.—Princess Augustine Victoria of Hohenzollern, wife of former King Manuel of Portugal, left the hospital where she has been under treatment for several weeks, and departed with her husband yesterday for Sigmaringen.

A bulletin issued by the physicians at the hospital yesterday contained an emphatic denial of the various rumors which have been made public as to the nature of the princess' illness and declared her condition of ill-health to be due exclusively to the presence of intestinal bacteria.

British Ships To Participate.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Great Britain yesterday accepted the invitation from the United States Government to send representative vessels of the British navy to the gathering of the international fleet in Hampton Roads early in 1915 to celebrate the completion of the Panama Canal by making a voyage to the Pacific through the new waterway.

The acceptance by the British Foreign Office has been forwarded to the Secretary of the United States navy at Washington.

EAST MIDDLESEX

East Middlesex has again returned a Conservative, and this in spite of all the calumny that has been heaped upon the party for which it has voted.

Whether there were any in East Middlesex who turned in disgust from such a vile and corrupt organization as the Conservative party, we may learn later, for the Liberals will of course produce them.

If such vituperation as flowed from the mouth of Sir Wilfrid the other day carries any weight, it ought surely to have turned the tide at Middlesex. But no, Mr. Glass has been returned by the substantial majority of somewhere near 400.

No mention is made in the Globe of Mr. Rogers, that paper pretends to find great reason for hope in the result. No one will deny them this comfort, drowning men catch at straws.

The election was probably regarded as a foregone conclusion by many Conservatives, owing to the rainy weather many would not trouble to record their votes, and this might account for the decreased majority.

The last election in 1911 was admittedly under abnormal conditions, and a majority of 661 was secured by the Conservative. It was not expected that this could be sustained, but considering local circumstances and the difficulties as to the choosing of candidates, the result is entirely satisfactory and is another indication that the great heart of the country is with Mr. Borden and his naval proposals, for this was the main issue of the election.

A HUNGRY FUGITIVE

Mrs. Pankhurst has been permitted to land in U.S.A. and is to be allowed to fulfil her lecture engagements. It was scarcely to be expected that the States would forego such a sensational treat. But, of course, there is nothing out of order, for Mrs. Pankhurst has already entered France without question. The British authorities seem unconcerned as to her movements, so long as she confined them to other countries than the British Isles.

Her progress through the States will be watched with interest, and the "yellow press" will doubtless make the most of the occasion. Just what Mrs. Pankhurst has to communicate to American women, it is difficult to see. Her doctrines are certainly not very original or interesting. This tour is undertaken for nothing more nor less than the gratification of an insatiable desire for notoriety. If this lady had the women's rights of England so much upon her heart she would not have run away from the martyrdom which she was called upon to bear for the cause.

A quiet submission to imprisonment would do far more toward convincing the general public of her sincerity than all this hunger striking, and this fugitive tour of a woman who is evidently hungering for publicity.

Reliable Watches

We have a reputation as sellers of good Watches—that reputation we are careful to maintain by giving the Watch end of our business particular attention. When a person invests in a Watch they expect for their money a Watch that keeps accurate time, all the time during its lifetime. At this store you receive for your money the best Watch for that amount of money which you can buy anywhere. A wide and select stock of Ladies' and Gent's Watches can always be found at this store. When needing a Watch, bear in mind that we handle all of the leading makes.

MONTREAL DAILY MAIL

The Montreal Daily Mail is a new "Independent" paper which has been "under sail" for about ten days, and bids fair to make a good voyage. But it must remember it is as yet in calm waters and is scarcely out of the harbor. When it gets into deep water and has to weather contrary winds, we shall know of its quality.

Independence often means isolation; the man who sits upon the fence needs a good head to sustain his equilibrium, and is always in danger of falling off either one side or the other, if it be only for a rest or a change.

The absolutely independent paper, like the independent man, has yet to come into existance. But there is, nevertheless a certain broad-mindedness about the Daily Mail which we hope is a sign of the times; if this is so it is a healthy one.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Brantford Courier announces in the top corner of its front page, that it contains "112 columns." We have endeavoured to go one better than that and count the words appearing in the Review every day, but it takes too long, and we doubt if the result would impress our readers with our importance.

The Montreal Daily Herald is running its editorial page with a refrain at the foot of each article in the form of a question, "Who owns ten thousand shares of Tramway stock?"

It comes in very suitably after the "Thanksgiving" article which finishes thus—"Truly we have every ground for optimism and contentment, every reason to celebrate Thanksgiving Day."

Then there is something rythmic about the passage and it is a pity to let it go singly, why not make a couplet of it; here is a suggestion:

"Who owns ten thousand shares of Tramway stock,
His fortunes are established on a rock."

Or this:

"He need not tremble at the Bailiff's knock."

There are other suggestive rhymes such as "Sock."

Winston Churchill has been trying to persuade the German boy next door to come out and play and leave those smoky old toy engines with which he is annoying the household. Germany could certainly do with a little holiday after the recent fatal experiments in air-craft.

The last of the six hundred passed away in England the other day.

"When shall their glory fade!
O, the wild charge they made!"

Hundreds of congratulatory telegrams poured in yesterday upon Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, admitted to the United States at the instance of President Wilson after her brief detention at Ellis Island.

THE VATICAN AND NE TEMERE DECREE

To The Editor of The Review.

Sir,—The Examiner publishes an evidently inspired telegraph message with big headlines, from Montreal, that it is possible that the Ne Temere decree may be withdrawn from Canada. Enquiries are being set on foot on the subject. Orders have been received from Rome to this effect. We cannot be too grateful in Canada to those who fought so valiantly against it. It is due to this resistance here, as in Germany, that the Vatican is thinking twice in the matter. The Examiner will no doubt hasten to do those people who resisted it. There was a time when the whole agitation against Ne Temere was ridiculed by some so-called Protestants, but now that the Church is taking the matter seriously, these so-called Protestants will hurry to do likewise. The great many people who tried to throw cold water should feel ashamed of themselves.

Yours truly,
READER.

When Women Knew Not Golf.

A correspondent sends the Glasgow Herald some anecdotes of that period, not so long ago, when women knew nothing of golf. One lady, making sympathetic conversation at dinner, said to a keen golfer: "I often see you in your red coat. Do you need many dogs to play golf?" A younger lady said she knew exactly how the game was played. "They get what they call a caddier to hunt about in the grass till they find a round stone, and then they hit it into a rabbit hole." A third lady, who had evidently enjoyed a nearer view of the game, said: "It is played by two men. One is a gentleman and the other is a common man. The common man sticks a ball on a lump of dirt, and the gentleman knocks it off!" —Westminster Gazette.

RED ROSE TEA "is good tea"

For the Children

Prince Knud of Denmark Belongs to Boy Scouts

The king of Denmark's two sons, Crown Prince Frederick, fourteen years of age, and Prince Knud, thirteen, have been sleeping under canvas as boy scouts. The camp, which was established near Copenhagen, was international in character, 3,000 boys from several European countries having gathered for a boy scout demonstration.

When the king and queen visited the camp and reached the hut where the princes were the queen's motherly eyes observed that little Prince Knud had dirty hands, for which she gave him a royal scolding. Some of the other boys interceded, saying:

"Don't be cross with little Knud. He's all right, although he is a poor washer up. You had better teach him when he gets home."

The king could not help smiling and promised the boys that the matter should be attended to.

The two princes have had private tutors, but after vacation they will go to a high school. When Prince Knud's picture was taken he didn't have his boy scout uniform on.

Tabitha Interferes

"Things Are Not What They Seem"

By ADELAIDE BURNHAM

From her seat behind the parlor curtains Tabitha Campbell listened shamelessly to the words that young Frederick Lee was murmuring to pretty Agatha, her niece.

"It's my duty by a motherless girl," said Tabitha defiantly to her conscience, and she turned her good ear close to the curtains sagging against the open window.

"Tomorrow night, then," said Frederick with a long sigh of relief.

"Yes," assented Agatha timorously.

"At 11 o'clock. Surely?"

"Yes."

"I'll drive you to Millton, and the minister there will"— His words drifted into an indistinct murmur as the wind rushed through the garden and stirred the syringa bushes.

Tabitha arose and went into the sitting room, where she blinked at the lighted lamp. She was a little, hard featured, black eyed woman with white hair and sprightly movements that made her appear even younger than her fifty years. Now her black eyes snapped with anger as she sat down in a rocking chair and picked up some knitting.

Agatha came in and locked the front door. When she appeared in the sitting room her blue eyes were very bright and a pink flush stained her usually pale cheeks.

"I thought I told you I wouldn't have Jacob Lee's boy running here," snapped Tabitha.

Agatha was silent.

"Has he got a job?" pursued Tabitha.

"Yes. I told you his father had taken him into the bank," replied Agatha spiritedly. "Frederick is—is—nice. I don't see why you dis-dislike him so, Aunt Tab."

"I have my reasons."

"If you would only tell me, just tell me what it is you have against him, Aunt Tab, I might understand."

"It's all in the past," murmured Tabitha somewhat vaguely. Her cheeks reddened as if at some unpleasant memory.

"It's not fair to keep me in the dark, and I shall never believe one word against him unless you prove it, so there!" Agatha whirled out of the room and up the stairs into her own little room overhead.

What Agatha did not know was that once upon a time Tabitha had been a black eyed beauty engaged to marry Jacob Lee. But Jacob had proved a fickle lover, and when he took a bride to his home it was a handsome girl from Millton who had money in her own right. That Jacob's wife died and left him with little Frederick three years after the marriage did not move Tabitha Campbell to pity. In the meantime her hair had whitened and her face grown sharp and peaked. Now she became the village dressmaker, and when Agatha came to live with her every one said how nice it was that Tabitha would not be alone.

Now Agatha was planning to elope with Frederick Lee.

Tabitha's eyes burned strangely in the darkness as she thought of these things.

The next day passed quietly, as usual. Tabitha sewed busily in her sharp, jerky way in the room devoted to her work. Several customers came and tried on garments and looked over the pile of fashion books on the table or examined the tissue paper patterns pinned on a tape along the wall. Agatha did the housework deftly and between whiles stitched on the sewing machine in the corner.

As evening drew near the two women became distinctly nervous. Tabitha cut Mrs. Demmet's gray cashmere into a three piece skirt by a twenty-two inch waist pattern when Mrs. Demmet measured thirty-four inches and was proportionately massive. It was characteristic of Tabitha's mood that she first threw the mangled cashmere across the room with the scissors flying in its wake. Then she picked them up and, tucking the cashmere under her arm, went grimly forth to interview Mrs. Demmet.

When bedtime came Agatha came and placed her arms around Tabitha's neck. The astonished spinster did not move, but silently endured the embrace, and if there were tears in her hard eyes the girl did not see them. She went to the door and turned a wistful gaze on the older woman.

"I'm sorry you don't like him," she said painfully, and went slowly upstairs.

Tabitha put out the light and went silently about her preparations. She went upstairs and closed the door of her bedroom and then returned to the sitting room to envelop herself in a long gray cloak and tie a white chiffon veil over her face and hair. She slipped out of the side door and went across the grass to an opening in the boxwood hedge that bordered the garden. Standing outside there on the path in the shadow of the maple trees, she awaited the coming of Agatha's lover.

Clouds were drifting overhead, and now and then the moon peeped out. The little house lay in deep shadow.

Presently the church clock struck 11, and at the same instant came the sound of hoofs on the sandy road. A covered buggy came slowly along, and the horse stopped in front of Tabitha's gate.

In an instant she had reached the vehicle and had climbed into its dark interior. A man's startled voice uttered a sharp exclamation of surprise.

"Hurry!" whispered Tabitha. "Get away as fast as you can. She is coming after me."

"But"— began the familiar voice of Frederick Lee, and Tabitha hushed him desperately.

"Hurry, please hurry, or I shall go back!"

"All right. I suppose you know where you're going," said the man grimly.

"Millton, of course," snapped Tabitha so sharply that he leaned down and tried to look into her face, but it was too dark to distinguish anything except the pale, cloudy outline of her veil.

He clucked to the horse, and they went noiselessly down the road on rubber tired wheels. At the crossing they turned into the Millton highway.

Tabitha was somewhat disturbed at the success of her maneuver. She had planned to elope with Frederick Lee and at a convenient opportunity, perhaps in the very presence of the waiting minister, she would disclose her identity and "give Frederick a piece of her mind." Yet, somehow, in spite of her disguise and the darkness of the night, Frederick seemed suspicious of her. If he had been sure it was Agatha, the girl so soon to become his wife, would he not, being an ordinary young man, have placed his arm about her or at least saluted her with a kiss!

Out of the fullness of her own past romance Tabitha told herself he would have done all these things, yet there they sat speechless, slowly driving into Millton to be married, or at least Frederick expected to be.

"Where are we going?" asked the man suddenly as they turned into a sparsely settled section on the outskirts of Millton.

"Do you mean to say you don't know?" shrilled Tabitha through the folds of white chiffon.

"Of course not." His voice was indignant. "You're Tabitha Campbell's niece, aren't you?"

"I'm Miss Campbell," whispered Tabitha, a great fear clutching at her heart, for the voice was that of Frederick Lee, but it held deeper, richer notes. Perhaps Frederick's would reach that pitch some day if he lived long enough. There was only one other who could have spoken with that same intonation, and that other was Frederick's father.

"Well, Agatha Campbell," said Jacob Lee kindly, "what do you want? You asked me to carry you to Millton, and when we arrive you will not tell me where you want to go. Now, there is something queer about this, and I'm going to take you back to Farmdale and straight to your aunt." He spoke with an air of authority and at the same moment turned the horse about and went back over the road they had traveled.

Tabitha sat crushed and stunned in the corner, shrinking away from her old lover. What would he say if he knew she—Tabitha—was there beside him? They rode together twenty-five years ago, and since then they had passed each other with averted faces. Swiftly they rolled along through the wooded way until a carriage approaching from the opposite direction caused them to turn aside into the thicket to permit the other vehicle to pass.

The other carriage struck a "Thank you, ma'am," and a girlish shriek startled them. "Don't be afraid, Agatha," said Frederick's tender voice. Then they were gone.

After awhile Tabitha's companion spoke:

"That was my son's voice, and he was talking to Agatha Campbell," he said sternly. "Now, who are you?"

Tabitha stiffened. "I am Tabitha Campbell," she said haughtily.

"Good heavens!" exclaimed the man.

They rode on in silence. When they were in front of Tabitha's cottage the driver let down the buggy top so that the moonlight fell on Tabitha's face. Gently he untied the white veil while she sat in frozen silence. When it had fallen about her shoulders in a swirling cloud he leaned forward, and she saw that it was indeed Jacob Lee.

"Tell me all about it, Tabitha," he said gently. "You are in trouble."

Tabitha caught her breath—why, it was all just as though the dreary years had not come between them. Jacob was speaking in his old authoritive tone.

She told him the story of the projected elopement.

"You mean—you mean that you were set against my boy?" he asked in a stunned tone.

Tabitha was silent.

"Well," he drew a deep breath, "if you've held resentment all these years, Tab, why, you must have cared, although somebody told me that you were tired of me. Well, that doesn't excuse me for what I did, but I've had years enough to think it all over and to be ashamed of the part I played."

Still Tabitha was silent.

"If you—why, perhaps you—Tabitha, do you still care after all these years?" How wonderfully tender was his voice!

"I don't know," quavered Tabitha, "but I've been so lonely, and it seems good for you to be here."

"Then it is all right, Tab," he cried gayly. His arm slipped around her, and she fell naturally into the curve of it. "We will have some happy years yet if God is willing. I guess we met Fred and Agatha in the woods. They must be married by this time. Shall we drive on to meet them and tell Fred how near he came to eloping with you?" He laughed softly.

"Yes, do," whispered Tabitha meekly. "And you can tell him I decided to elope with his father instead."

TARIFF FIRST.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Enunciates New Liberal Platform.

JOLIETTE, Que., Oct. 21.—The necessity of reducing the tariff for the purpose of cutting down the high cost of living was announced by Sir Wilfrid Laurier here on Saturday as being the first item on the Liberal program, which was, said the leader of the Opposition, more important to Canadians than the building of Dreadnoughts. The second item was more railways, especially the connection of Montreal with the Transcontinental, and, finally, Sir Wilfrid repeated that the Liberals would oppose any tribute to England in the shape of a contribution of $35,000,000, as proposed by the Government at the last session of Parliament.

Three Aviators Killed.

EPINAL, France, Oct. 21.—Lieut. Carnier and Sapper Janrot of the Epinal Military Aeroplane depot, were returning from Buc yesterday, when the engine of their monoplane stopped suddenly. The machine capsized and the aviators, falling from a height of 800 feet, were killed.

About the same time Corpl. Aviator Dautroche of the same depot, while making a flight near the depot, met with an almost similar accident. The engine of his machine became detached and the biplane turned over and fell into the River Moselle. Dautroche was drowned.

Snow Descends In Kentucky.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 21. — A light fall of snow was recorded yesterday morning in eastern and southern Kentucky. Trenton reported a fall of two inches, and in several other places the ground was covered with one inch or more. The earliest fall of snow previously recorded in this state was Oct. 27, nearly fifty years ago. There was a rapid fall in temperature last night, and freezing weather generally over the state is forecast for to-day. Snow began falling in Louisville last night.

ENGLAND'S CURIOUS WELL.

Its Water Never at the Same Level For Two Consecutive Minutes.

Two miles out from Settle, on the main road between that town and Ingleton, Yorkshire, England, there is to be found one of the most curious of natural phenomena in the shape of the famous ebbing and flowing well of Giggleswick.

A small, unpretentious little structure, scarcely to be distinguished from the ordinary trough of water to be seen on many of our country roads, it is yet one of the most quaint and fascinating spectacles one could hope to see. As the name implies, the well has the nature of a tide. It ebbs and flows continually, though by no means with regularity.

Sometimes the privileged traveler will see the oblong stone basin filled with clear water; then, even as he gazes into its pellucid depths, the water gradually sinks until the trough is half empty, or it may be more. There is barely time to wonder at this strange thing ere, with a rush and a whirl, the trough is again full. The ebb and flow continue with more or less marked effect, and the water is never at the same level for two consecutive minutes. Sometimes the outflow has scarcely begun before the basin again fills, but at other times the trough is almost emptied.—Wide World Magazine.

Early Use of Tobacco.

I have heard my grandfather say that one pipe was handed from man to man round about the table. They had first silver pipes, the ordinary sort made use of a walnut shell and a straw. Tobacco was sold then for its weight in silver. I have heard some of our old yeomen neighbors say that when they went to Malmesbury or Chippenham market they culled out their biggest shillings to lay in the scales against the tobacco. Sir W. R., standing in a stand at Sir Robert Poyntz's park at Acton, took a pipe of tobacco, which made the ladies quit it until he had done.—"Brief Lines Set Down by John Aubrey," 1669-96.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are not a new and untried remedy—our grandfathers used them. Half a century ago, before Confederation, they were on sale in nearly every drug or general store in the Canada of that day, and were the recognized cure in thousands of homes for Constipation, Indigestion, Biliousness, Rheumatism and Kidney and Liver Troubles. To-day they are just as effective, just as reliable as ever, and nothing better has yet been devised to Cure Common Ills

Three Mighty Forces Close Linked

Have you ever noted how an audience yawns in the face of an uninspired speaker?

On the other hand, have you noted how an audience will lean forward and grasp the chair arms when the speaker reveals enthusiasm?

Enthusiasm is the buoyant expression of truth. To impart belief in anything, a man must believe it deeply himself. We call such a man an enthusiast.

This applies to the written word also---particularly to advertisements. When the manufacturer really believes in his wares, his enthusiasm will almost inevitably find expression in Advertising. And enthusiasm will be contagious—his audience—the readers of the newspaper—will, figuratively speaking, "lean forward and listen intently."

To be convincing an advertisement must convey an unmistakable impression of enthusiasm. This it will only do when the article advertised has inherent worth.

Thus we have:
Sincerity -- Enthusiasm -- Advertising;
Three mighty forces, close-linked.

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this newspaper. ¶ If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto.

A HITCH IN BRIDGE QUESTION

Company Would Provide Only 33 Foot Space for Vessels

A COMMUNICATION

Mayor Bradburn Wants Wider Space on Account of Current

A hitch has occurred in the negotiations by the city with the C.P.R. in regard to a swing in the bridge crossing the Otonabee. Last night at Council meeting the following letter from G. L. Wanklyn, general executive assistant of the C.P.R., was read:

"Dear Mr. Mayor,—I am in receipt of your letter of the 14th inst., re proposed span in the railway bridge over the Otonabee river. I regret that you were unable to concur in my suggestion for a swing providing a clear waterway of at least 33 feet on either side of the pivot span which would be placed in the middle span in the existing bridge.

"After submitting your letter to inform you that, under present circumstances, the company has decided to withdraw its application to construct the fixed bridge to accommodate its heaviest locomotives, and will allow the existing bridge to remain. This will, of course, prevent vent our using the heaviest type of locomotive over this part of the railway; but this is preferable to incurring the enormous expense of providing an entirely new bridge with swing span."

His Worship explained that on account of the current, 33 feet was not sufficient for boats. Also it was desirous that the swing be provided at the west end of the bridge.

Mayor Bradburn will reply to the letter. The company may yet decide to go ahead with the project.

Poems In Pastry.

Wafer Gingerbread.

Pour seven fluid ounces of honey into a basin and mix in two ounces each of warm butter and moist sugar, half that quantity of ground sugar and lastly eight ounces of sifted flour Then stir well until smooth. Turn out on to a greased baking sheet, rolling out very thin, and bake in a slow oven. Take out and cut into squares while still hot, roll the squares into shapes and slowly allow to get cold.

Summer Cookies.

Warm three-quarters of a pound of butter and beat it until creamy with a pound of powdered sugar. Mix in three beaten eggs and stir in slowly a pint of sifted flour and a tablespoonful of caraway seeds. Stir a teaspoonful of soda with a teacupful of milk, strain it, mix it with a half teacupful of cider and mix gradually with the other ingredients. Work the mixture well, adding more flour if required to bring it to the desired stiffness. Sprinkle flour on the bread board, place the paste on it, roll out and cut into rounds Lay on a buttered baking sheet and bake in a quick oven. When a trifle browned they are done.

Bertha's Biscuits.

Put half a pound of flour in a basin make a hollow in the center and work in the whites of three eggs, half a teacupful of cream, an ounce of sugar, a wineglassful of brandy and a little salt When the dough is quite smooth cut into two inch rounds, prick all over with a fork and bake on a floured baking sheet in a hot oven. Serve cold.

Boston Cream Puffs.

To half a pint of water add a quarter of a pound of lard and a little salt and boil. Add a quarter of a pound of flour or a little more and stir over the fire for five minutes or until it becomes a smooth paste. Remove from the fire and mix in five eggs, one at a time. Drop small quantities of the mixture with a spoon on to slightly buttered baking tins, allowing an inch or so of distance between them. Put the sheet into a moderate oven and bake for twenty minutes. Open the puffs by making an incision in the side and fill with cream.

Corn Custard.

Have ready half a dozen ears of corn as young and milky as possible, two whole eggs and the yolk of another, a scant half teaspoonful of salt, one and a quarter cupfuls of milk and one and a half tablespoonfuls of sugar. After mixing thoroughly stir in the milk and bake the custard in cups or in a big earthen pudding dish, as preferred.

Lobster and Shrimp Salad.

Arrange in a salad bowl the white leaves of the hearts of cabbage lettuce or cos lettuce, if small and young. Remove the meat from a freshly boiled lobster and divide into small pieces with two forks and place in little heaps upon the lettuce leaves. Between each heap lay slices of tomato and slices of beet root alternately, and upon these slices of hard boiled eggs. Make a mound in the center with a pint of freshly picked shrimps. Crown these with small green tufts of watercress. Send to table with small glass cups of mayonnaise.

EXPROPRIATION

City Council Passes By-law Providing for the Expropriation of Light and Power Company's Distribution Service

The session of the City Council last night lasted but forty-five minutes and in that time, the City Dads passed one of the most important bylaws ever before local civic legislators.

The by-law presented by Ald. Johnston, chairman of the the Power Committee, called for the expropriation of the Peterboro Light and Power Company's Distribution service. It was passed.

POWER COMMITTEE

The following report of the Power Committee was also adopted:

That the City Treasurer be authorized to pay on the certificate of the Mayor and Chairman of this Committee, expert witnesses and others and for models and other things, they may be required in connection with the arbitration to fix the value of the property of the Peterborough Light and Power Company

That the Peterborough Light and Power Company be informed that the city is ready to pay $95,000 for all the property of the Company the city has authority to expropriate under acts of the Ontario Legislature and in addition such sums may be fixed and determined by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario, for and in respect of any costs, charges, and expenses, incurred by the company in soliciting and in procuring any contracts existing on May 6th, 1913, for the supply of electrical power or energy to any person by the Company, and that the Company be requested to give an acceptance or refusal of this offer without delay.

PLUMBERS FAVOR PETER THOMPSON AS INSPECTOR

A petition signed by C. A. J. Duranceau and seven other contracting plumbers was presented to the City Council last night asking that Peter Thompson be appointed Plumbing Inspector.

Adamson and Dobbin did not sign.

The question of appointing an Inspector for plumbing, as well as for other departments, is now before the Council. Mr. Thompson is assistant inspector, but he has been in charge of all the work. As has been stated before in Council proceedings, his work has not been satisfactory to the Council, but the plumbers appear to have a different opinion of his worth.

"Pastmaster of his business, careful and painstaking," were some of the bouquets to Mr. Thompson contained in the petition. No action was taken.

BELL TELEPHONE CO. WILL EXTEND UNDERGROUND WORK

Ask for Right of Way in Lanes — Some of the Distribution Poles Now on Side Walk Curbs Could be Removed

The Board of Works will deal with the matter referred to in the following communication received by Mayor Bradburn from the General Yanage of the Bell Telephone Co.:

"Dear Sir,—Referring to your letter of September 8th. to Mr. G. O. Cameron, our manager at Peterborough, regarding underground work on certain streets in Peterborough, the General Plant Superintendent advises that since I referred this matter to him he has received definite information that the Paving contractor will not proceed with the paving in sections in which we should instal underground conduit this fall and therefore the work can be held over until the spring

"We are prepared to do this work, but in return would require an agreement with the city granting us rights of way in alleys for distribution purposes, and if such an agreement would be satisfactory we will submit a draft.

"You are aware, I presume, that our underground already extends on George St. from Wolfe to Brock, on Hunter from Water to Aylmer, and on Charlotte from Stewart to Aylmer. If we can arrange for an agreement as above indicated, we will complete the balance of the work required, viz., the extension of our George St. underground from Brock to McDonnel streets, and the extension of two branches on Charlotte street, to enable us to effect distribution from the rear, ahead of the paving. As our poles are not on the street, but on the sidewalk side of the curbstone, such of them as are not required for distribution purposes can be removed as soon as as the underground cables are installed.

Mascot Ring For Duchess.

The mascot engagement ring is the latest thing in jewelry. It is said that Prince Arthur has given the Duchess of Fife an old ring belonging to the family of the Red Prince, to which house his mother belongs. This jewel has a history. It was given by a forbear of the duchess to her fiance, a soldier prince, when he was going to the wars. It is in the shape of a nine, within which are nine magnificent diamonds taking the form of an anchor, indicative of faith and trustfulness. For years the mascot ring has been in the possession of the Duchess of Connaught.

Don't throw away the unsealed envelopes that bring circulars to the house. Cut off the gummed strips and save them. They will serve a dozen household uses.

CHANGE IN C.P.R. TIME TABLE

The C.P.R. announce a change in the time table for trains, at the local station, the same to go into effect on Sunday, October 26.

Going East— the 12.10 a.m. train is changed to 12.15 a.m., the 1.01 a.m. train is changed to 12.58 a.m., and the 7.25 p.m. train is changed to 6.37 p.m.

Going West— There is but one change, the 5.26 a.m. train being changed to 5.21 a.m.

But Few Know the Origin of Handy Little Red "Baedeker."

Almost every traveler in Europe has often had occasion to appreciate Baedeker, but few are those who know the origin of these extremely handy little red books.

The Baedeker family have been devoted to books and book-selling for nearly 300 years. It was the sight of Murray's handbooks that fired Karl Baedeker 80 years ago with the ambition of providing a similar series for his countrymen. He had been an energetic traveler himself through western Europe, and he had already published and improved Klein's Guide to the Rhine. The next volumes in the series—Belgium and Holland, Germany, Austria and Switzerland—were issued from Coblentz, and it was not till later that the firm removed to their present enormous headquarters at Leipsic. But they left Karl Baedeker's remains behind, and many a grateful traveler visiting Coblentz has taken his hat off at the little grave.

When Karl Baedeker died in 1859 he left three sons to carry on the work, and the series of guides had almost crowded out the rest of their publishing business. The youngest of these three brothers, Fritz Baedeker, is now head of the firm, and has trained another generation with a view to their improving the efficiency of the series.

His sons have set themselves to master most of the European tongues and the polity of most of the chief powers. Hans has studied archaeology in Rome and Alpine lore in Switzerland, while Ernst has joined him in studying in London, Edinburgh and other leading capitals, and both have qualified in other important respects for helping to bring the guides to perfection.

The Number Fourteen In France.

So far as France is concerned, it is the number fourteen that has played a conspicuous and generally portentous part in her history. On May 14, 1554, the Rue de la Ferronnerie was enlarged by order of Henri II., and four times fourteen years later Henri IV. was assassinated there by Ravaillac—namely, on May 14, 1610. Henri had lived four times fourteen years, fourteen weeks and four times fourteen days—i.e., fifty-six years and five months. Then Henri' son, Louis XIII., died May 14, 1643, (the same day and month as his father). And 1643 added together equals fourteen, just as 1553 (the year of the birth of Henri IV.) equals fourteen. Louis XIV. ascended the throne 1643, which added together equals fourteen and similarly the year of his death (1715) equals.

The Business of Life.

This is the task appointed: To hold the vision of a final arrival at some fitting destination; to maintain undiminished a sense of personal worthiness; to be defeated in each foolish dream of the younger life and so to be disciplined into a large vision, made more sure by adversity; to be delayed for most of a lifetime and yet to believe in the strength of the human spirit to surmount pain, outlive sin and defeat malice and envy; to believe in the gradual but all conquering power of good will; to be saddened, but not embittered; to be beaten, but not conquered. That is the stern business set before us.

SOUTH MONAGHAN

Special Correspondence.

SOUTH MONAGHAN, Oct. 22.—Mr. Wm Bonas, of Peterborough, was the guest of W. Brown last week.

Mr. W. A. Tate, of Toronto, was visiting her brother, Mr. J. A. Tate.

South Monaghan Presbyterian church has extended a call to Rev. Mr. Conache, late of Ayr, Scotland, which has been accepted, the induction to take place about the 7th of November.

Mr. Roy Byers, of Peterborough, was in the village last week.

PRINCE GEORGE BRITISH COLUMBIA

The entire Indian village on the site of Prince George, the new Grand Trunk Pacific town, will be burned down within a few days to make way for the new town. The torch will be applied ruthlessly and the ancestral homes of the tribe will be swept away to the last building. Even the churches of the natives will not be spared.

The Indians are moving their property to two new villages built for them on the reserve in the Goose country, 15 miles up the Fraser, and on Duck Lake, 12 miles up the Nechaco River. When the Railway Company purchases the Indian reserve which is the site of Prince George, it was agreed through the Dominion Government that new villages should be built for the tribe.

These new Indian towns are now being completed and they have been inspected by representatives of the Dominion authorities. They are said to be a credit to the Indian Departments, as well as to the contractors and are probably the most remarkable Indian villages ever built in respect to being essentially modern.

The town to be burned down is one of the oldest Indian settlements known in British Columbia. It has been an Indian village from time immemorial. The tribe is known as the Carrier from the fact that early discoverers found they carried charred bones of their ancestors constantly with them. They are also known as the Western Denes. 44

For washing windows, which should be done when the sun is not shining on them, use warm water with a tablespoonful of kerosene, added to each pail of water.

NOT A TROUSER GOWN.

This Design Has, Though, Suggestion of Split Skirt.

COSTUME OF MOIRE EPANGLINE.

No, this is not a trouserette costume It is simply a chic draped skirt originated by a French dressmaker. The costume is made of moire epangline—a new fabric resembling bengaline, but having the curious watered pattern of moire.

The coat is cut on Cossack lines and a huge fichu of lace falls gracefully to one side. With models of this kind smart boots are necessary, and shoes with patent leather vamps, Louis heels and buttoned tops of material harmonizing with the costume are the correct footwear.

Snapshots of Fashion.

The newest waist line is short in front and long in the back.

No matter how many flounces appear on the new skirts, the foundation is always narrow.

Rose and black, double faced, are the colors oftenest chosen for the sashes of white voile dresses.

The kimono sleeve continues for dressy costumes, but with a closely fitting forearm which necessitates a large armhole.

The "box back," a straight plastron of printed voile down the back, with a similar one in front and cuff and collar to match, is the newest thing in voile waists.

Belts are worn with no regard to whether they make the waist look larger or not.

The tiny court plaster patches are worn by fastidious women.

Green with canary and king's blue with gold are new color combinations.

Thick, soft materials which look weighty, but are ideally light, are promised for fall evening wraps.

When Potatoes Scorch.

If the water boils off potatoes and they become scorched, quickly set the agate or tin kettle in which they are cooked into another kettle of cold water. The potatoes will loosen from the bottom of the kettle and will not taste scorched.

Browning's Pauline.

The first edition of Browning's "Pauline" was sold at auction for $2,400, yet not only did Browning receive nothing for it originally, but he would have withdrawn it from print if it had been possible. Yet so highly did Rossetti think of this despised masterpiece that, not being able to find a copy elsewhere, he went to the British museum library and spent several laborious days copying it word for word.

Wasteful.

Grasper (a very careful man)—No, I should never allow my only daughter to marry a journalist. He always wastes one side of the paper. And still less should she wed a poet. He doesn't even go to the end of the line.—Exchange.

OMEMEE NEWS

OMEMEE, Oct. 22— Rev. D. H. Currie occupied the pulpit of the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening and delivered a Thanksgiving discourse, treating the subject from the sub-topics: "National, Family, and personal thanksgiving." While the offering was being received, the choir rendered a very appropriate athem.

Mr. Noel Clarke of Peterboro spent the Thanksgiving at his home here.

Mr. Chas. Lindsay of Lindsay was in town last week on business.

Special services were held in the Methodist Church on Sunday. Large congregations listened with rapt attention to the addresses at 10.30 a.m. and at 7 p.m., delivered by the Rev. Mr. Cannom of Canton. On the afternoon of Sunday, rally services of much interest and enthusiasm marked the efforts of the Sunday School staff. The floral decorations at the Sunday services were the subject of favorable comment because of their beauty and artistic arrangement. On Monday evening the ladies of the church served up a sumptuous supper which preceded an interesting lecture by the Rev. Mr. Bamforth of Port Perry, whose subject was—"Four months' experience in a Western Mining Town."

Mr. MacIntyre of Lindsay made a business call last week.

Mr. Wm. Howden of Bethel was a business visitor to Omemee a few days ago.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Stinson and daughter, Miss Eveline, visited out of town friends on Sunday week.

Mrs. White of Dunsford was the guest of her niece, Mrs. Magee.

Mr. Ed Adams and party motored through town last week.

Mr. Alvin Courtney of Havelock spent a short holiday with friends at Lindsay.

A number of our citizens attended the fair at Port Hope.

Miss Robert A. Mahood of Reaboro was the guest of Miss Thirza Currie.

Mr. Hancock of Peterboro was a business visitor to Omemee.

Mrs. J. J. Nichols spent a few days the guest of friends at Cameron.

Mr. A. Laidley was a visitor to Peterboro last week.

Mrs. Elmer Jones and her daughter were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Jones.

Mr. Percy Pogue was visiting friends in town and the surrounding neighborhood.

Miss Maye McConnell of Keene visited with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. G. McConnell.

Miss Wray spent the Thanksgiving at her home at Lindsay.

Mr. A. E. Byers spent the holiday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. White.

Dr. McAlpine of Lindsay, made a professional visit to Omemee recently.

The W. F. M. S. of the Presbyterian church held its annual thankoffering meeting on Wednesday afternoon in the Sunday school room. There was a splendid attendance to enjoy a varied programme. Besides the usual business part of the meeting, there was a reading by Mrs. H. Lamb, a solo by Mrs. A. G. Hodgetts, an address by Rev. D. H. Currie, and a talk by Mrs. L. H. Messmore, who spent fifty years as a missionary among the women of India. She narrated the story of her life work among the heathen, telling of the progress of education and the Gospel in that densely populated British Empire, the seat, for centuries of idol worship. Her address was wonderful for a lady of her advanced years. The ladies served refreshments and the session was concluded by the pastor with benediction. The offering was quite liberal.

Miss Laura Mallory of Brantford was home for Thanksgiving.

Mr. Davie Morden of Peterborough was the guest of his father, Mr Jos. Morden.

Reeve and Mrs. Mulligan have for their Thanksgiving guest their son, Mr. Clifford, who is a student of Toronto University.

Mr. John Murray of Peterborough spent Sunday with his parents.

Mr Robert Thompson of Toronto was the guest of his parents, Dr and Mrs. J. N. Thompson for the holiday.

Mr. E. Jones, teller of the Bank of Toronto, Omemee, was the guest of friends at Reaboro Sunday.

The Anglicans are arranging for a grand celebration and supper about the 9th and 10th of November.

The Presbyterians will hold their anniversary services next Sunday when services will be conducted at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m., by the Rev. P. B. Thornton. The next evening Monday, 27th. inst., a fowl supper will be served and this is to be followed by an interesting lecture, addresses, quartettes, etc.

Miss E. Bradley was home from Peterboro Normal for Thanksgiving.

Miss Gladys Henderson of Toronto spent a few days last week visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Henderson.

Mr. Wm. Laidley, an old town boy has been calling of his friends here and enjoying an outing on the river. He spent the summer at Toronto, for which city he left on Saturday, intending to call on friends at Lindsay en route.

Mr M. Hayes of London has been buying cattle for shipping.

Mr. M. Hayes of London has been buying cattle for shipping.

Rev. C. Carew was the guest of his brother, councillor S. Carew.

Mr. J. T. Beatty, ex-Reeve of Omemee, and Mr. W. G. Stephenson, attended an indignation meeting of the I. O. F. at Fenelon Falls on Wednesday. The object of the meeting was to protest against the advanced assessment. Six or seven courts sent representatives, ex-reeve Beatty being in the chair.

Mr Wellington of Ops has moved to Mr. T. A. McConnell's farm just south of Omemee.

Miss Jessie Nichols, teacher, is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Nichols of King street, for the holiday.

Mr. Wm. Colvin of Lindsay, an ex-Omemeeite was in town recently looking up old friends.

Mrs John J. Mitchell has gone to Mt. Horeb to reside, with her daughter Mrs. Belch.

Miss Lulu Balfour of Lindsay was the guest of Miss Birdie Lamb over the week end.

Miss Ola Earle, student of Albert College, Belleville, spent Thanksgiving with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Earle, of Sturgeon street.

Mrs Jos. Gardiner of Franklin, paid a siti to her sister, Mrs. H. Bradley

Mr. Cecil Mills of Lindsay spent the week end and holiday at his home here.

Mr. Sam Skuce came home from Toronto for the holiday.

Mr. T. Shaw of Toronto called on friends in Omemee on Monday and was the guest of Mr. Sam Skuce.

Mr. Noel Clarke of Peterboro was the guest of his parents over the week end.

The Rifle Association held its last match of the season on Monday afternoon.

Mr. J. A. Wylie, pharmacist of the T. Eaton Company, Toronto, spent Sunday and Monday at the home of his mother, Mrs. L. Wilson.

SMITH TOWNSHIP COUNCIL MEETING

Messrs. P. P. Young and R. A. Charlton addressed the Council and presented a petition signed by a large number of the ratepayers of Young's Point and vicinity, requesting that the Council make a liberal grant towards the construction of cement sidewalks and also that the statute labor in that Road Division go towards the work.

Reeve Garbutt said that in this case the Council would be governed by the Municipal Act, and that it would be expedient to obtain legal advice before proceeding.

Moved by Mr. Northey, seconded by Mr. McKee, that the matter be referred to the township solicitor, and that an estimation of the cost of construction be made.

Messrs. Moher and Ivey addressed the Council in favor of a petition which had been presented requesting that the Council take immediate steps to have Downie street opened.

Reeve Garbutt explained that after the last meeting the township solicitor was consulted, and instructions were given that a written report be made. This report had not been received, and as Mr. Peck was absent on two weeks' vacation, the matter was laid over until his return.

Colonization Road By-law No. 721, to expend $500.00 on the Burleigh Road from the 14th to the 16th concession, received its first and second readings.

Moved by Mr. McKee and Mr. Telford that the township pay two dollars per month to Jane Hampton, in accordance with the agreement made with the Foley Estate. Time to date from July 1st, 1913.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Cann and Mr. Telford that a water trough be erected on the West Communication Road.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Northey and Mr. Cann that the Treasurer be instructed to pay the following accounts:

Climax Good Roads Machine Co., repairs to crusher	$ 2.00
Fitzgerald & Co.	1.25
Review Printing Co., printing	14.10
Bruce Garbutt, drawing tile and repairing culvert	8.00

Circumstantial Evidence

By DAVID WALTER CHURCH

A stagecoach lumbered along through the Rocky mountains in the region of a newly discovered mining district. In it were three women and four men. One of the men had a young face, but was prematurely gray. He kept his fellow passengers from becoming dull by telling stories and otherwise amusing them. When the coach reached a relay he left it and those he had entertained were sorry to part with him.

The coach had not gone far on the next relay before the passengers heard pistol shots, and the body of the driver came tumbling down from the box. Immediately a man with white hair and whose face was concealed by a mask rode to the side of the coach where the passengers could see him and ordered them to step out, line up and disgorge. The order was obeyed by all except one man, who, watching his opportunity, struck the robber a blow on the cheek; the strings which tied on his mask were broken and it fell to the ground, revealing a face that excited the astonishment of all.

In the robber they recognized their fellow traveler who had but recently parted from them.

He shot the man who had attacked him, collected the valuables of the passengers and rode away. One of the men mounted to the box and drove to the next relay.

The robbery was reported and a description of the robber given. A posse was organized and scoured the country round about. But they did not have to go far to find their man. He was found on the porch of a tavern smoking a cigar. After looking at him a moment the sheriff arrested him.

"What do you want with me?" he asked in real or pretended astonishment.

"You're wanted for the robbery of the coach that was held up and the murder of two persons. What's your name?"

"Edward Livermore."

"Well, Livermore, if that's your name, we're going to take you to the county seat to be tried. Come along."

Livermore assured the men that they were making a mistake, but they paid no attention to what he said and took him to jail. He begged to have a speedy trial since he was looking for mining property and the mistake that had been made was delaying him. His request was granted partly because the evidence of the other passengers of the coach in which he had traveled was required and they were anxious to go about their business.

At the trial every one of them swore that Livermore was the robber and murderer. Another thing against him was that he had come to the tavern on a horse the same color as the robber had ridden when the coach was attacked. Livermore explained this by saying that he had hired the horse near the relay where he had left the coach.

Not a person in the courtroom but believed the prisoner and the robber were the same person. He had but little evidence to give in his behalf, and when it was in the public prosecutor rested the case. The judge instructed the jury, which retired and in half an hour returned with a verdict of guilty.

The judge was about to pass sentence when a man, who said he was a barber, entered the courtroom and asked to be heard. He said that the day before the robbery a man, who resembled the accused, had entered his shop to be shaved. During the shaving he had talked with the barber, who told him that he had recently come from the east with a remnant of a stock, including some wigs. The customer had purchased a white one.

This testimony made an impression on all in court except the judge. He considered it for a few minutes, then announced that he had decided not to regard it. Six fellow passengers of the prisoner had sworn that he was the murderer. The story of the barber was on its face a cheap device on the part of some friend to save him. It would not accord with the laws of evidence to regard it, conflicting as it did with the testimony of so many disinterested witnesses of good character.

Livermore simply declared his innocence, saying that the real robber had bought the white wig for a disguise to help conceal his identity. The witnesses had been deceived by the similarity in the appearance of the two men.

Having listened to this statement the judge passed the sentence, condemning the convicted man to be hanged on a certain date. He died protesting his innocence and predicting that some day the real murderer would turn up.

The murder and execution were followed by other robberies, apparently by different persons, for no two were dressed alike or looked alike, though, being always masked, their faces were never seen. Finally one of them was arrested and convicted. The evening before he was swung off he confessed that he had committed all these crimes in different disguises, the first being the murder for which Livermore had been executed. His resemblance to Livermore was very strong. When a white wig was put on his head several of those who had testified against Livermore saw their error and felt they had sent an innocent man to the scaffold. The man who had committed the crime was executed, but it was not possible to bring Livermore back to life.

A Genius.

"Oh, doctor, I feel so discouraged—whooping cough, measles, mumps and croup, one after the other, and now my child is ill again!"

"Why, the boy's a genius!"

"A genius?"

"Yes—infinite capacity for taking pains, you know."—London Tit-Bits.

Plaited Skirts.

The return of the plaited skirt is favorable to the wishes of the thousands of sensible women who deplore the preposterous tightness of the fashionable dress of today. These plaited skirts are made in very soft and supple materials, such as homespun, voile and the favorite silk and satin. Tailors catch down the plaits invisibly at the back and in that way maintain the adherence to close outline, but even this is often in a very modified sense, and in consequence deliverance from the mermaid skirt seems not impossible in a few months.

With these plaited skirts the jackets worn are very short, some of them having no basque whatever. They are made in embroidered silk, satin or crash, with rather large patterns in the liveliest of colors. One in slate blue is embroidered with yellow roses and very bright green leaves. The revers and collar match the rest of the little garment, and the sleeves are just long enough to turn the elbows.

The Way to Clean Matting.

A broom is not good for matting, and neither is the frequent use of a wet cloth. The carpet sweeper, used across the grain, is better, but the vacuum cleaner is best of all. The hearth brush is a life preserver to matting, and a labor saver to the housekeeper.

It raises little dust, keeps the matting and the corners in proper conditions and does not roughen or injure the matting's surface. This brush may be washed without injury if quickly dried.

Care of Gold Jewelry.

Gold jewelry that is dulled may be brightened by dipping it into a solution of warm soapsuds containing one part of ammonia to three parts of water. Rinse well and polish with a clean chamois rag.

Dull gold may be cleaned by rubbing it gently with a soft brush moistened in bicarbonate of soda and water to which a few drops of ammonia have been added. Rinse thoroughly and dry in pure, warm sawdust.

In Vacation Time.

Sometimes in my vacation days,
Before it is September,
I peep into my books to see
How much I can remember.
To me it is astonishing
How I've forgotten everything.
The maps are full of foreign lands;
The song books seem crazy;
The grammar's Greek no tongue can speak;
The history is hazy.
It even seems absurd to me
That nine times seven are sixty-three.
The holidays do surely change
Old things from what they were,
And make familiar people strange.
Why, now, if Christopher
Columbus met me at the door
I'd hardly know him any more!

An Indignant Artist.

Haydon, the painter, was much disgusted when he visited London in 1846 at the time when two of his finest pictures were being shown at the Egyptian hall, and the public thronged into another room where General Tom Thumb was on view. "They rush by thousands to see Tom Thumb," wrote the disappointed painter in his diary. "Their eyes are open, but their sense is shut. It is an insanity, a rabies, a madness, a furor, a dream!" Another entry later on runs: "Tom Thumb had 12,000 people last week. R. R. Haydon 133½ (the half a little girl). Exquisite taste of the English people!"

Kuntz's
OLD GERMAN LAGER

"HURRY up with a bottle of Kuntz's Old German," said the man from New York. "It's worth a trip to Canada to get a drink of this corking brew. There's nothing like the "Old German" flavor in the United States, you know. Perhaps because the "Old German" process of brewing is so very costly. Anyways, you Canadians ought to feel proud of Kuntz's for brewing such a superb beverage. And I guess you are from the number I see drinking Kuntz's Old German."

"Kuntz's Lagers and Ales are sold in Peterboro by Alexander Elliott & Co, George St., and by P. J. Kenney, Central Liquor Store, Simcoe St."

LOCAL RUNNER WAS FOURTH

Geo. Robinson Did Well in the Herald Race

Once more George Robinson, the well-known Brinton A. C. runner proved his gameness by running fourth in the Hamilton Herald Road race on Monday. Robinson's time for the seventeen miles was 2.02.57.

The Herald has the following to say about the local man.

So well and pluckily did George Robinson, of the Brinton A.C. of Peterboro, run on his first appearance in the big race, that the race officials have decided to reward his efforts with a medal. He came here yesterday morning and ran over the course for the first time. Early in the race it was realized that he did not have a chance to get any of the three places, but he gamely stuck it out, and finished strong.

Magic Music.

One of the players is sent out of the room, and the rest of them agree upon some simple task for him to perform, such as moving a chair, touching an ornament or finding some hidden object. He is then called in, and some one begins to play the piano. If the performer plays loudly the "seeker" knows that he is nowhere near the object he is in search for. When the music is soft, then he knows he is near, and when the music ceases altogether he knows that he has found the object he was intended to look for.

About Glassmaking.

Glassmaking was at one time the most aristocratic of all industries. A French law passed under Louis IX. allowed none but men of noble birth to set up glassblowing establishments, or even to work therein. For many centuries this was the only trade noblemen could venture to work in without any danger of losing caste. The art of glassmaking reached this country through France, and in its early days in England those engaged in it styled themselves "gentlemen glassblowers."

BASEBALL STRATEGY.

A Game That Was Won by Two Players and a Live Snake.

Tommy Tucker lost a game for Washington to Chicago once and started a battle all because of a trick Bill Dahlen and Bill Everett put up on him.

Tom never did like snakes. Indeed, he held them in abhorrence, and in some way Dahlen discovered this. Washington was to play Chicago that afternoon, and during the morning practice on the west side grounds Dahlen and Everett discovered a small gartersnake and treasured it up.

Along in the fourth inning Everett cracked out a hit, and as soon as he landed on first base Dahlen, ignoring his usual custom, ran out to coach, and a moment later he slipped the harmless little reptile to Everett, who dropped it into Tucker's hip pocket.

Tommy discovered the snake just as the pitcher was delivering the ball and, with a yelp, he deserted first base. The batter had hit to the shortstop, who gathered up the ball on the run and started to throw to second, but was too late and threw toward first. Tommy was twenty feet off the base, jumping up and down and hunting for something with which to kill that snake, and the ball went to the stands and Chicago scored four runs before the inning ended.

Tucker protested wildly, but the umpire couldn't find anything about snakes in the rule book and let it go at that.

Try a Want Ad. in The Review

ALL IN THREE WORDS

By ALLAN G. LAMOND

While scanning a newspaper for the purpose of passing the time my eyes lighted on the following advertisement:

Mme. Durant—Healer. Removes the wear and tear of domestic troubles. Reunites divorced couples. Effects reconciliation between parted lovers.

I cut the ad. out of the newspaper and put it in my pocketbook. About once an hour I read it over. I wondered if Mme. Durant could help me. I wanted some one to go to Delia and show her how unreasonable she had been. At last I started for the address given, with no definite purpose.

I expected to find Mme. Durant in a dingy apartment, with worn furniture and not overcleanly. Madame herself would doubtless be either French, Italian, Spanish or of some other superstitious race and rely chiefly for her fees upon any or all of these peoples. She would be of tawny complexion, hair like an Indian and eyes piercing black.

She was nothing of the kind. I rang the doorbell of a neat little house, and a tidy young woman answered the summons. She was Mme. Durant, only she was an American and Durant was not her name. She had adopted it because she considered it more attractive than her own, Ida Smith. She invited me into a neatly furnished living room, and after hemming and hawing and stammering I finally got out what I wanted to tell her about my difficulty with Delia and asked if she would engage to bring the young lady to her senses.

She said that from what I had told her she judged Delia to be entirely in the wrong, while the position I had taken was unimpeachable. She would engage to settle the matter between us for $100, half of which was to be paid in advance and the other half after the reconciliation. If there was no reconciliation I was not to pay the remainder of the fee. She was to make the acquaintance of my ex fiancee, and without letting her know her mission gain her confidence and convince her that she owed me a humble apology.

This was a heads I win, tails you lose in favor of Miss Smith. But she seemed very confident of being able to bring Delia and me together and had an honest countenance. This and my desire for a "makeup" decided me, and drawing a check for $50 I gave it to her. I sat some time after this listening to the cures she had effected. She had brought together a father and a daughter, the latter having been turned out of doors for marrying a man the father did not like. She had reunited no end of divorced couples and parted lovers. She did it all on a principle which could be stated in three words. When I asked her to give me these words she laughed and said. "Should I do so you would expect me to hand you back the retaining fee you have given me, and there would be no reconciliation."

I heard from Mme Durant, or Miss Smith, as I prefer to call her, within two days. During this time she had managed to make Delia's acquaintance and learned about our separation. The following was the letter I received from the woman I had hired to convince Delia that she had ill treated me:

Dear Sir—I suppose you were giving me a correct version of the disagreement between you and your fiancee. I am convinced from what Miss Douglas has told me that you are entirely unworthy of so estimable a young lady. I return your check, since I find that the conditions under which I accepted it are entirely at variance with the facts. Yours truly,

MME. DURANT.

P. S.—Should you desire any further information in the matter you are at liberty to call at my house, and I will give it to you.

Astonished, chagrined, mortified, I began to consider what I had done to bring about such a result. I spent a week thinking upon my own share in the quarrel. At the end of that time I had made up my mind that I was as much to blame as Delia. Then it occurred to me that if I was as much to blame as she the fault was all mine, for a man should have more control over himself than a woman whose nature is supposed to be more volatile.

I could not doubt Miss Smith's sincerity, for she had returned my fee and had no interest in deceiving me. I went to see her and had a talk with her, but gained no information. I confessed the result of my deliberations and told her I preferred that she should be paid for her trouble. So I handed her the check she had returned to me. Before accepting it she asked me what I was going to do. I told her I would go to Delia and take all the blame for our disagreement.

As soon as I said this Miss Smith put the check in her portmanteau and, taking a note from a desk, handed it to me. I immediately recognized Delia's handwriting. It read:

Dearest George—Miss Smith has convinced me that it was all my fault. Forgive me. Your loving DELIA.

I looked up at Miss Smith and saw her smiling at me. I sat thinking for a few moments, during which an understanding of her adroitness found its way into my stupid brain.

"I think I can tell you," I said to her, "what is the principle on which you work. It is contained in three words. It is 'Look within yourself.'"

"You have hit it exactly," was her reply.

"And now"—I continued taking out of my pocket my check book—"it is time to pay you the balance of your fee," and I wrote a check for double the amount.

Then I went posthaste to Delia.

Four Killed at Crossing.

CHICAGO JUNCTION, Ohio, Oct. 22.—Mrs. William Harwood, her two small sons, eight and three, and her mother, Mrs. Frank Weeks, of this place, were instantly killed yesterday at Nova, near here, when a buggy in which they were riding was struck by a Baltimore & Ohio express train. A freight train obscured the approach of the express, and when Mrs. Harwood drove on the track the accident resulted.

WEDDING—PERSONALS

McARTHUR — PRYDE

The home of Mrs. Peter McArthur 203 Rubidge street, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding, on Monday morning, when the marriage of Mr Thos. McArthur and Miss Jessie Pryde, formerly of Scotland, was solemnized by the Rev. H. J. Keith of Knox Church, in the presence of the immediate friends of the contracting parties.

Mr. and Mrs. McArthur will reside in the city.

NEWBIGGING—PHILIPS.

St. Luke's church was the scene of a very pretty October wedding this morning, when Miss Fannie Gladys Philips became the bride of Mr. James R. Newbigging.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. J. Sawers.

The couple were attended by Miss Maud Stewart and Mr. J. E. Boycott.

After a honeymoon in Toronto and other points, Mr. and Mrs. Newbigging will reside in the city.

Mrs. A. A. Fowler and Master Donald have returned from a six weeks visit with Mrs. T. E. Cunningham, Orillia.

LUCY WINDOVER LOST HER LIFE BY DROWNING

She Went in Search of Cows and Was Drowned in Lake —Return of Horse Gave the Alarm

News from Cavendish tells of the drowning last Saturday afternoon, of Lucy Windover, the fifteen-year-old daughter of Harvey Windover of Cavendish. The little girl went in search of the cows on horseback. In the course of an hour or so the horse returned but the girl was nowhere to be seen. Her father made a search but to no avail, and early Sunday morning several neighbors gave their assistance.

The marks of the horse were traced to the edge of the lake which border the farm, and it was then supposed she had driven the horse there for a drink. The men searched around the shore and about ten feet from the bank the body was found It is thought that the horse walked out beyond its depth and in scrambling to get back the girl was thrown off or fell off and was drowned.

The funeral was held to Lakefield yesterday morning.

The deceased was a niece of Mr. George Windover. 310 Aylmer st.

HERB MILLER MEETS DEATH BY ELECTROCUTION

A brief telegram from Winnipeg, notifying him of the death of his son, Herbert, by electrocution, was received yesterday afternoon, by Mr. F. W. Miller, Watter street.

Herb was engaged as lineman with a company in Winnipeg, and the accident happened yesterday. Mr. George Miller, of Chicago, a brother has gone to Winnipeg to take charge of the remains and bring them to this city.

The late Herbert James Miller was 24 years of age and the youngest of the family. He left Peterboro a year ago last June. He had a host of friends here who will join with citizens in general in extending sincere sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Miller in their bereavement.

MEXICO

Serious Comment is Made by London Press

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The Pall Mall Gazette says there is evidently a grave misunderstanding between this country and the United States in regard to the Mexican crisis, which should speedily be removed.

There are elements of danger in the situation which may easily arise strong feeling on both sides of the Atlantic. The Globe says a grave mistake was made by the British Government in its over-hasty recognition of President Huerta, which was in marked contrast with its delay in recognizing King Peter of Servia.

H. J. McCANNON IN REAL ESTATE

Has Opened Office at 324 George Street

The problem of getting along and making a start in life is the big one that faces every young man. With so many attractions that promise a good time, and such a multitude of inducements held out to the careless youth to spend his hard-earned money, his salary scarcely lasts till the next pay day comes. Most young men of ambition and fairly steady habits are anxious to accumulate a nest egg that will give him a boost into the first rung of the ladder that leads upwards to independence, and the best way to do it is the problem. One young man working on a very small salary, managed to save enough to make a small first payment on a lot in the growing section of Peterborough. He has held it one year, and kept up a small regular payment up to just lately, when he sold his claim, and now, to his delight, finds himself possessed of a bank account of $3.00. He now has the incentive to go on and do better yet, as well as the encouragement his careful savings well merited. This just shows what a very small start, and keeping at it regularly with small additions, will do in a real estate investment as a growing bank account, especially if the investment has been carefully placed by an experienced real estate man who is making his clients' interests his especial care.

Mr. J. H. McCannon, who is making a specialty of placing the saving the saving of small investors in safe, growing property, would be glad to meet all who are interested in this important means of getting a foothold in the struggle for competence, as he has many splendid openings ready for them all the time.

Mr. McCannon is a practical builder and knows property values in Peterborough thoroughly, and his recommendations would be given honestly at all times, and past experience shows his clients have done well on his advice. See him at his office, 324 George street, office 'phone 749, or telephone him any evening after work at his house 'phone, 772, and arrange for a meeting.

Pickpockets and Letter Boxes.

When detectives are trying to find the meeting place of pickpockets that are working in a neighborhood they often ask the letter carriers to help them. The postman can tell them in what mail boxes he finds the most empty pocketbooks.

After a thief has picked a man's pocket he wants to get rid of the empty purse as soon as he can, and what could be easier than to drop the looted wallet in a mail box? Then it won't be found on him and nobody can say he saw him throw it away. After every big convention the letter carriers find many empty pocketbooks in the boxes.

WORDSWORTH

Will be Studied by Loyalty Club To-morrow Night

The "Loyalty Club" will meet tomorrow evening in the "Green Room" of the Y.W.C.A. The entertainments this year are along literary lines and are being enjoyed very much by everyone.

Last week the evening was spent with Canadian authors. Several very well worded essays were read as well as suitable selections from the poems of various authors. To-morrow begins a series of English evenings, at which Woodsworth will be studied.

The girls at the "Y" are going to "Donnybrook Fair" on Friday, October 31st. Plans are progressing progressing and a splendid time is expected.

NEW APPOINTMENTS

To the Peterboro County Branch of the Department of Agriculture

Owing to the resignation of E. S. Hopkins, B.S.A., and J. P. Sackville, two new appointments have been made to the Peterborough County branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. F. C. McRae, B.S.A., and C. E. McDowell were recently appointed to represent the Ontario Department of Agriculture in this county.

The office has been established to aid the farmer in every possible way. Its duties are to assist. Demonstration orchards will be featured. Drainage surveys will be made free of cost. Assistance will be given to the organization of clubs. Short courses in live-stock, seed, and grain judging will be held. Measures will be taken to control weed and insect pests and plant diseases. Aid will be given the rural schools in the endeavor to introduce the study of agriculture into the curriculum. New features of district representative work are being planned.

The office in Norwood is open every day except Sunday, while the branch office, located in room 12, Bank of Commerce Building, Peterborough, is open every Saturday afternoon. These offices are equipped with the very latest literature relating to agriculture. The latest copies of the best farm papers are there available to the farmer wishing to keep in touch with the improved methods of farming. For further information write or consult F. C. McRae, District Representative, or C. E. McDowell, Assistant District Representative, Norwood.

MAUDE'S COMEDY IS REFRESHING

Large Audiences at His Majesty's Accorded English Actor Warm Welcome

That the capacity holiday audience which greeted Mr. Cyril Maude at His Majesty's last night came prepared to welcome the English artist and his London company was apparent from the spontaneous applause which is one of the latest object of "Command performances," when almost immediately after the rise of the curtain Mr. Maude came upon the scene.

Mr. George Tyler, on behalf of the Liebler Company, has endeavored, it is said, for several years to induce Mr. Maude to play a season in Canada and the United States. He is to be congratulated, judging by last night's reception of Mr. Maude, in having been persistent enough to finally succeed Mr. Maude, it may at once be said, proceeded forthwith to justify the welcome accorded him. With an easy and masterly handling of the bright lines and epigrams that fell numeroubly to his share, a natural easiness further induced by long familiarity with his subject, Cyril Maude won his audience from the start. Through two acts almost every line of his role was punctuated by wholesome laughter from the audience, and with it all there was pathos, too. The last two acts afford less prominent opportunity for the star, but it would be, perhaps, demanding too much that all four should maintain the pace of the first two. Had the author Mr. Marshall, sustained that wealth of epigram throughout, "The Second in Command" would have been a very remarkable comedy, rather than the refreshing and satisfying vehicle that it is. 44

THE ROYAL FAMILY

An Addition is Expected the Latter Part of Febuary

Canadian Press Despatch.

LONDON Oct. 22— It became known to-day that the New Year will bring with it an addition to the family of King George and Queen Mary. This interesting event is expected the latter part of February.

oeDtors are now in constant attendance at Buckingham Palace and their frequent visits gave the first inkling of the anticipated event. It is said the Queen is overjoyed at the prospects.

The monthly meeting of the DDaughters of the Empire will be held Thursday afternoon, the 23rd inst., at the armories at 3 30.

RATTLED THE BANDIT.

Curious Experience With a Band of Mexican Cutthroats.

Everybody in Mexico goes about armed. Even the passenger trains on most of the railroads are guarded by detachments of soldiers who ride in special cars, while on every station platform are seen rural guards armed with carbines ready for an emergency. Foreigners have to adapt themselves to the custom of going about armed or else make themselves unfavorably conspicuous in the eyes of the natives. It was a novel experience, however, to see railroad surveyors, when occupied with their peaceful work, armed to the teeth with knives and revolvers. As a matter of fact, arms were rarely required in Mexico as a means of defense. As everywhere else, it is well to remember, however, to keep cool and forget that you are armed in case of a quarrel.

In this connection the principal locating engineer of the road had an experience at which he displayed some nerve. He had to make a reconnoissance of a mountain range called the Sierra Gorda, said to be infested with cutthroats. He was warned to let the district alone, but duty prevailed, and he went. When reaching a rancho near the summit at sundown he and his attendant were met by four men whose law breaking propensities required no further introduction than their faces. They took hold of the party's horses, told the engineer and his attendant to dismount and made no effort to conceal the fact that they were there for business.

The engineer complied smilingly, and, going up to the leader, mystified that individual by asking him to step aside "I am told that it is unsafe to travel in these mountains," he whispered "will you not therefore oblige me by taking care of my property and allow us to remain under your roof until morning." With that he handed over his watch, money and other things, and the astonished thief, who was probably for the first time in his life treated to the novelty of being trusted, not only let the engineer have the best in his house, but handed him back his property in the morning and furnished him with two cutthroats to serve as an escort during the rest of his journey.—Max T. Schmidt in Engineering Magazine.

Going Astray at Sea.

It is no easy matter to keep a modern steamship on a straight course. The helmsman steers by the compass, and while a single degree of deviation appears very small on the compass card it would, if continued, carry a fast steamship four miles out of her course in a single day's run. Yet the compass gives the course more accurately than the ship can be steered. Owing to the deflecting power of the waves and the rolling of the ship, the course is continually shifted a little this way and that despite the helm.—Harper's Weekly.

OVER TWO HUNDRED MEN ENTOMBED BY EXPLOSION

Some of the Dead and Injured Are Brought to the Surface and Rescuers Are Hard at Work in the Hope of Saving Others.

DAWSON, NEW MEXICO, Oct. 23—Between two hundred and two hundred and fifty men were still entombed early to-day by cave-in which followed an explosion yesterday in No. 2 shaft on the Stag Canon Mine.

During the night fourteen dead and twenty-two injured were taken out. Rescuers penetrated into the heart of the mine for a distance of a mile and were still far from those whom they sought to help. All last evening gas filled the mine levels making it sure death to enter without an oxygen helmet.

After midnight by pumping in large quantities of compressed air it was made possible for more rescuers to enter. News of the explosion scattered over the countryside has brought in thousands of people eager to help the weary rescuers.

DAWSON, N. M.—Later.—At nine o'clock 25 in all had been rescued. The rescuers had reached the foot of an air shaft expecting to find many living, but encountered only three living and three dead.

DAWSON, New Mexico, Oct. 23.—Two hundred and thirty miners are entombed in shaft No. 2 of the Stag Canon mines here, following an explosion at three o'clock yesterday afternoon, according to an unofficial estimate.

Two men found on an upper level were taken from the mine last night. Rescuers were called from all parts of the southern Colorado coal fields. The Stag mine is owned by the Phelps-Dodge Co. of New York. The day shift working in shaft No. 2 numbered 230 persons.

The cause of the explosion is unknown. Fire had not broken out, though smoke was seen issuing from the second level of the shaft. It was believed by rescuers that this smoke came from the explosion and not from fire.

Immediately after the explosion all shifts were called to the work of rescue, and those miners who were employed in other shafts were put to work drilling through the debris which was said to have blocked the mine below the second level.

The U. S. rescue car stationed at Trinidad was summoned and every available man in Dawson last night was aiding in the attempt to reach the entombed miners.

Rescuers worked heroically to supply air to the men.

Three Italian miners were rescued from the debris at the opening of the Stag Canon mine at 9.30 o'clock last night. This makes five miners who have been rescued. The rescue party is making slow headway against the tons of coal and debris which is blockading the mine. The five men rescued were separated from the main body of miners at the time of the explosion and could tell nothing of it.

Train Rushed To Scene.

TRINIDAD, Col., Oct. 23.—A special rescue train, carrying scores of experienced miners, equipped with rescue apparatus, left here at six o'clock for Dawson, shortly after the news of the explosion was received.

Dawson is more than 125 miles from Trinidad over branch line railroads, and it will be several hours before the special train reaches the scene of the disaster. Two automobiles loaded with five oxygen tanks and other apparatus left here for Dawson, approximately 90 miles distant over mountain roads.

Dawson is a town of 3500 population near the northern boundary of New Mexico. Coal mining is the main industry, and it was said last night that the output would be curtailed by 25 per cent.

A Model Mine.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—While no direct word was received here last night by Phelps-Dodge & Co. regarding the explosion in their coal mine at Dawson, N.M., it was stated by officers that the mine is so nearly perfect in its construction that it was inconceivable that there would be any great loss of life.

"The mine has been operated 15 years without an explosion before today and has a most complete system of rescue work through a corps of first aid workers trained to enter the tunnels with oxygen supplies in emergencies of this kind," said an official yesterday.

MANGLED BY TRAIN

Canadian Press Despatch.

BELLEVILLE, Oct. 23. — The mangled remains of Samuel Peoples, aged 31, and unmarried, were found early this morning, lying beside the track which connects Belleville cement works with the Lehigh cement works just out of the town.

Peoples had been killed by train which plies between the works.

MENDEL BEILISS

Former Police Chief of Kiev Shatters Secret Agents' Case

KIEV, Oct. 23.—The former chief of police of Kiev, Krassovsky, gave important testimony yesterday at the trial of Mendel Beiliss, charged with the murder of the Christian boy, Andrew Yushinsky, in March, 1911. He had made a searching investigation into the crime, and declared on the stand that he had found nothing to implicate Beiliss in any way. He repudiated the suggestion that he had made no investigation to discover evidence against Beiliss.

Krassovsky described his examination of the house where Beiliss lived, the brick kiln and the watchman's lodge, where he found a blood-stained knife in a sack. He also told how he had caused the wells, tanks and ditches to be pumped dry. He interrogated all persons employed at the brick works at the time of the murder and made enquiries concerning them, and became convinced that none of them had any connection with the crime.

The witness said that Beiliss had been arrested by the secret police, the head of which body at Kiev at that time was Col. Kuliaboko, who told him, he says, there was no need to make a visit to Vera Tcheberiak's home. The testimony was taken as bearing out the report that the Tcheberiak woman had been shielded by the secret police.

WOULD SEPARATE BOYS.

Witnesses at Prison Enquiry Condemn Present System.

KINGSTON, Oct. 23.—The members of the Prison Reform Commission yesterday afternoon listened to the stories of three convicts as regards conditions in the penitentiary, and what they had to suggest for the betterment of the institution. Names of witnesses were suppressed, but it is known that they are men who occupied prominent positions in business life before being sentenced.

One suggestion offered was that young boys sent to the penitentiary should be separated from hardened criminals. The stone pile was characterized as degrading work. The uniform also was denounced and the cropping of the hair, one convict stating that this was the greatest humiliation he had to endure. Another stated that be suffered from colds every time his hair was clipped.

While it was admitted that food served at the penitentiary was good, the cooking was declared to be bad. After the commission has cleaned up the specific charges, it is the intention to go more fully into the system with a view to recommending some radical changes in the institution.

FILIBUSTERS INDICTED.

U. S. Firms Charged With Sending Arms To Mexican Rebels.

PHOENIX, Ariz., Oct. 23.—The Phelps-Dodge Mercantile Co. and the Douglas Hardware Co. of Douglas, with their managers, W. H. Brophy ond W. F. Fisher, were named yesterday in indictments returned by the federal grand jury charging conspiracy to send arms and munitions of war to the Mexican revolutionists. Pedro Bracamente, M. M. Martinez and R. P. Dezogri, alleged agents of the Mexican constitutionalists, also were indicted.

Similar charges were already pending against Brophy and Fisher. Dr. James Douglas, president of the Phelps-Dodge Co., is a native of Quebec and a trustee of McGill University. He is at present on a tour of the company's property in Mexico.

GEN. BOOTH'S PLANS CHANGED

Gen. Booth's Plans Changed.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Gen. Bramwell Booth has changed his plans, and instead of sailing on the Imperator to-day will sail on the Lusitania on Saturday.

Commissioner Lawley sailed on the Baltic last week to make final preparations. Col. Kitchener, private secretary, is the only officer accompanying the general, who reaches Toronto on Nov. 1, and remains till Nov. 6, and then goes to Winnipeg till the 11th, afterwards proceeding to the United States. Several officers' councils will be held both in Toronto and Winnipeg.

RAPID GROWTH IN EXPORTS

Total Trade for One Mouth of Over $95,000,000

OTTAWA, Oct. 23— A striking feature in the settlement of the trade of Canada for the month of September, issued by Hon. J. D. Reid Minister of Customs, is the decrease of imports and the increase of exports. Dutiable goods to the value of $37,997,000 and free goods to the amount of $16,342,000 were imported during September last. The imports for the corresponding month of 1912 were $38,548,000 dutiable goods and $19,307,000 of free goods. Exports for last September were $37,048,000 of domestic goods and $4,071,000 of foreign goods, as against $25,814,000 domestic and $3,153,000 foreign for September 1912. The total exports for the six months ending September 30th last were, all of domestic goods, $188,405,000, and foreign goods $22,842,000, as against $162,427,000 of domestic and $15,972,000 foreign for the six months ending September 30th, 1912.

The exports of agricultural products show a big increase, being $11,829,000 for September, 1913, compared with $5,575,000 for September 1912. There are big increases in exports all along the line. Exports of minerals for September last were $6,402,000, and for the previous September, $5,278,000. Exports of manufactures also show an increase, being $5,041,000 for September, 1913, as against $3,587,000 for September, 1912.

Canadian trade was never in a more prosperous condition, as the total Canadian trade for September last, was close upon one hundred millions, the actual figures being $95,665,00, compared with $87,606,000 for September, 1912. For the first six months of the present year ending September 30th, last, total Canadian trade was $551,978,000, compared with $506,205,000 for the corresponding six months of the fiscal year 1912.

GUNMEN SEEK TIME

Rosenthal Slayers Want Hearing of Appeal Delayed

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 23.—Attorneys for the four "gunmen," who are under sentence of death for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the New York gambler, yesterday requested the court of appeals to postpone the hearing of their appeal until after Nov. 17. The appeals of the "gunmen" and former Police Lieut. Chas. Becker, convicted for instigating the murder, were to have been argued on Oct. 13, but the court of appeals was prevented from convening on that date because of the sessions of the high court of impeachment. No application for a stay in the Becker appeal was made yesterday.

The "gunmen's" attorneys asked for postponement on the ground that they had but recently been retained in the case. The court took the matter under advisement.

Thaw Fight Begins.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Counsel for Harry K. Thaw began a fight yesterday to prevent indictment in New York County by the grand jury, which will begin to-day to consider the circumstances surrounding Thaw's escape from Matteawan. Attorney-General Carmody will be present for at least part of the proceedings.

William Travers Jerome has been designated by the Attorney-General to take charge of the case. Subpoenas for the proceedings were served yesterday.

THE ZEPPELIN AIRSHIP WHICH BURST, KILLING TWENTY-SIX

The explosion of nearly a ton of gasolene fuel in the central "gondola" of the new Zeppelin dirigible battle ship of the air, "L-2," while she was 900 feet above the earth at the Johannisthal aerodrome, near the German capital, killed twenty-six of the twenty-seven men who were making the test flight in the new monster, mortally injured the other and reduced to wreckage the formidable air cruiser upon which all Germany was pinning its hopes for the supremacy of the air.

No more appalling disaster of the air has ever occurred since man first learned to fly. This was a twentieth century disaster. For when the great white shape floating serenely in the sky and churning its way toward nearby Berlin at a forty-mile rate was suddenly rent asunder by a succession of blinding flashes nearly a dozen aeroplanes were darting about the vault of the sky like swallows surrounding a condor.

TO PEOPLE THE LAND

Then Make it Produce is Lloyd George's Aim

BACK TO THE LAND

SWINDON, Eng., Oct. 23.—Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George yesterday afternoon dotted the "i's" and crossed the "t's" of the speech in which he inaugurated the Government's land campaign at Bedford, on Oct. 11. He then said, that it was his object to "free British land from landlordism and get the people back on it."

The two purposes the Liberal Government had set itself, he said yesterday, were to attract and to retain the rural population on the land and to devise means to develop both the quantity and the quality of the total agricultural production of the British Isles. Everything, he asserted, would be subordinated to the attainment of these two objects.

As the first step, said the Chancellor, it was purposed to establish a ministry of lands with control and supervision of all questions dealing with the users of land both in towns and country, and the functions of the present Board of Agriculture would be transferred to the new ministry.

The Government, he said, intended to take the land out of chancery. Hereafter, if a landlord found that "some silly settlement" hampered his schemes for improving his land, he could apply to the Ministry of Lands, which would enable him to override the barrier.

The new ministry, he continued, would operate through commissioners who would act in a judicial capacity and have the same power to reduce rents on small farms as the Scottish courts now possess.

Large farmers also would have the right to appeal to the commissioners for a reduction of rent if the action of the state caused a rise in the wages of the farm laborers. In such an event the landlord would have to come in as a contributor, and in times of great agricultural depression a temporary lessening of the rent would be obtainable.

The new Ministry of Lands, according to the Chancellor, is to be given full power to acquire, at a reasonable price, all waste, derelict and neglected tracts of land, and to plant them with forests, and to reclaim and drain the springs on such lands, with a view to their cultivation to the full limit of their possibilities. The Ministry is to be not only empowered, but instructed to act, and the resources of the state would be placed at its disposal for this purpose.

If men want sport, said the Chancellor, it must be at their own expense, and the game laws would be revised in this direction.

The establishment of a fair minimum wage for laborers with reasonable hours of work, decent housing and the prospect of the laborer obtaining a bit of land for himself would all be within the scope of the powers of the commissioners, who would have authority to fix the price of land in the case of compulsory acquisition.

The Government proposed, the Chancellor concluded, to remedy the grave deficiency of cottages in the country by building some themselves with state funds, "and we have got a nice little fund at hand—the insurance reserve fund."

The announcement of the land proposals by Chancellor Lloyd George was made by an absolutely unanimous decision reached at recent meetings of the Cabinet.

British Officer To Advise.

PEKIN, China, Oct. 23.—The Chinese Government has decided to appoint a British naval officer as naval adviser to the Chinese Admiralty.

The officer chosen is Rear Admiral Arthur Henry Christian, attached to the home fleet at Devonport.

WORK TRAIN COLLIDED WITH FAST FREIGHT; FIVE MEN WERE KILLED

Seven Others Injured in Disaster Brought About by Misunderstanding of Orders

NORTH BAY, Ont., Oct. 23.—A disastrous accident, in which five were killed and seven others injured occurred on the C.P.R. main line near Weyland station, west of Chapleau yesterday morning about seven o'clock, when a work train returning from a gravel pit collided head-on with a fast east-bound freight train piling engines and cars in a heap pinning the crew of both trains and workmen in the wreckage.

The men reported dead are: Conductor H. Cummings, of the freight train; Brakeman A. Bource; Steam Shovel Engineer J. Pattrie and two unknown foreigners of the work train.

Those injured: E. J. Moore, conductor of the work train; Foreman Johnston, of the work train; Fireman G. Stewart and four unknown foreigners employed on the train.

The above are all seriously injured some of them not being expected to live. The foreigners may live. The dead and injured men all reside in Chapleau.

The accident was caused by the misunderstanding of the orders on the part of the crew of the work train. They were given orders by the operator at Weyland to remain on the siding until the freight train had passed. The first section of the freight train was allowed to pass. The work train then started ahead, the crew evidently taking no notice of the orders or thinking that both sections of the freight had passed. When they reached the switch at the siding, the crew of the work train noticed the approach of the second section of the freight. Both trains were traveling at high speed. The engineers on both trains made an effort to reverse their throttles, but it was too late to avert a collision and the two trains crashed head-on, the engines and cars piling up on top of each other. The men on the two trains, on seeing that the crash was unavoidable, attempted to jump from their engines, but it was too late and they were all pinned in the wreckage.

Wrecking crews and doctors went to the scene of the accident and the dead and injured were rushed to Chapleau, where medical assistance was rendered the injured trainmen and laborers. The wrecking crews worked hard clearing the tracks, but it was not until late last night that they had the tracks entirely free of the wrecked engines and cars. All trains on the line were late.

James Ross Left $15,000,000.

MONTREAL, Oct. 23.—Among the bequests made by the late Jas. Ross, the president of the Dominion Coal Co., whose will was probated yesterday, is a gift of $10,000 to his sister, Mrs. Mary Grace Ross, "in addition to the other provision already made."

Mr. Ross' only son, John Kenneth, is given a million dollars and an annuity of $75,000.

The total value of the estate is $15,000,000, half of which is in C.P.R. stock.

Another Disaster Averted.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Another tragedy involving the lives of twenty persons was only averted by a hair's-breadth in the disastrous Senghenydd mine during excavation operations yesterday. A party of 20 rescuers, all prominent mining officials, were overcome by gas in a distant part of the mine and were nearly wiped out. A rescue party was rushed down the pit with life-saving apparatus and reached the sufferers just in time.

SMUGGLERS CAUGHT?

U. S. Firms Think Big Gang Has Headquarters In Toronto.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Oct. 23.—The arrest of Wm. Levy late yesterday on a charge of smuggling watches, watch cases and works into the United States from Canada is believed by customs officials here to unearth the operations of a large band of jewelry smugglers. Federal officials say $46,000 worth of jewelry on which no duty was paid has been brought from a Toronto, Ont., wholesale firm into the United States through Windsor, Fort Erie and Sault Ste. Marie in the past year. It is said the jewelry was shipped here and disposed of in stores which make a practice of holding "auction sales."

Half a dozen such places have been in operation here the last year. Warrants have been issued for the arrest of a number of others on the same charge, and also on the charge of fraud in selling the jewelry.

Wm. Levy was held under $5,000 bond for a preliminary hearing before U. S. Commissioner Daoust Monday next.

Coon Comes By Post.

GRAFTON, W.Va., Oct. 23.—The postmaster at Webster Springs thinks that all wild animals are fit material for parcel post shipments, except skunks, and on this basis the first shipment of wild animals was received here from that point. Dr. A. S. Warder received a nine-pound live racoon from his friend, Tim Woodell, of Webster Springs, by parcel post.

RECEIVED DIAZ IN SILENCE

Mexicans Afraid To Cheer Lest They Be Shot Down.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—A Vera Cruz cable says: Gen. Felix Diaz arrived here yesterday from Havana aboard the German steamship Corcovada.

Silent crowds awaited him at the pier because of the popular impression that Huerta had ordered his soldiers to fire on too noisy demonstrators.

Government agents endeavored to induce Diaz not to land, but he refused to pay any attention to them.

Gen. Diaz, in defiance of the intimation from the Government that he proceed to Tampico aboard the steamer Corcovado, and there disembark, has decided to remain at Vera Cruz, at least temporarily. He is unwilling to admit that he is not free to come and go and talks of a trip to the capital to-day or to-morrow. According to reports current last night, he is likely to return to Havana aboard a Mexican warship, and unless the orders from the capital are altered he will be left no choice.

Gen. Diaz was to have been notified on the high seas of the Government's wishes, but the captain of the gunboat Zaragoza, who put to sea in the middle of the night, with Col. Vidaurrazaga, secretary to the Minister of War, to whom the mission had been entrusted, lost his course. A new captain for the Zaragoza was named yesterday.

San Ignacio Taken.

HERMOSILLO, Mexico, Oct. 23.—San Ignacio, an important town of the State of Sinilao, has been captured by the Constitutionalists, according to a telegram yesterday to Gen. Venustino Carranza. Col. de la Vega, the federal commander, and the mayor of the town were executed.

Gen. Avaro Obregon is on the way southward to-day at the head of a strong force of infantry and artillery to attack Culiacan, the capital of Sinilao.

TOO UTTERLY UTTER!

Anthony Comstock Thinks He'll Suppress "The Suffragette."

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Steps to stop the sale of The Suffragette, the English militants' official organ, may be taken to-day by Anthony Comstock, when he will decide whether criminal action will be taken against those responsible for its circulation.

Mr. Comstock, as head of the New York Society for the Prevention of Vice, held a long conference on the matter with District Attorney Whitman in the latter's office late yesterday afternoon. The discussion of white slavery and sex hygiene, it is said, transcend the laws of decency.

Neither would disclose their plans afterward, but it was learned that Mr. Comstock had decided to go into the matter thoroughly so that no trouble can come in case it takes an international turn, and if satisfied with the criminality of the paper's sale to procure such warrants and raid every place and home he knows the copies to be in. His plan then will be to prosecute both the distributors and the purchasers.

There was a report that the postal authorities will also take action, but this could not be verified.

Thousands of copies of the paper have been distributed, since they were first put on sale at the lecture by Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst in Madison Square Garden Tuesday

LONDON RATEPAYERS VOTE FOR ELECTRIFICATION

THREE BY-LAWS ARE CARRIED

Strenuous Battle Results in Victory for Scheme Advanced by Hon. Adam Beck.

LONDON, Ont., Oct. 23.—After one of the most strenuous campaigns ever waged in London, the bylaw to raise $700,000 in debentures to electrify the London & Port Stanley Railway was carried yesterday by a majority of 746. The storm sewers, West London breakwater and the Board of Control bylaws all carried by large majorities.

The bylaws to spend $40,000 for storm sewers carried by 1,928 majority; London west will have a $25,000 breakwater, the majority for this being 2,166; while the citizens decided in favor of a board of control by a majority of 1,849.

In 11 subdivisions only did the opponents of the scheme carry, and in two others the vote was a tie. In the other 53 there was a majority ranging from 1 to 61. This was a remarkable showing, and demonstrated the faith of the residents of the eastern section of the city in the feasibility of the electrification of the London & Port Stanley Railway.

Throughout the main portion of the city the vote was close in a number of subdivisions. The opposition scored well in certain portions of South London. Ward 3, the east end ward, did handsomely by the Beck scheme and made it certain that the bylaw would carry. The vote was larger than some anticipated. There were 8,500 voters on the list, and of these practically 5,000 were polled. The organization on both sides was very good, the electrification advocates having the better.

Barge Keystone To Be Raised.

BROCKVILLE, Oct. 23. — The steam barge Reliance of Montreal, with her crew and Contractor A. J. Lee, is in port preparing to leave for Chippewa Point, near which the Montreal Light, Heat & Power Co.'s steambarge Keystone, struck a rock and sank on Oct. 26 of last year.

Lee secured the contract for raising the barge from the underwriters, and will use the compressed air system. The outfit was delayed here owing to a mishap sustained by the Reliance at the head of the Soulanges Canal, while coming west. Her wheel struck a broken log and damaged two buckets, which will be repaired in time to commence operations to-day.

GERMAN AVIATORS

The frequent excursions of German aviators over the French frontier is beginning to arouse suspicion, notwithstanding their protests that they "couldn't help it."

The fact that no French aviator has yet been held up on German territory proves that the French are either better aviators or have no desire to pry into their neighbor's preserves. Even a German paper, the Taegliche Rundschau, insists that German officers must act more carefully in future.

It may be that the Germans are merely very bad aviators, they have a knack of getting their air machines to do just the thing they don't want. If this is the way they act in peace, what would they do in war?

WAS HAMLET FAT?

The question has been raised in Paris as to whether Hamlet was fat. It seems there is in existence a tradition to the effect that the melancholy Dane was obese.

How this tradition arose, if indeed it ever existed, it is difficult to discover, for there is no suggestion in the play to that effect, except it be in the duel scene at the end: "He's fat and scant of breath." The Westminster Gazette thinks that "fat" in this place might be "faint," or mean a lack of condition.

But surely the strongest argument against the suggested corpulence of Hamlet is in the fact of his melancholy. Who ever knew a fat man who could sustain his melancholy out-look on life to the length that Hamlet did.

No, a fat Hamlet will not do. Shakespeare was too faithful to nature to thus forget himself. When he portrayed a fat man he called him Falstaff, and made him the antithesis of Hamlet in disposition.

TO TAX OR NOT TO TAX

The Underwood tariff bill, which gave free entry to Canadian live stock into the United States, has now been in operation for three weeks, and its effect upon the Canadian market is beginning to be felt.

The Globe says that market values in Toronto have advanced fully one dollar per hundred weight, and almost every class of cattle has shared in the upward movement, and these "advances are still advancing."

It was antisipated that this would come, and there is no need for panic. The price of beef in Peterborough has increased from one to three cents on the pound, and it is possible that the price will remain unsettled until things are balanced upon both sides of the line.

As it is, the larger market for Canadian cattle will encourage Canadian farmers, and it will be a good thing in that respect; but the consumer, who buys his beef at a higher price, will not see the benefit of the bargain.

It would appear that the end of the present unsettlement will mean that the Canadian consumer will have to pay the same price for beef as the American consumer.

An export duty on cattle would keep Canadian beef for the Canadian market, and would reduce the price to the consumer. But it is claimed that this would discourage the farmers, and that while the price of beef will be a little higher, the increase of business in cattle between the two countries would be good for all concerned.

It is announced that the Pope has ordered a universal investigation into the subject of mixed marriages, as to their effect in certain countries. The more effective way of putting an end to these "hybrid" love matches would be for His Holiness to get hold of that little fellow cupid—but he is a Pagan and cares for neither Pope nor Protestant.

The herb "rue" is mentioned by Shakespeare in Hamlet, when Ophelia said to the Queen: "There's rue for you." Mrs. Gardner, of Gloucester, England, who has been suffering from a cold, had heard that the leaves of rue were beneficial. She made a mistake and swallowed some yew leaves, which are very poisonous. She died before the doctor could be called. Yew trees are associated with grave-yards in England, and have proved fatal to grazing cattle.

THE HUGE DAM IS NOW BUSY

BASSANO, Alta., Oct. 22.—Quietly, without preliminary announcement, or ceremony of any kind, the gates of the six million dam of the C.P.R., which is intended to divert the waters of the Bow River for irrigating 30,000 acres around Bassano, closed at three o'clock Thanksgiving Day.

The operation will back up the river for eight miles, and the process of filling to the height of the dam, 45 feet, is expected to take four weeks.

Steamer Coated With Ice.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., Oct. 22.—With her sides and deck covered with ice, the steamer Acadian of the Merchants' Mutual Line arrived here yesterday. The ice was so thick on the sides that it was found impossible to open the doors to unload freight until it had been thawed with hot water.

At Thunder Cape she met a fleet of ten grain vessels that had stayed in shelter there during the storm.

WHO TOOK THE GRANT OUT OF IMMIGRANT?

To The Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir—An emigrant then ceases to be one on residence, very indefinite, and not recognized by the immigration authorities. Most of those imported have no more idea of residence than the Irish harvesters who go to England or the Scotch girls who go to Yarmouth. The Pilgrims emigrated as did the Hugenots to England, and later the Loyalist Emigrants from France, but, in Britain with its huge alien population, no mention is made now of emigrants. Why? because they say straight "you are aliens." But, since we designate them as emigrants," which surely implies a personal desire or intention, we should so treat them. Kit says—"Opportunity was the first immigrant, and he settled in Canada." It is different now, since the editor of the Canadian News took the grant out of immigrant, and Thos. Howell put the "steam" in steamship.

There was a good demand for milkers and springers, and a moderate supply sold at $60 to $90 each, the bulk going from $70 to $80 each.

Veal Calves.

The market for veal calves held steady as follows: Choice calves sold from $9 to $10; good calves, $8 to $9; medium, $7 to $7.50; common, $5.50 to $6.50; rough eastern calves, $4.50 to $5.

Sheep and Lambs.

The sheep and lambs market held steady, altho the run was larger. Sheep, ewes, sold from $4.25 to $5.25; rams and culls, $2.75 to $3.50; lambs sold at $7.50 to $7.75; cull lambs, $6 to $6.50.

Hogs.

Selects, fed and watered, sold at $8.85 to $9.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Oct. 22.—At the C. P. R. live stock market this morning the offerings of live stock were 3200 cattle, 500 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 500 calves. The trade in cattle continues very active, there being still a good demand from American buyers for common stockers and feeders. The tone of the market was firm, with sales of round lots of feeders at $5.50 to $5.75, common bulls at $4.25 to $4.50, and cows at $3.50 to $3.75 per 100 pounds. Owing to the cooler weather there was a good demand for local butchers. Choice steers were scarce, but good steers sold at $6.75 to $7, fair at $6.25 to $6.50, and the lower grades from $5 to $5.75 per 100 pounds. Choice butchers' cows brought $5.75 to $6, good $5.25 to $5.50, and common $4.25 to $5 per 100 pounds.

The market for sheep and lambs is firm, sales of lambs being made at $6 to $7, and sheep at $4 to $4.25 per 100 pounds. The demand for grass fed calves was good for shipment to the U. S., a large number going to Watertown, N.Y., at 3 3-4c to 4¼c per pound. Local dealers are buying milk fed stock at 6½s to 7½c per pound.

The tone of the hog market is strong and prices 25c per 100 pounds higher, with sales of selected lots at $9.25 to $9.75 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

NEW CONVENIENT TRAIN TO WINNIPEG

The popularity of Canadian Pacific service, and the excellence of that road's equipment, has been so greatly appreciated by the travelling public that it has been found necessary to put into service an entirely new Through Standard Express Train between Toronto and Winnipeg.

Commencing Sunday, Oct. 26th, the "Gate City Express" will leave Toronto at 2.30 p.m., and will run daily thereafter, arriving Winnipeg at 8.25 p.m. second morning. The train will consist of the highest-class modern equipment: Observation Compartment Car, Standard Sleeping Cars, Tourist Sleeping Car, Dining Car, First-class Coach and Colonist Car. This will be found the most convenient and best train between Toronto and Winnipeg on account of the daylight departure from Toronto at an hour when the Union Station is not badly congested, and also on account of the early hour of arrival at Winnipeg.

The present "Vancouver Express" will continue to leave Toronto at 10.20 p.m. daily and will consist of the same equipment as the "Gate City Express." This train is the best to take for points west of Winnipeg, but for Winnipeg and east the "Gate City Express" is the right train to travel by.

Full particulars from any Canadian Pacific Agent or write M. G. Murphy, District Passenger Agent, Toronto. 50

Savory Fish Salad.

The hearts of white lettuce, slices of marinated cucumber, endive, blanched and curled anchovies, stoned olives and pickled beetroot. Make a square block of the hearts of the lettuce and endive, arrange slices of marinated cucumber around the lettuce. Upon these place blanched, boned and curled anchovies. Into each anchovy lay a stoned olive. Screen the whole with square shaped pieces of beetroot and season with sugar, salt and a dash of pepper. This is better eaten with oil and vinegar than with mayonnaise sauce. Half lemons may be served with the salad.

Noah's Ark

It Needed a Mrs. Noah

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The houseboat was moored under the willows by the river bank. It was a blunt nosed, bargelike craft, its upper deck gay with red striped awnings and boxes of scarlet geraniums. A hatless young man garbed in white with his shirt sleeves rolled above brown arms was peeling potatoes in the doorway of the galley.

Every now and then the man lifted a pair of fine brown eyes and scanned the red bridge that crossed the river a hundred yards above the houseboat. Occasionally a farm wagon creaked across or a touring motorcar flashed by.

The river was uneasy these days. Successive spring rains had swelled it until it was now rising beyond its highest water mark. Almost imperceptibly the brown waters crept to the level of the banks, and the old bridge was alarmingly close to the surface of the stream.

But the country folk were slow going and not given to borrowing trouble. The Willow never had overflowed its banks, and it never would. Often it had reached the floor of the bridge, only to subside when its tributary springs and streams had spilled out their surplus share of the spring rains.

It had rained for weeks during this June, and when the houseboat crept up the stream and cast anchor under the willows the weatherwise predicted a wet vacation for the luckless voyager. They had watched the young man spread his easel on the shady deck and paint the slanting rain on the wheatfields or the sun peeping through the dripping willows or the boggy coolness of the farther shore.

Noah Parker was enjoying this vacation as he had never enjoyed one before. But there was a feeling of uneasiness in the gradual rising of the river, together with the newspaper accounts of the devastating floods in the adjacent states.

"Hey, there!" called a voice from the bank. And Noah set down his potatoes and went to the rail.

"Hello, Simon!" he called to the towheaded farm lad, who held forth a basket of eggs. "Come aboard."

Simon timorously set one bare foot on the narrow landing plank, placed the other before it and finally reached the deck, where Noah promptly yanked him aboard, skillfully relieving him of the basket at the same instant.

"Two dozen for 30 cents. Simon, I feel like a robber," said Noah, diving into his pocket and bringing up a fifty cent piece. "Take this and keep the change if there is any way of spending 20 cents in this benighted hamlet."

Simon caught the coin, grinned delightedly and took the empty basket.

"I'm going to treat Miss Molly to ice cream," he confided blushingly.

"Ah, ha! Who is Miss Molly?"

"Schoolteacher. She's going to stay all summer and teach again in September. She ain't got any folks to go home to, and she's boarding at our house. I wanted to treat her to something all winter, but, gosh hang it all I couldn't seem to save enough. When ice cream sody was 5 cents a glass I got 10 cents all to once, and on my way home to ask her I saw a sign in the store saying it had gone up to 10 cents. So I jest gave it up. But, by cricky, if you wait long enough you can get hold of anything!"

"You like your teacher, eh?" asked Noah.

Simon's eyes shone. "You betcher life. Why, what do you think she's doing, mister?"

"Give it up."

"Why, jest because me and Lem Peters and Susie Anderson couldn't sense fractions and didn't pass our examinations last week, she's fixed up the old boathouse yonder for a schoolroom, and she helps us every afternoon with them fractions. She wants to help us on grammar, but I tell her I don't need it. Grammar don't bother me none; do you think so, mister?"

Noah suppressed a smile.

"It doesn't seem to, sonny."

"I'll tell her that, by gum. There she is now! I'm going to ask her right off. I wonder what kind she'll take, what say?" Simon paused on the plank and looked anxiously through the torn brim of his hat at Noah.

"Probably she'll choose strawberry," responded Noah gravely, as man to man, and Simon nodded solemnly and capered away toward the bridge where a slender, blue gowned figure was crossing toward the town.

Noah saw her stop and wait for the lad, and he noted even from that distance that her hair was dark beneath her white hat and that her face was softly oval. She put one hand on Simon's shoulder and swung her parasol to the other side. Together they went away. Once they paused, and Simon pointed back at the houseboat, but Noah ducked into the kitchen, where he proceeded to put the neglected potatoes to boil.

"She must be a nice girl," he said to himself as he washed up his dishes after the meal, and then he realized with a hot blush that unconsciously he had been thinking of Miss Molly for an hour and a half.

That night it rained heavily after a severe thunderstorm, and as morning dawned Noah, lying wide awake, realized that the Ark, as he had named his pleasure boat, was scraping bottom.

He tossed on some clothes and in the pale gray light found that the river had risen until the hull of the Ark was resting on the muddy bank. He examined the motor and found it in order for an early start if it should be necessary.

It seemed vastly important that he should get the Ark out of the main current and into some safe inlet before the red bridge broke away, as it must under the pressure of the swollen river. Even now he could hear the dull roar of water against the timbers.

But daylight brought a gathering of skeptical farmers, who reluctantly fastened the shaking bridge to the willows by heavy logging chains at the four corners of its thirty foot span.

"She'll stand all right now. We've seen it worse'n this," grunted Ezra Bead, with a quizzical squint at Noah's disturbed face. "Want any help pushing your boat off the bank?"

"If you can spare time," returned the young man. "If the bridge should break away"—

"It won't break away; the water's falling already," interrupted Ezra, examining the two inches of river that had overflowed the meadow where they stood.

By noon the Ark was moving downstream with the current. The red bridge was straining at the chains, and wagons were going around by the new cement bridge at the upper falls.

Noah made fast to a bending willow and cooked his dinner. Just as he had concluded the meal there came a grinding crash from upstream, mingled with the roar of coming waters. A little island protected the Ark from the main current, and Noah watched keenly from his safe harbor for anything that might come with the flood.

First came the red bridge end on like some queer, crazy raft teetering up and down in the strong current. Behind it bobbed one of the willows pulled from the bank by the wrecked bridge. When bridge and tree had disappeared Noah got into his skiff and rowed around the island to wait for further floating objects. Here and there along the river banks were boathouses or occasional springhouses where the farmers obtained their drinking water. In any one of these riverside houses, which must come down with the flood, might be a human being caught unawares.

At last there was a sound of voices and there came riding down the current a small boathouse with its gabled roof pointing downstream, and sitting around the open doorway with feet swinging inside the little building were four people.

Noah did not attempt to catalogue them by name or identity. He simply reached out his handy boathook and pulled gently at first and then with all his strength until the house swirled heavily around and crashed to a momentary anchorage on the shore of the almost inundated island.

"I'll take you off in my boat. Hold on there for a moment!" cried Noah, and in five exciting minutes he had transferred the four voyagers to the safe deck of the Ark, where they all gazed breathlessly at each other before bursting into exclamations of surprise and joy at their rescue.

Noah looked curiously at them. There was Simon Bead, sunburned and dripping wet; there was undoubtedly Lem Peters, whose cranial contour indicated that fractions and he would never come to a definite understanding; there was Susie Anderson, fat and flaxen haired and good naturedly stupid looking, and last because she was not the least was a blue gowned girl with raven hair and starry blue eyes and cheeks quite pink with excitement.

"Well, Simon, suppose you introduce me to your teacher and your school mates," he said at last.

Miss Decker looked encouragingly at Simon, who twisted his fingers in his hair and shot an agonized glance at his rescuer.

"That's her," he stammered, pointing a finger at his teacher. "That's Miss Molly, I mean; and that's Susie, and she never bawled once, mister, when the river floated us while we was saying grammar; and that's Lem; he hollered some, and so did I; and say, mister, we had that ice cream last night!" he ended, with shining eyes.

"I'm very glad," said Noah kindly, as he shook hands with Molly Decker and her two bashful charges. "Now that you're safely on the Ark—yes, this is really Noah's Ark, my name is Noah Parker—suppose we find something to eat. Perhaps Miss Decker will take you below and rummage in the kitchen while I go out and watch for more castaways."

While Noah waited around at the end of the island, Molly and the children found materials and prepared an appetizing meal for the weary Noah when he should return to the Ark.

As they gathered around the table in the pretty dining room, Molly Decker poured the tea with charming grace. Perhaps that was what roused Susie Anderson to enthusiasm.

"Oh, Mr. Noah!" she cried excitedly. "Let's play this is the real Ark, and you are Mr. Noah and Miss Molly shall be Mrs. Noah, and I will be the dove! The boys can be animals if they want to," she added generously.

"We won't play it today, dears," said Miss Molly gently, but for some unaccountable reason her cheeks flushed deeper.

"The Ark will return some other day," added Noah gayly, "and take all of you for a sail down the river—the whole school."

"And Miss Molly, too?" asked Simon jealously.

"And Miss Molly if she will come," assented Noah softly, and in his heart he added that he would try to persuade her to remain forever, for at last the only girl had come to him, and he told himself that every Ark needed a Mrs. Noah.

Approves Slit Skirts.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Without attempting to pass upon questions of taste or modesty, the U. S. Health Service has put its stamp of approval upon slit skirts and diaphanous gowns from the health standpoint. Assistant Surgeon-General Rucker announced yesterday that "women wear too many clothes, anyway," and that the woman who dresses in up-to-date style is less liable to catch cold these chilly days than one who loads down her body with heavy clothing

BACKACHE A SYMPTOM

Of More Serious Illness Approaching. Mrs. Bender's Case.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Read about Mrs. Bender's experience.

St. James, Mo.—"About a year ago I was irregular, had cramps every month, headache and constant backache. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and used the Sanative Wash and I am relieved of all my troubles and am in perfect health. I shall recommend your medicine to all my friends and you may publish this testimonial for the benefit of other suffering women."—Miss ANNA BENDER, St. James, Missouri.

Another Case.

Dixon, Iowa.—"I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for some time and it has done me much good. My back troubled me very much. It seemed weak. I had much pain and I was not as regular as I should have been. The Compound has cured these troubles and I recommend it to all my friends."—Mrs. BERTHA DIERKSEN, Box 102, Dixon, Iowa.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

Story of a Dog Who Runs Away From His Mistress.

FOXIE A TRICKY RASCAL.

An Enigma Game That Affords Instruction and Amusement—Intelligence of a Japanese Monkey—Items of Interest to Children.

You'd think a dog that had a home
As nice as Foxie's wouldn't roam.
But naughty Foxie's full of play
And thinks it fun to run away.

If he is tied he'll break the string.
The garden with his barks will ring.
He is so pleased that he is free
He has to make a noise, you see.

The children all race after him
Across the lawn so neat and trim.
If he can dodge out through the gate
He'll not come home till it is late.

Though others may be cross and scold,
One friend he has, this rascal bold.
His mistress clasps him to her heart
And nobly takes the sinner's part.

She kindly welcomes him once more
With tidbits from the pantry's store.
He barks his promise to be good,
As a repentant scapegrace should.

The Curate.

A curate and vicar are chosen and as many trades or professions as there are players and when the curate has said to the one he wishes to attack, "I come from your house, Mr. Optician or Mme. Milliner (or any other tradesperson he chooses), but I did not find you in. Where were you?"

The person asked replies: "I was at (whom ever she pleases to say—hairdresser, tailor, jeweler, etc., provided the business has been taken). The person mentioned asks: "What were you doing there?" And the one questioned must answer something suited to the trade mentioned.

For instance: If he has been to the bookseller's, he says he was buying books. If to the grocer's, buying sugar or starch. The bookseller says he was at the binder's, who demands: "What were you doing there?" "Getting a book bound."

A forfeit must be given when something is said not suited to the trade mentioned. They may also say they have been to the curate's, and when he asks: "What were you doing there?" is answered: "Getting married," or anything relating to his ministerial duties, and he must make a proper reply.

LAKEFIELD BUDGET

Special Correspondence.

Lakefield, Oct. 23.—Miss Rose, of "Uplands" left on Wednesday for Toronto, where she will spend a couple days on business.

NOT A TWINGE OF RHEUMATISM

SINCE TAKING

RHEUMA

"I suffered from Rheumatism for six years; tried different doctors, with no relief. I saw your advertisement and decided to try RHEUMA, I have taken three bottles and am entirely free from the disease. I was so bad I could not sleep nights, now I sleep well, and my kidneys work perfectly."— P. W. Miller, Catawissa, Pa.

"For 14 months I was so badly afflicted with Rheumatism that much of the time I was obliged to use a cane. I used one bottle of RHEUMA and THE CANE IS IN THE CORNER NOW. No one could be happier to be rid of the pain, swollen knees and badly swollen ankles. I certainly believe there is no remedy for the disease like RHEUMA."— Mrs Daniel S. Knox, Severance, N.Y., Aug. 8, 1912.

The Warne Drug Company guarantee RHEUMA to cure rheumatism Gout, Lumbago, Sciatica, Arthritis, Chronic Neuralgia and Kidney disease or money back— and only 50 cents, a bottle.

"I ATTRIBUTE MY CURE SOLELY

And Entirely To Taking "Fruit-a-tives"

HULL, QUE., DEC. 24th. 1909

"For the past twelve years, I had painful attacks of Dyspepsia. I could not digest my food and everything caused the most agonizing pain in my stomach. I also had a fearful attack of Constipation and at times, I had no movement of the bowels for two weeks.

Three doctors attended me for two years and gave me all kinds of medicine but did me no good. My weight came to only 80 pounds and everyone thought I was going to die. Finally, I had the good fortune to try "Fruit-a-tives" and as soon as I began to take them, I felt better. I persisted in the treatment and to my great joy, I steadily improved.

Now I feel very well, weigh 115 pounds, and this is more than I ever weighed even before my illness.

I attribute my cure solely and entirely to "Fruit-a-tives" and can never praise them too much for saving my life. To all who suffer from Dyspepsia and Constipation, I recommend "Fruit-a-tives" as a miraculous remedy".

Three Important Facts To Consider

1st—To have your LIFE INSURANCE, that in event of DEATH those depending on you will be provided for, and if you live, you will reap the benefit of your savings. DEATHS OCCUR EVERY SECOND.

2nd—To carry sufficient ACCIDENT AND SICKNESS INSURANCE that in event of disability, your income will not cease. You may meet with an accident any moment.

3rd—To have your PROPERTY Insured, that in event of FIRE you will not lose the earnings of a life time. Millions of Dollars are paid in Fire Losses each year

A small sum saved each day, week or month, protects you financially against any of the above misfortunes. We shall be pleased to give you full information regarding rates on application.

MARRIAGE OF FRENCH COUPLE IS ANNULLED

Some Points in French Law Brought Out by Judge

Montreal, Oct. 23.—Annulment of the marriage celebrated between two French people, Miss L. A. Durcy and Jos. Audrin, on August 29, 1902, in the Isle of Jersey, was granted by Judge Charbonneau, on the petition of the former. The judge bases his decision on the grounds of clandestinity, and because the defendant was a minor.

The judge pointed out that according to the French law, publication of a marriage must be made by an officer of the civil state of the domicile of the parties at the door of the City Hall, announcing the surnames, profession, domicile and residence of the future spouses, as well as of their parents, and further, that this publication, from which no dispensation can be obtained, must precede a marriage contracted in a foreign country between French subjects, or between a Frenchman and a foreigner.

Tax Collector Green who also provides the document permitting "two hearts to beat as one," has not experienced any trouble since the new marriage regulations went into force. Some prospective benedicts, however, have called at his office only to be turned away empty handed because he does not reside in this county.

WHAT IS RELIGION ?

Good Attendance at First of Study Classes at Y.M.C.A.

The first session of the classes on the Comparative Study of Regigion, conducted by Mr. A. A. Hainsworth, general secretary of the Y.M.C.A., was held last evening. Mr. Hainsworth took for his subject "What is Religion," and the 23 young men present evinced considerable enthusiasm in the question. Some of the definitions of "What is Religion," given by the men are as follows: Religion is the reverence we have for the one supreme being God; religion is a system of belief in an immortal existence and the worship of something connected with it; religion is the seeking of the unseen; religion is the out-reach of the soul to God.

The next meeting of the class will be next Wednesday evening at 7.30. The question to be discussed will be Religion of the Hindu. Several papers on the different subjects will also be read.

G. N. GRAHAM MAY TAKE OVER NATIONAL HOTEL

It may soon be possible to give a definite statement as to the future of the National Hotel. Meetings of the creditors have been held, and the solicitors of the several interests are endeavoring to bring about a settlement satisfactory to all parties.

THE SPORTING WORLD

A PREMATURE BLAST ON THE HOCKEY SITUATION

Some person has been telling tales out of school, and the Toronto Star has the following:

"There is some dissension in hockey circles in Peterborough. The rink management is said to be to blame. The "Petes" will be under new management this season, an entirely new executive having been elected. It is their intention to retire from the senior O.H.A. and place teams in the intermediate and junior series. The Lift Lock City should put a particularly strong intermediate seven on the ice, having the entire senior team of last year, also many of their intermediate and junior players from which to select their team.

The dissension, as the Star terms it, is not among the officers of the club, and when it comes to rounding up the players the local club will be master of ceremonies and will have the right of way. If the rink management want to be ugly, that's their business, but it strikes us that co-operation is the better proposition.

There may or there may not be a senior team in Peterborough this year. Only the future can tell.

KEENE CURLERS ELECT OFFICERS

The annual meeting of the Keene Curling Club was held last Friday evening at the Victoria House. There was a good attendance of skips and other members. Enthusiasm was at its height, and it is expected that the season of 1914 will be the best in the history of the club. Officers were elected as follows:

President—T. A. Easson.
Vice-President—Gilbert Howson.
Sec.-Treas.—A. St .A. Smith.

A big paper chase will be the feature for Saturday afternoon. All the members are requested to be out.

Haiti's Legion of Honor.

It is not generally known that the famous order of the Legion of Honor was adopted at Haiti in 1849. When Soulouque became emperor under the name of Faustin I. he instituted an order in imitation of that which had been established by Napoleon in 1802. Statues, ribbons and insignia were precisely identical, and since the sovereign of Haiti distributed his honors to all and sundry with lavish hand the French Government was considerably embarrassed. The death of Soulouque ended the difficulty.

This Teacher Unpopular.

LOCKPORT, N.Y., Oct. 23.—Two hundred boys and girls of the Lockport High School went on strike yesterday afternoon because the Board of Education at its meeting Tuesday night failed to reach a decision regarding their complaint against Principal Walter Severance. J. W. Peterson, school trustee-elect, urged the students to return and 125 of them did so, but 75 boys remained out. A recent order abolishing school fraternities and lack of sympathy and co-operation in promoting the school's sports are the causes of complaint against the principal.

Sylvia Pankhurst Released.

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Sylvia Pankhurst was released under license yesterday from Holloway jail. She is much enfeebled and emaciated in consequence of a hunger strike of a week's duration. She was arrested on Oct. 14 as she was about to enter the Poplar Town Hall, to address a meeting of militant suffragettes. The night previously Miss Pankhurst was the central figure of a fierce struggle between the police and a crowd of suffragettes, after she had addressed a gathering at Bow Baths, in the east end of London.

ADVERTISING

A STORE'S importance is rightly judged by its advertising. Not altogether by the size of the advertisement, but by size and tone, and quality of announcement.

What the store has to say is one thing. Quite as important is how it says it.

Given that the clerical force is competent and up-to-date, it will say, over the counter, the very best to be said in reference to the goods enquired for. It may, and should, suggest other goods, not in the customers view.

This implies that the customer is in the store. But what brings him or her there? The wish to buy and the belief it is a good place to buy at.

How is this learned of?

By advertising. The advertisement is a message, an intelligent middleman, doing service between seller and buyer. The space talks to thousands, even while the store is closed for the night.

Use The REVIEW and tell the story of your store and its opportunities for good service.

ART OF WEIGHING.

Wonderful Scales That Are Not Made of Anything.

THE LAW OF FALLING BODIES.

By This, Thanks to Newton and Liebnitz and the Calculus of Differentials, the Weight of Suns and Planets May Be Accurately Determined.

The art of weighing has expanded into a comprehensive science and can no longer be called a mere art. Scales are made of metal, but the set herein described is not made of anything. Scales are in hourly use that can weigh a pencil mark whose length is one-fourth of an inch; or a section of a hair of equal length. The usual practice in weighing runs from grains, ounces, pounds up to tons, usually one ton, and then up to fifty or more tons in railroad weighing, costing hundreds and thousands of dollars.

But humans would find it quite difficult to make scales that would weigh millions, billions, trillions, quadrillions, quintillions, sextillions, septillions, octillions and nonillions of tons, or decillions. An instrument able to weigh a decillion tons can now be purchased for one cent—a pencil. The scales are not made of metal; instead a set and fixed specific speed is the next to all powerful engine used. But it is far more easy to run a locomotive or steamship without knowing a single law of these complex machines than to even attempt to use the speed-scales without knowing every minute detail of every velocity law of moving bodies.

Let a street car start from rest and keep moving faster and faster until its rate of motion is, say, twenty miles per hour at the end of one minute. If the speed of the car increased uniformly during the entire minute its average speed is ten miles per hour, because it started from rest and increased to twenty miles per hour. If a body moves during one minute at twenty miles per hour the distance traversed will be speed multiplied by time, or twenty miles multiplied by one-sixtieth of an hour, or one-third of a mile; but the average speed in case of the car is ten miles per hour, so that the distance moved over is half as great or one-sixth mile. This is a fundamental law of nature and is of enormous importance.

Law: For uniformly increasing speed, starting from rest, the velocity increases with the time, but the distance traversed is that moved over by the moving body with its average speed, or one-half.

If measuring the distance fallen through by a body let fall at the rigidly exact beginning of one second of time to the rigidly exact end thereof is difficult, what shall be said of finding how fast it is falling at the end of the second. Go try: work from the ages of twenty to sixty years daily and you will fail. The fact is, the time required to find the mathematically exact specific speed of a falling body in still air was almost that required to measure the distance of the nearest star, about 120 years.

Then Atwood invented his machine, and this finally came to some near approach to accuracy. But this instrument of precision fell far short of the electrical chronographic apparatus. When all of this very complex mechanism is in perfect order it releases the ball at the exact beginning of a second and records the absolute time on the cylinder of a chronograph electrically and repeats the process at the absolute end of the second so far as human hands are able to do rigidly accurate work.

The moment that those supermen, Newton and Liebnitz, discovered that mighty power, beside which all else human pales into insignificance—the stupendous calculus or differentials—every mathematician saw immediately that one of nature's most magnificent laws was found in falling bodies. And then began the relentless and arduous self imposed work of more than a hundred years to find the set specific speed acquired by a falling body at the instantaneous and absolutely exact end of the first exactly measured second of time since man appeared.

The result is one grand, all potent, all powerful mean or average of a century of world wide measures, the diamond of diamonds, the most valuable number in possession of man, the astronomical balance:

Sixteen and one-tenth feet fallen to end of the first second: 32.2 feet per second speed at end of first second.

That is, a body let fall will, under the action of the earth's attraction of gravitation, fall 16.1 feet during the first absolute second of time, and at the absolute end of the second will be in motion with a velocity of 32.2 feet per second. These numbers constitute the most accurate and all powerful scales in existence.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

HAVELOCK HAPPENINGS

Special Correspondence.

Havelock, Oct. 23—There is often safety in boldness. This seems to be the case with a big black bear with two cubs in its wake, that has been meandering around the vicinity of Havelock for some time, and has as yet escaped the sad end of most of its kind that innocently wander into civilized parts where men pride themselves on their marksmanship. As if to tempt local nimrods into a chase, not content with making its appearance upon some of the main roads of Belmont township, one day during the past week it made so bold as to enter within the boundaries of the village itself, scampering across the field just south of the railroad tracks to the rear of the local ice house. Having thus challenged the local hunters, it disappeared southward, with a number of men with rifles in pursuit. But the bear still lives.

It has succeeded in working up considerable interest around here. Every few days some one is coming in with a story of the bear. In fact it would seem that the bear is either a mighty fast traveller or happens to be twins, for believing all you hear it would seem that he is frequently in different places at about the same time. A local gentleman was bicycling in from Round Lake one night recently when across the light from the head lamp, a huge shadow appeared. He felt his hair raising straight upward, as he realized that he was coasting straight into the arms of big bruin. He missed him however, by the proverbial hairs-breadth, and action stimulated by the appearance of the monster caused him to make a record-smashing run to Havelock, that has Walt Andrews' time beaten to a frazzle.

It seems, however, that bruin is not a very bloodthirsty animal. On a farm east of Havelock a young boy was left to play with the baby some distance from the house. Their play was rudely broken up, however, by the appearance of big bruin upon the scene. The boy made good his escape while the going was good, leaving the baby to the mercy of the bear. Apparently, however, it disdains having anything to do with infants, so it trotted off with its two cubs, leaving the baby unmolested.

Several parties have organized almost trained bruin to his lair, but bruin has so far escaped, and laughs at death, by making his sudden appearance and exit all over the country. The people are wondering how long bruin's sport will last, and are meanwhile keeping their calves and black sheep well out of the danger zone, not that they fear the bear so much directly as indirectly. Bruin and family should worry.

FIVE BRITISH BYE-ELECTIONS TO BE FOUGHT

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Five bye-elections are pending, namely, in Reading, Keighley, Linlithgowshire, Wick Burghs and North Cork. The keenest fight will be in Reading, vacant through Sir Rufus Isaacs becoming Lord Chief Justice. Captain Leslie Wilson will again be the Unionist candidate, and G. P. Gooch late member of Bath, will be the Liberal candidate. Keighley becomes vacant through S. O. Buckmaster being appointed Solicitor-General. He will probably be re-elected. Rt. Hon. Alexander Ure having been made a Upeer, resigns Linlithgow. Ex-Bailie Bratt, of Glasgow, will be the Liberal candidate, and James Kidd, a solicitor of Bowness, the Conservative. Wick Burghs will probably become vacant through Munro, the present member, succeeding Ure as Lord Advocate.

North Cork is vacant through the death of Patrick Guiney. No arrangements regarding these two contests have yet been made.

CAPTURING ZANZIBAR.

Serio Comic Battle That Deposed the Gay Sultan.

Zanzibar reminds every visitor of the towns described in "The Arabian Nights." It is a typical Arabian town and there seems to be a mystery and a romance behind every door. The town was ruled for hundreds of years by a sultan until the English took charge.

There is still a sultan, who receives a salary from the English government, but some day he will be deposed, and there will be no further pretense of a sultan having anything to do with the government. The old palace of the sultan—an ugly affair, which looks like a boarding house—is used for offices by the British. Near the palace is the harem, now deserted, since the present sultan has but one wife.

The sultan, who had trouble with the English, was educated in England and spent much of his time and all of his revenues in Paris. One day an English gunboat sailed into the harbor, and the captain told the gay sultan that he had been ousted! The sultan resented the high handed proceeding and sent word to the defenders of his dignity to sink the English gunboat and put the insolent captain in the dungeon.

There was an old fort near the palace, on the walls of which were mounted a few rusty cannon. The defenders of the sultan tried to fire these at the English gunboat, but they burst, one by one, and almost wiped out the sultan's defensive force. The captain of the English gunboat then began dropping shells into the palace and, with one solid shot, sank the sultan's navy—a small vessel which carried four guns.—F. W. Howe in Howe's Monthly.

A DEPUTY SHERIFF

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

The stranger adult that first caught sight of the Widow Henderson of the town of Grand Ledge laughed outright or was dumb with amazement.

The Widow Henderson was exactly six feet four inches in height and weighed 200 pounds. Whether it was six feet four in her stockings or with her shoes on is none of the reader's business. She was homely as a burdock and as rugged as an oak. She had a voice like a bass drum and the strength of an ox.

You may have noticed that big men always marry little women, and vice versa. Her deceased husband was only five feet tall and his weight was just an even hundred. When she moved to Grand Ledge from a distant town she soon ran across Peter Hipps and marked him down for husband No. 2. Peter was five feet tall and weighed ninety-eight pounds. His face was smooth, and his voice was girlish.

The young man was by no means dull witted, but he was made the victim of much chaffing and joking. The climax came when the sheriff of the county appointed him a deputy. Grand Ledge was a pretty hard town, and there were a score of farmers around who came in at least once a week and made it worse. Peter Hipps was a cipher to them. Whenever he tried to exert his authority he was carried out and dumped into a mudhole or dropped off the bridge over the creek. Sometimes he was chased out of town and didn't dare return for two or three days.

The Widow Henderson heard and saw and knew, and one day when she met the lightweight deputy on the street she said:

"Baby, you sure need a protector. Shall we get married?"

"You bet."

And married they were next day, and on the next the bride walked seven miles to the county seat town and into the sheriff's office to say to that official:

"I want to be deputy sheriff at Grand Ledge."

"I'm looking for some one."

"Well, you needn't look any further. If I can't straighten the kinks out within a month I'll resign."

"Mebbe you know I appointed Pete Hipps as a joke?" queried the officer.

"Yes, I do, and you can app'int me the same way if you want to, but there won't be much joking after I get started. I'll make it a very solemn business for most of 'em."

"Well, I expect there'll be lots of talk about it, but you shall be a deputy."

The town considered that marriage as the greatest joke for twenty years. Every time it was mentioned a dozen men booted and took another drink. They paraded in front of the bride's house and sang and swore and cat called and scared poor Peter until he crept under the bed and wailed:

"I thought you was going to do something!"

"No hurry, baby," was the reply. "I'm giving the calf all the rope it wants. It ain't agin the law to hoot around when a couple gets married."

Next forenoon half a dozen horny handed sons of toil came in to sell their butter and eggs and have some fun. The fun was to consist of taking three or four drinks apiece and then chucking the newlyweds off the bridge together. Word was sent them that if they did not appear voluntarily the mob would pay the house a visit.

"Well, baby, the time has come!" grimly announced the bride to the groom.

"Lord, but I'm scart to death!" replied Peter as his teeth began to chatter.

"Baby, lemme tell you something. There's going to be a row, and we shall both be in it. You pin on your badge, get your handcuffs and club, and we are going out to crack heads. If you don't fight like a man nine feet high I'll take you over my knee and spank you before the whole town. Come on now."

Pete was all a-shiver, but he obeyed her. There were fifty men waiting in front of the postoffice, and of the number at least twenty were hilarious and ripe for mischief.

"To the creek! To the creek!" was shouted as the bride and groom halted and faced them.

"Now, baby," said the wife in a quiet voice, "the fun is due to begin! Pick out the hard cases and strike like the kick of a mule! It's a public spanking if you show the white feather!"

With a couple of warwhoops that would have done credit to Comanche chiefs, bride and groom sailed in. The toughs were taken unprepared. The clubs were wielded without mercy, and the rabble broke and fled with hardly a defense. They were followed and given more club, and then to the number of twelve were arrested, locked up for a couple of hours, and then taken before the justice of the peace and fined $7 each. The next day six men who couldn't see the point were bailed in and on the next three. In a month Grand Ledge looked good to everybody, and Mr. and Mrs. Hipps were on the top rung of the ladder of fame.

"Is the woman to be deputy right along?" was asked of the sheriff.

"You bet your boots," was the reply, "and when my term is out I'm going to get her nominated for my place, and Peter can be her bottle holder. Sakes alive, but how she would have slammed John L. around in his palmy days!"

THE SPORTING WORLD

A PREMATURE BLAST ON THE HOCKEY SITUATION

Some person has been telling tales out of school, and the Toronto Star has the following:

"There is some dissension in hockey circles in Peterborough. The rink management is said to be to blame. The "Petes" will be under new management this season, an entirely new executive having been elected. It is their intention to retire from the senior O.H.A. and place teams in the intermediate and junior series. The Lift Lock City should put a particularly strong intermediate seven on the ice, having the entire senior team of last year, also many of their intermediate and junior players from which to select their team.

The dissension, as the Star terms it, is not among the officers of the club, and when it comes to rounding up the players the local club will be master of ceremonies and will have the right of way. If the rink management want to be ugly, that's their business, but it strikes us that co-operation is the better proposition.

There may or there may not be a senior team in Peterborough this year. Only the future can tell.

Haiti's Legion of Honor.

It is not generally known that the famous order of the Legion of Honor was adopted at Haiti in 1849. When Soulouque became emperor under the name of Faustin I. he instituted an order in imitation of that which had been established by Napoleon in 1802. Statues, ribbons and insignia were precisely identical, and since the sovereign of Haiti distributed his honors to all and sundry with lavish hand the French Government was considerably embarrassed. The death of Soulouque ended the difficulty.

A recent order abolishing school fraternities and lack of sympathy and co-operation in promoting the school's sports are the causes of complaint against the principal.

The result is one grand, all potent, all powerful mean or average of a century of world wide measures, the diamond of diamonds, the most valuable number in possession of man, the astronomical balance:

Sixteen and one-tenth feet fallen to end of the first second; 32.2 feet per second speed at end of first second.

That is, a body let fall will, under the action of the earth's attraction of gravitation, fall 16.1 feet during the first absolute second of time, and at the absolute end of the second will be in motion with a velocity of 32.2 feet per second. These numbers constitute the most accurate and all powerful scales in existence.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

HAVELOCK HAPPENINGS

Special Correspondence.

Havelock, Oct. 23.—There is often safety in boldness. This seems to be the case with a big black bear with two cubs in its wake, that has been meandering around the vicinity of Havelock for some time, and has as yet escaped the sad end of most of its kind that innocently wander into civilized parts where men pride themselves on their marksmanship. As if to tempt local nimrods into a chase, not content with making its appearance upon some of the main roads of Belmont township, one day during the past week it made so bold as to enter within the boundaries of the village itself, scampering across the field just south of the railroad tracks to the rear of the local ice house. Having thus challenged the local hunters, it disappeared southward, with a number of men with rifles in pursuit. But the bear still lives.

It has succeeded in working up considerable interest around here. Every few days some one is coming in with a story of the bear. In fact it would seem that the bear is either a mighty fast traveller or happens to be twins, for believing all you hear it would seem that he is frequently in different places at about the same time. A local gentleman was bicycling in from Round Lake one night recently when across the light from the head lamp, a huge shadow appeared. He felt his hair raising straight upward, as he realized that he was coasting straight into the arms of big bruin. He missed him however, by the proverbial hairs-breadth, and action stimulated by the appearance of the monster caused him to make a record-smashing run to Havelock, that has Walt Andrews' time beaten to a frazzle.

It seems, however, that bruin is not a very bloodthirsty animal. On a farm east of Havelock a young boy was left to play with the baby some distance from the house. Their play was rudely broken up, however, by the appearance of big bruin upon the scene. The boy made good his escape while the going was good, leaving the baby to the mercy of the bear. Apparently, however, it disdains having anything to do with infants, so it trotted off with its two cubs, leaving the baby unmolested.

Several parties have organized almost trained bruin to his lair, [illegible] bruin has so far escaped, and laughs at death, by making his sudden appearance and exit all over the country. The people are wondering how long bruin's sport will last, and are meanwhile keeping their calves and black sheep well out of the danger zone, not that they fear the bear so much directly as indirectly. Bruin and family should worry.

FIVE BRITISH BYE-ELECTIONS TO BE FOUGHT

LONDON, Oct. 23.—Five bye-elections are pending, namely, in Reading, Keighley, Linlithgowshire, Wick Burghs and North Cork. The keenest fight will be in Reading, vacant through Sir Rufus Isaacs becoming Lord Chief Justice. Captain Leslie Wilson will again be the Unionist candidate, and G. P. Gooch late member of Bath, will be the Liberal candidate. Keighley becomes vacant through S. O. Buckmaster being appointed Solicitor-General. He will probably be re-elected. Rt. Hon. Alexander Ure having been made a Upeer, resigns Linlithgow. Ex-Bailie Bratt, of Glasgow, will be the Liberal candidate, and James Kidd, a solicitor of Boyness, the Conservative. Wick Burghs will probably become vacant through Munro, the present member, succeeding Ure as Lord Advocate.

North Cork is vacant through the death of Patrick Guiney. No arragements regarding these two contests have yet been made.

CAPTURING ZANZIBAR.

Serio Comic Battle That Deposed the Gay Sultan.

Zanzibar reminds every visitor of the towns described in "The Arabian Nights." It is a typical Arabian town, and there seems to be a mystery and a romance behind every door. The town was ruled for hundreds of years by a sultan until the English took charge.

There is still a sultan, who receives a salary from the English government, but some day he will be deposed, and there will be no further pretense of a sultan having anything to do with the government. The old palace of the sultan—an ugly affair, which looks like a boarding house—is used for offices by the British. Near the palace is the harem, now deserted, since the present sultan has but one wife.

The sultan, who had trouble with the English, was educated in England and spent much of his time and all of his revenues in Paris. One day an English gunboat sailed into the harbor, and the captain told the gay sultan that he had been ousted. The sultan resented the high handed proceeding and sent word to the defenders of his dignity to sink the English gunboat and put the insolent captain in the dungeon.

There was an old fort near the palace, on the walls of which were mounted a few rusty cannon. The defenders of the sultan tried to fire these at the English gunboat, but they burst, one by one, and almost wiped out the sultan's defensive force. The captain of the English gunboat then began dropping shells into the palace and, with one solid shot, sank the sultan's navy—a small vessel which carried four guns.—F. W. Howe in Howe's Monthly.

A DEPUTY SHERIFF

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

The stranger adult that first caught sight of the Widow Henderson of the town of Grand Ledge laughed outright or was dumb with amazement.

The Widow Henderson was exactly six feet four inches in height and weighed 200 pounds. Whether it was six feet four in her stockings or with her shoes on is none of the reader's business. She was homely as a burdock and as rugged as an oak. She had a voice like a bass drum and the strength of an ox.

You may have noticed that big men always marry little women, and vice versa. Her deceased husband was only five feet tall and his weight was just an even hundred. When she moved to Grand Ledge from a distant town she soon ran across Peter Hipps and marked him down for husband No. 2. Peter was five feet tall and weighed ninety-eight pounds. His face was smooth, and his voice was girlish.

The young man was by no means dull witted, but he was made the victim of much chaffing and joking. The climax came when the sheriff of the county appointed him a deputy. Grand Ledge was a pretty hard town, and there were a score of farmers around who came in at least once a week and made it worse. Peter Hipps was a cipher to them. Whenever he tried to exert his authority he was carried out and dumped into a mudhole or dropped off the bridge over the creek. Sometimes he was chased out of town and didn't dare return for two or three days.

The Widow Henderson heard and saw and knew, and one day when she met the lightweight deputy on the street she said:

"Baby, you sure need a protector. Shall we get married?"

"You bet."

And married they were next day, and on the next the bride walked seven miles to the county seat town and into the sheriff's office to say to that official:

"I want to be deputy sheriff at Grand Ledge."

"I'm looking for some one."

"Well, you needn't look any further. If I can't straighten the kinks out within a month I'll resign."

"Mebbe you know I appointed Pete Hipps as a joke?" queried the officer.

"Yes, I do, and you can app'int me the same way if you want to, but there won't be much joking after I get started. I'll make it a very solemn business for most of 'em."

"Well, I expect there'll be lots of talk about it, but you shall be a deputy."

The town considered that marriage as the greatest joke for twenty years. Every time it was mentioned a dozen men hooted and took another drink. They paraded in front of the bride's house and sang and swore and cat called and scared poor Peter until he crept under the bed and wailed:

"I thought you was going to do something!"

"No hurry, baby," was the reply. "I'm giving the calf all the rope it wants. It ain't agin the law to hoot around when a couple gets married."

Next forenoon half a dozen horny handed sons of toil came in to sell their butter and eggs and have some fun. The fun was to consist of taking three or four drinks apiece and then chucking the newlyweds off the bridge together. Word was sent them that if they did not appear voluntarily the mob would pay the house a visit.

"Well, baby, the time has come!" grimly announced the bride to the groom.

"Lord, but I'm scart to death!" replied Peter as his teeth began to chatter.

"Baby, lemme tell you something. There's going to be a row, and we shall both be in it. You pin on your badge, get your handcuffs and club, and we are going out to crack heads. If you don't fight like a man nine feet high I'll take you over my knee and spank you before the whole town. Come on now."

Pete was all a-shiver, but he obeyed her. There were fifty men waiting in front of the postoffice, and of the number at least twenty were hilarious and ripe for mischief.

"To the creek! To the creek!" was shouted as the bride and groom halted and faced them.

"Now, baby," said the wife in a quiet voice, "the fun is due to begin! Pick out the hard cases and strike like the kick of a mule! It's a public spanking if you show the white feather!"

With a couple of warwhoops that would have done credit to Comanche chiefs, bride and groom sailed in. The toughs were taken unprepared. The clubs were wielded without mercy, and the rabble broke and fled with hardly a defense. They were followed and given more club, and then to the number of twelve were arrested, locked up for a couple of hours, and then taken before the justice of the peace and fined $7 each. The next day six men who couldn't see the point were hauled in and on the next three. In a month Grand Ledge looked good to everybody, and Mr. and Mrs. Hipps were on the top rung of the ladder of fame.

"Is the woman to be deputy right along?" was asked of the sheriff.

"You bet your boots," was the reply, "and when my term is out I'm going to get her nominated for my place, and Peter can be her deputy the holder. Sakes alive, but how she would have slammed John L. around in his palmy days!"

LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN HEAR PAPER ON SANITATION

Inspector Spence Urges Spirit of Civic Patriotism in Place of "I Don't Have to"

The public meeting of the local Council of Women, held yesterday afternoon at the Public Library was largely attended. Mrs. J. C. Davidson presided.

After the various reports had been presented and other matters of business attended to, Sanitary Inspector Spence read a very interesting and instructive paper. "A Sanitary Inspector's life is not a happy one," said Mr. Spence. "Every man's hand is against him. He is disliked, detested, and feared by the dirty and slovenly; treated with frigid condescension by the respectable and cleanly and scorned by the elite, and all because he is engaged in the laudable work of safeguarding the public health and protecting the public from the effects of their own ignorance and carelessness and fraud of workmen.

"It is, therefore, with a feeling of gratification that I accept the invitation of the local council, to address this meeting on sanitary conditions, and to show how to improve them because it shows a desire for co-operation in the work, and the co-operation of the public in sanitary matters is what is most needed.

In dealing with the housing problem, Mr. Spence pointed out that the conditions of sanitation in the city were very bad.

There were in Peterborough, he said, unfortunate people living in conditions that are a disgrace to a civilized country and must not be tolerated. Slums should have no place in the Canadian vocabulary and yet slums exist right here. Again there were houses in this city where the people are positively endangered by the defective sanitary arrangements, and the owner who knowingly allows such conditions to continue has a big responsibility. "I assert that it is nothing less than a criminal act to endanger the lives of the innocent children and the ignorant adults by forcing them to live under such conditions, and yet by enforcing improvements to be made by the landlord we are imposing hardships on the tenant in many cases and putting money into the landlord's pocket, as the landlord generally raises the rent fifty per cent."

His remarks as to the disposal of house refuse were very instructive. One of the best things the city had undertaken was the garbage system in the interests of the public health but there was much room for improvement. Each house should be provided with a galvanized iron can where every kind of refuse could be deposited. To eliminate the danger as far as possible, from putrification household refuse should be wrapped in paper. All this would be then collected in properly constructed garbage waggons by the garbage collectors. The men would be supplied with some kind of a disinfectant which would be sprinkled into the receptacle after emptying. "That is the system that I would advocate and shall work for it if I continue to hold my position of santiray inspector," said Mr. Spence. "In the meantime what can be done to better the present conditions of garbage collection, cleaning of yards, and lanes? Why not utilize the Boy Scouts by forming a batallion of the Volunteer Public Health brigade?"

In improving the condition of affairs, the public must be taught that good personal cleanliness are the first principles of health preservation.

Mr. Spence urged that the spirit of civic patriotism be promulgated instead of "I don't have to" as is so prevalent.

LECTURE BY DR. D. J. GOGGIN

Public Invited to Meeting at Collegiate Hall To-night

To-night, at 8 p.m. in the Assembly room of the Collegiate Institute, Dr. Goggin, of the Education Department, Toronto, will give an address on "A Practical Education."

The public are cordially invited to attend this meeting, as the subject is one that should appeal to all, and Dr. Goggin is an able and entertaining speaker.

A short musical programme will precede the address. Admission free. Dr. Morrison, chairman of the Board of Education, will preside.

LECTURE ON ENGLISH AND GERMAN LANGUAGE

Dr. Horning, Professor of Modern Languages at Victoria College, Toronto, will deliver a lecture on the evening of November 7th, in the Collegiate Institute Assembly Hall on English and German Language.

Dr. Horning is well and favorably known in Peterborough and the subject of his lecture should be of great interest to every Canadian, and we trust a large audience will be present. The admission will be 25 cts.

THEATRICAL

Another bumper house greeted the R. W. Marks Company again last evening at the Grand. May A. Bell Marks certainly demonstrated her ability as an emotional actress of more than average talent.

The company has been received by packed houses and has lived up to advanced notices, which is a compliment that cannot always be paid to stock companies.

"THE QUAKER GIRL"

"The Quaker Girl" with its lilting melodies and fresh untainted comedy, will be seen at the Grand at an early date, and bids fair to establish a box-office record for the theatre in this city. This popular musical comedy has become the vogue wherever seen, and everyone leaves the theatre whistling or humming the catch, dreamy "Come to the Ball" waltz, or enthusing or enthusing over the fresh beauties of the little Quaker Girl. Victor Morley in his original role has scored tremendously as "Tony Chute," the debonair young boulevardier, who wins the heart of the Quaker Girl. Assisting him in his fun-making are such capable artists as Harry Short, Bernice McCabe, Dixie Girard, Murray Stephen, Mlle. Corday, Connie Mack, William Blaisdell, Phil J. Moore, Carol Parsons and Adelaide Folger. The chorus is unusually large and includes some stunning young women. One of the features of the performance is a special orchestra. All in all "The Quaker Girl" will no doubt live up to its advance notices, which is saying something in these days of flamboyant and persiflaging press agents. 46

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MEETING

Arrangements Underway For Banquet in November

Arrangements for the great Laymen's Missionary Campaign that will be held in Peterboro during the first week in December are rounding rapidly into shape. All the Protestant churches in Peterborough are co-operating.

A preliminary conference will be held in Peterboro on November 13 at which the Laymen of Peterboro county who are to take part will be addressed by speakers from outside the city, who have had experience in similar campaigns elsewhere. This conference will be one of 37 that will be held during the next month and a half throughout Ontario. All the churches in the county of Peterboro have been invited to send delegates. The speakers at the Peterboro Conference will be Rev. A. P. Statford, of Montreal, B. R. Ferguson, India; Walter Daniel, of the Baptist Board; J. R. Grnup, of the Methodist Board; D. M. Rose, secretary of the Central Committee Toronto; and K. Beaton, on the Missionary Educational Movement. There is a probability that James Ryrie, of Toronto, will also be in attendance.

A LOCAL FIELD DAY

In order that the conference may be as well attended as possible, it was decided recently to recommend to the different city churches that a Missionary Field Day be held in them the Sunday before the conference. For these meetings an effort will be made to obtain well known speakers from outside the city.

WILL USE ADVERTISING

The Advertising Committee reported in favor of publishing a series of large advertisements in the daily papers, the week before the campaign, addressed to "the Man on the Street" in an effort to enlist his interest and support. There are many misconceptions about the Missionary Movement, and much that is misunderstood. It is really one of the best movements that a business man or any other person can make an investment in and this will be shown to the public by means of the advertisements. The recommendation of the committee was adopted.

A GREAT BANQUET

Mr. R. F. Downey reported on behalf of the Banquet Committee. Arrangements are being made for the holding of a monster banquet, which will probably be held in the Market Hall, at which it is anticipated approximately 800 men will sit down. The meal will be provided by a caterer but the co-operation of the ladies in the different churches will be enlisted in the serving. The hall will be suitably decorated. It is anticipated that this campaign will be the most far reaching of the kind that has yet been held in Peterboro. The week of December first is to be devoted to an "Every Member Canvass."

$300 WAS HIS BANK ACCOUNT

The bank account of the young man referred to in an article in Wednesday's issue of the Review, introducing Mr. H. J. McCannon and his Real Estate Agency on George street was $300, and not $3.00 as a typographical error made it appear.

The Late Mr. Cunningham

The death occurred yesterday of Thomas Henry Cunningham, after a long illness at the residence of his mother, 169 Edinburgh street.

He is survived by a mother and two brothers, and three sisters, namely, William, of Winnipeg, and Frank, of this city, and Mrs. George Swain, Togo, Sask.; Mrs. W. J. Morgan, Winnipeg, and Mrs. D. Wallace, Reid street, city.

The funeral will take place from 169 Edinburgh street, at 1p.m., Friday, and thence to Omemee cemetery.

Infant Expires

Raymond Chester McClelland, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. McClelland, South Monaghan, passed away this morning.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon from Mr. McClelland's residence, to the Little Lake cemetery.

A man will give his wife $10 to pay $60 worth of bills. Then he will borrow $6 of the $10 back and want to know what she does with all her money.

THRILLING RESCUE OF MOVING PICTURE ACTOR

WAS SAVED FROM THE WHIRLPOOL

Peter W. Langaard of Detroit Comes to Grief While Making Trip in Motor Boat for Film Company and Fred. Preston, of Niagara Falls, Swims to His Rescue With Line Tied About His Waist.

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Oct. 24.—Over four hours in the grasp of the Whirlpool in a small motor boat, Peter W. Langaard of Detroit was rescued at eight o'clock last night, more dead than alive. He was taken to an hotel on the Canadian side, where it was said he would be all right in twenty-four hours, although his nerves were badly shaken by the ordeal through which he passed.

Langaard made the trip through the Whirlpool Rapids from the Maid of the Mist landing on the Canadian side of the Whirlpool to furnish a subject for a moving picture film. The trip had been made several times before without mishap.

Langaard navigated the rapids safely, but when he swung into the Whirlpool driftwood clogged the propeller of his boat and he was powerless to bring the craft out of the centre of the vortex. For nearly three hours he endeavored to clear the propeller by leaning over the stern of the boat, but the driftwood was so tightly jammed between the flanges and the hull that he could not remove it, and the careening of the boat when it was sucked into the very centre of the whirlpool made it necessary for him to devote nearly all his efforts to keep it from overturning.

When darkness closed in over the gorge headlights were taken from trolley cars along Canadian side, and in their dim rays the crowd watched Langaard fight for life. In the meantime the fire department from Niagara Falls, Ont., had been summoned and several unsuccessful efforts were made by the firemen to send out a rope attached to a float. Shortly before eight o'clock Fred Preston of Niagara Falls, Ont., volunteered to swim out with a life line attached to his waist.

Langaard by this time was exhausted and lay still in the bottom of the boat, which bobbed around in the vortex like a cork.

The crowd, then numbering nearly 1,000, cheered when Preston struck out for the rescue. Half way out his life line became entangled in driftwood, and he was compelled to return to shore. On the second attempt he reached the side of the boat. He was afraid to climb into the craft, which then was half-filled with water. Clinging to the side of the boat, he called out to the rescuers on shore to pull.

Aided by instructions called out by Preston, the boat was finally manoeuvred out of the danger zone and was slowly drawn ashore. Preston was given a great ovation by the crowd.

SCENE, AS GIANT BLAST LET WATER INTO THE CULEBRA CUT.

FIRST PHOTOGRAPH OF THE BLOWING UP OF GAMBOA DIKE.
COPYRIGHT BY UNDERWOOD & UNDERWOOD

This is the first photograph received of the terrific explosion which blew up the immense Gamboa dike in the Panama Canal Zone.

Forty tons of dynamite exploded and let the waters of the Gatun Lake into the great Culebra cut, where thousands of men had worked for years to clear a channel through which vessels might pass from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean.

President Wilson touched an electric button in the White House, at Washington, and sent a spark over the wires that set off the gigantic charges of dynamite placed in about six thousand holes in the Gamboa dike. Each hole contained from eight to one hundred pounds of dynamite, and the explosion was such as is seldom equalled.

Enormous masses of rock and earth were blown high in the air. The shock of the explosion was felt for miles. It was practically the culmination of years of work on the canal, which was begun by the United States in May, 1904. The cost of the canal to date has been nearly $300,000,000.

VOLTURNO'S DEATH LIST

One Hundred and Thirty Four Lives Lost

Canadian Press Despatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The total death list by the burning of the steamer Volturno was last night fixed by the Uranium Company at 134 of whom 102 were passengers.

The steamer Star of Ireland which arrived yesterday, reported having passed the Volturno a week ago. The derelict was still burning and was 120 miles south-west of the spot where she was abandoned.

Cabinet Crisis In Spain.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—A cable from Madrid says: Both in Government and political circles it is admitted that the situation has never been quite so complicated as at present. The King arrived Wednesday from Biarritz, where he underwent a slight operation, and had a long conference with Premier Romanones.

It is currently believed that a Cabinet crisis will certainly supervene before the end of the week, the efforts made by the King having failed to reconcile the factions of the Liberal party. What the solution will be even the most experienced politicians fail to foresee.

Militants Burn Pavilion.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—An "arson squad" of militant suffragettes yesterday set fire to and destroyed the sports pavilion of Bristol University. They left the usual tell-tale literature scattered about the grounds.

The public prosecutor decided yesterday that he would not proceed against "General" Mrs. Flora Drummond, who was taken ill in June last while proceedings were in progress against her for infringement of the malicious damage to property act. She underwent an operation, and since then has been continually in ill health.

Esperantists Protest.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Through the medium of Esperanto a world-wide protest against the so-called ritual murder trial at Kiev has been launched.

The protest originated in Bohemia with the adoption there of a resolution by 136 lawyers and public officials. A copy of this resolution, translated into Esperanto, has been mailed to every council of Esperantists in the world. Local Esperantists yesterday embodied it in a petition to Senator Root, requesting him to place the protest before the Senate.

All Committed Atrocities.

PARIS, Oct. 24.—Troops of all the Balkan countries committed atrocities, according to a report of an investigating committee just made.

While it was found that the Bulgarians had committed the greatest faults, the soldiery of other nations taking part in the war were also guilty of many hideaus acts. The committeemen appear to be of the opinion that, had other belligerents been roused to such a pitch of fury as were the Bulgarians, they would not have acted much better, judging from what happened on certain occasions and by letters captured from Greek soldiers.

Sees Babe Burned; Kills Herself.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Oct. 24.—An unusual tragedy occurred in this city yesterday. Mary, the three-year-old daughter of Mrs. John Most, was playing with matches when her clothing caught fire. The mother heard the little one's cries and went to her assistance. The daughter, however, died in a short time from burns. The mother became frantic and rushing to her room, procured a revolver and standing in front of a mirror shot herself through the head, dying almost instantly.

Want License Act Amended.

INGERSOLL, Ont., Oct. 24.—At a meeting of the South Oxford Prohibition Association, held here yesterday afternoon a resolution was passed memorializing the Provincial Government to so amend the license act that unlicensed municipalities would be given the same protection as those which had passed the local option law.

Ingersoll is surrounded by unlicensed territory and such an amendment would be much of a protection to them.

NO REPORT ON THE WORK

Ottawa Separate Schools Get no Grant This Year

RULE 17 AGAIN

OTTAWA, Oct. 24.—The stand taken by the Ottawa Separate School Board in regard to the bilingual question resulted yesterday in the board being notified by the Department of Education that owing to the fact that there has been no report from the inspector of schools for the last school year that the separate schools of Ottawa were conducted according to the school act and regulations, all grants due for the current fiscal year have been forfeited. The attention of the board is called in the communication to section 107 of the regulations, which states that the trustees of every school shall be held personally responsible for the amount of any school monies forfeited by or lost to the board in consequence of neglect of duty. This means that an amount of money equal to the Government grants may have to be made up by the members of the board themselves. It is understood that a special meeting of the board will be called to consider this communication.

The trouble appears to be over the question of the enforcement of rule 17 relating to the teaching of French. At a meeting held a short time ago a resolution was passed by the Ottawa Separate School Board declining to enforce the instruction contained in this rule. A copy of the resolution was forwarded to the Ontario Department of Education, and the sequel lies in the notification received by the board this morning. Some interesting developments are likely to follow.

ONLY 22 MINERS SAVED

One of the Worst Disasters is That at Stag Canon

DAWSON, N.M., Oct. 24.—Of the 22 miners rescued alive from the Stag Canon mine yesterday, the greater number were seriously injured. Many had been frightfully mangled by the explosion. Nearly all were sickened by the poisonous gases they had inhaled.

William McDermott, general superintendent of the mine, has not been found. He was among the 284 men entombed.

British Officer Goes To China.

LONDON, Oct. 24.—The British Admiralty has lent to the Chinese Government, Harold Christian of the British navy and not Rear Admiral Arthur Henry Christian, as stated in despatches from Pekin, to superintend the reorganization of the training of the Chinese navy.

Capt. Christian will leave England soon to take up his post, accompanied by a staff of naval instructors.

A. G. Rodgers Dead.

BUFFALO, Oct. 24.—A. G. Rodgers, formerly of Toronto, and superintendent of carborundum plant in Niagara Falls, died shortly before noon yesterday at his home on Jefferson avenue and Sixth street. He is survived by his wife, who was formerly Miss Evelyn Kilpatrick, and by two children. The burial will take place Saturday morning in Toronto.

STRAIGHT PARTY FIGHT

Conservative and Liberal Nominated In South Bruce.

WALKERTON, Oct. 24.—At the conclusion of the formal nominations in the Town Hall yesterday afternoon of Mr. W. D. Cargill as Conservative candidate and Mr. R. E. Truax, Liberal candidate, in the bye-election in South Bruce, Mr. Cargill spoke first and was followed by Mr. Truax.

On the record of the Government Mr. Cargill asked for the support of the electors. The extension of the rural mail delivery system and the parcel post system, which is to be introduced at the first of the year, were pointed out as features of the Government program which must appeal to the farmers.

Mr. Truax, in his speech, declared that Conservative members of Parliament were traversing the roads and back lanes securing votes by doubtful methods instead of coming out openly on the public platform.

Hon. Mr. Meighen, Solicitor-General, and Mr. Hugh Guthrie, M.P. for South Wellington, also spoke.

50 VILLAGERS SLAIN

Mexican Rebels Said To Have Tortured and Slaughtered Victims.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 24.—Revolutionists Wednesday murdered the entire population, numbering about 50, of the Village of Cheran, at Zicurrin, in the State of Michoacan, while they were defending the village church against looters. The villagers fought until their ammunition was exhausted, and then used machetes, stones and clubs, to beat off their assailants, but they were eventually overcome and killed.

Rebels are reported to have tortured Lieut. Jose Bracamontes and two soldiers belonging to a small federal garrison stationed near Camaron, to the south of Nuevo Larado, after killing the remainder of the federal troops. The rebels are said to have skinned the soles off the feet of their three prisoners, walked them several miles and then beheaded them with machetes because they refused to shout for Carranza.

Fighting at Monterey.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 24.—Fighting is reported to be in progress in the outskirts of Monterey. Rebels are said to have made a dash into a suburb and taken possession of some of the outlying positions. The attack on Monterey began yesterday morning, the first shots being fired about ten o'clock. Shortly afterward the telegraph lines were cut and communication ceased.

BARGE FOUNDERS.

The Ceylon Is Wrecked In Storm Of Long Point.

KINGSTON, Oct. 24.—A costly wreck resultant occurred about fifty miles from here yesterday, but prompt action saved the lives of the sailors.

In yesterday's storm the barge Ceylon, with wheat from Port Colborne to Montreal foundered off Long Point, Lake Ontario. Her crew were saved.

The Ceylon, accompanied by the Burma, both in tow of the tug Bartlett, was returning from Port Colborne with grain for Montreal and struck the heavy sea that prevailed in Lake Ontario Wednesday night. The storm, increasing in violence gradually worked the hatches off and the crew were unable to keep them down, with the result that the barge gradually filled with water, and the pressure of wet grain sprang some planks, causing her to settle in the water.

Capt. Siddell saw the precarious condition of the vessel and signalled the Bartlett with the distress torch whistle. The Bartlett put about and came alongside, so that the crew of the Ceylon were able to step on board. Great credit is due Capt. A. Lepine, jr., for bravery in turning in the raging sea and taking chances of having his tug damaged against the barge.

The tug then proceeded to Timber Island and an examination was made of the Burma. It was found that she had shipped some water, but she was pumped out and arrived here about noon in tow of the Bartlett.

The Ceylon sank within an hour after being abandoned and the shore is strewn with her wreckage, consisting of pieces of spars, cabin, etc. The crew are Kingstonians, and are as follows: Capt. R. Siddell; Phelix Campau, mate; Miss A. Milford, cook; John Gallagher, Geo. Streckbridge and Harry Funnell, seamen.

PRISON FOR THE RIOTERS

Over Forty Are Sentenced to Imprisonment at Nanaimo

VANCOUVER, Oct. 24.—Judge Howey passed sentence yesterday on more than two score Nanaimo rioters. The maximum sentence was two years. Many union officers will spend the next year in jail.

Three men and two boys were sentenced to serve two years in the penitentiary, twenty-three were given imprisonment for one year and fined $100 each, and eleven were sent to jail for three months and will have to pay a fine of $50 each. All sentences date from the time of arrest. This means that those sentenced to serve three months will be liberated in about thirty days' time.

Those sentenced to serve two years are: J. J. Taylor, vice-president of the British Columbia Federation of Labor and vice-president of the Ladysmith local of the United Mine Workers of America; Samuel Guthrie, president of the Ladysmith Union, Paul Heaconink, a leader, and two boys, John Morgan, son of a prominent mine foreman, who was also given a jail term, and William Simpson, jr., son of a mine contractor.

Taylor and Guthrie pleaded guilty to having taken part in the disturbances, and gave as their excuse that they headed processions of the union miners which led to disturbing the peace.

SMUGGLED GOODS

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—Mrs. F. B. Wiborg of Cincinnati was fined $1,750 in the U. S. District Court yesterday for having failed to declare dutiable goods on her arrival here on the steamship Mauretania, Sept. 5. Henry W. Taft, brother of the former President, and Frank A. Munsey were on hand in court yesterday ready to testify as character witnesses in her behalf.

Mrs. Wiborg, who is a niece of Gen. Sherman, pleaded guilty through her attorney and threw herself upon the mercy of the court.

Royal Party Fog Bound.

QUEBEC, Oct. 24.—Fog is delaying the Empress of Britain, on board which are the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and the Princess Patricia. The vessel is not expected to reach Quebec until late Friday afternoon, when the royal party will at once board a special train and proceed to Ottawa, reaching there on Saturday.

Reports from the Empress of Britain state that the duchess stood the journey well.

GEN. FELIX DIAZ DOES NOT APPEAR ON THE STREETS

Candidate for Presidency of Mexico Keeps Indoors For Fear of Being Seized by Huerta's Forces.

VERA CRUZ, Oct. 24.—Gen. Felix Diaz, who arrived here Wednesday on the steamer Corcovado and went soon after landing to the home of his mother-in-law, and has remained there ever since. He, so far, has escaped arrest, but his friends believe that if he appears in the streets of Vera Cruz he will be taken into custody by President Huerta's forces. Detectives and police are watching the house and all plans formulated by Gen. Diaz regarding a visit to the capital appear to have been abandoned. It is considered probable that Gen. Diaz will take refuge in one of the consulates. He conferred for several hours yesterday with several of his intimate friends while others remained outside the house, eyeing the Huerta guards and talking resistance if the police or military authorities attempted to serve an order of arrest.

Diaz insists that he will not flee the country and is still reluctant to believe that the Huerta-Blanquet ticket has official sanction, although he admits that the wide distribution of the announcement of what is commonly regarded as the official candidacy, renders other tickets impossible.

This was the anniversary of the recapture of Vera Cruz by the Federals, after the Diaz revolt, when Gen. Diaz and his entire staff were made prisoners.

The Vera Cruz authorities deny the receipt of an order for the arrest of Gen. Diaz, but the assurance is not sufficient to cause the general to venture from the house into the street.

The gunboat Zaragoza last yesterday received a bill of health and it is reported will sail with five passengers. It is supposed that these five are the officers who were arrested for failure to obey the orders to remain in Havana. They are now confined in the island prison of San Juan de Uluca. The civilians arrested on Wednesday have been released.

Awaiting Diaz at Capital.

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 24.—Several hundred adherents of Gen. Felix Diaz waited two hours at the railroad station yesterday for the arrival of their leader, whose coming from Vera Cruz had been announced in the morning newspapers. In spite of the advice given by the organ of the Diaz party that no demonstration be attempted the general's followers had prepared to give him an ovation.

It is now expected that Gen. Diaz will arrive at the capital to-day, though his movements appear to be uncertain.

Situation Is Ominous.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—An atmosphere of gravity sombre silence enveloped the Mexican situation here last night, not only with regard to the dissatisfaction of the United States at Great Britain's attitude but as to the critical state of affairs in Mexico City as the election of Oct. 26 draws near.

There were no tangible developments, but an incident of the day which official Washington interpreted as ominous was President Wilson's flat refusal to discuss Mexico or any phases of the problem when he met the Washington correspondents in their usual semi-weekly conference.

Secretary Bryan showed equal reticence. The conclusion drawn generally was that a crisis was slowly approaching, that the arrival of Gen. Felix Diaz appeared to complicate internal affairs in Mexico, and that stern measures by the Washington Government would not be surprising.

It became apparent in well-informed quarters that Great Britain's failure to repudiate the action of Sir Lionel Garden, British Minister to Mexico, who presented his credentials immediately after Huerta proclaimed his dictatorship, has caused administration officials to feel that they could no longer depend on the help of England in solving the Mexican problem.

The officials do not discuss the British attitude in any way. Persons close to the administration say the policy of Great Britain has created an embarrassing situation here, with an ever-increasing tension. It is not likely that Ambassador Page and the British Foreign Office will discuss Mexico until after the elections of Oct. 26, as Sir Edward Grey was reported as intimating that he would not bind the British Government to any policy until after these elections

FOUR MILLIONS FOR CORNELL

ITHACA, N.Y., Oct. 24.—A gift of approximately $4,000,000 to Cornell University Medical College was announced yesterday on behalf of the board of trustees. While no official statement was made, it is believed that the gift, the largest in the history of the university, was made by Oliver Payne of New York.

Another Stork Episode.

LONDON, Oct. 24. — News has reached the British royal family that the Czarina of Russia is again expecting the stork. Special importance attaches to the event owing to the continued rumors of the ill-health of the czarovitch, who, according to a recent report, can only live a few months.

CAUGHT IN ICE.

One of Stefansson's Ships Imprisoned—Three Get Clear.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 24.—Capt. John Backland, a whaler, who left Point Barrow, Alaska, Sept. 1 and arrived here yesterday, reported that in August three of Vilhjalmar Stefansson's exploring ships—the whalers Karluk and Belvedere and the steam schooner Mary Sachs—struck a lead in the ice east of Point Barrow and steamed away northeastward.

Stefansson's fourth vessel, the Alaska, found shelter in a lagoon east of Point Barrow, but on Sept. 1 it was frozen in the ice and had drifted five miles from the lagoon. However, the ice pack was solid, and if the vessel were crushed its men could easily have reached shore.

In Seattle.

SEATTLE, Wash., Oct. 24. — Dr. James E. Crichton, health officer of Seattle, said yesterday the bubonic plague rat situation in Seattle was serious, but that the health department hoped to prevent an outbreak of the disease.

"Not for six years," he said, "has there been a case of bubonic plague in a human being in Seattle. In those six years we have found twenty-four plague rats. A considerable number were taken during the plague outbreak six years ago, and recently seven were killed in a section of the waterfront which has been thoroughly isolated."

LOST SHIP IS FOUND

Centennial, Missing Six Years, Discovered in Ice

SEATTLE, Oct. 24.—The steamer Centennial, which left Muroran, Japan, six years ago for San Francisco with a cargo of sulphur and was never heard from, is reported fast in the ice off Saghalin Island, Okkotsk Sea, near Siberia. A Russian expedition, bound through the Okhotsk Sea, discovered the missing vessel with lifeboats gone, the name partly obliterated and her ironwork corroded. There was no sign of a human being on the ship.

Captain E. Hieber, who piloted the Russian expedition that found the Centennial, told G. A. Griffin, an engineer of the Philippine coast guard, of his discovery, and Griffin repeated the story here at the headquarters of the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association. Hieber has been asked for further details.

The Centennial was first named the Delta, then the Takasaga Maru. Under her last title, the Centennial, she became an Alaskan gold ship, afterward a Government transport, and at last passed into the hands of Charles Nelson Co. of San Francisco, her owners at the time she disappeared.

DILUTED SEWAGE IN COACHES

Railway Served Filthy Water to Passengers

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24. — One great railroad system has been furnishing drinking water to its passengers, which the experts of the public health service have pronounced, after examination, to be nothing less than diluted sewage.

Surgeon-General Blue yesterday reported to Assistant Secretary Newton, of the Treasury Department, that an investigation disclosed that a railroad company has been filling the water-tanks of its passenger coaches at a supply 300 yards down stream from the outlet of a large eastern city. An examination disclosed more than 60,000 bacteria in each teaspoonful of water. The investigators reported that the water was "turbid," had a "pronounced taste" and was "grossly polluted."

Pending the outcome of a notice to the railroad company to change its source of supply officials have withheld the name of the line.

DELAYED BY GALE.

Lake Superior Traffic Was Storm-Bound In Portage.

DULUTH, Minn., Oct. 24.—Vessels arriving in the Duluth-Superior harbor yesterday were covered with snow. Practically all of the delayed fleet is in port.

According to the vessel captains a dozen boats were sheltered in Portage during the worst part of the storm, and they waited from twelve to sixteen hours for the heavy northwester to moderate.

Fifteen boats were waiting to be loaded at the docks yesterday morning which would have been despatched had the ore not been frozen, making it hard to handle. This is exceptionally early in the season for the movement to be hampered by the cold. Predictions are made that there will be little unloading after Nov. 1.

THE GLOBE'S REPLY TO MR. BURNHAM

Mr. Burnham's letter to the Globe which we quote in another column, has had the effect of stinging that journal into opening its mind upon the naval question. The Globe has earned a reputation of saying very little in a large space. Its editorials on politics generally, and upon naval matters in particular, are long and verbose incantation which seem designed purposely to mystify, bogfound and torture its readers.

This makes it difficult to answer the Globe, for when you are not sure just what a man is driving at, you cannot say whether you agree with him or not, and the probabilities are you will misunderstand him.

But this vagueness is as a shield of triple brass to the Globe, for it can always claim that it has been misunderstood, and that its enemies are calumniators and are anxious to prove its disloyalty, etc.

But the fog has cleared and the Globe has spoken.

> The Globe stands for a Canadian fleet to serve on the North Atlantic and on the North Pacific, because such a policy is genuinely Canadian. To that program both parties in Parliament were committed in 1909. That Canadian policy made Canada responsible for the construction, maintenance and administration of Canadian Militia. Both alike are for the defence of Canadian interests. Both are, under authority, for the defence of the Empire.

The Globe claimes that this is a "manly" policy, and the only one to ensure a true national growth within the Empire. It scouts the idea of a centralized fleet, and hints at "separation" if compulsion is brought to bear upon Canada. "A Canadian fleet on the North Pacific, maintained and manned by Canadians, is as truly Imperial as any Dreadnoughts "contributed" to the British Navy in the English Channel or the North Sea."

That is certainly a great Imperialistic policy and one which ought to put Germany in the shade. If the Globe had been content with this statement of its case the German Emperor himself might have turned green with envy.

> "The horrid night-mare of the war policy, the hideous and irreparable waste, the growing sense of the intolerable burden of armed peace."
>
> "With no war debt, no war page, no war mania ,Canada may show the nations a more excellent way."

What is this "more excellent way" which the Globe recommends Canada to show the nations? If the reader will look over the above quotations again or read the Globe's article, all but the last paragraph, he will see.

The Globe proposes to build a Canadian Navy (call it a fleet if you like) because that is the proper thing for a grown-up nation like Canada to do. No more knickerbockers cut down from father's old pants; but a brand-new rig-out made to measure of Canadian cloth, by Canadian tailors, fit for a full-grown autonomized Canadian biped.

We do not accuse the Globe of confusing the issue in this article; it is very frank and open. It proclaims Canada a free nation and proposes the building of a navy to prove it; which means an additional competitor in the "armed peace" and the "horrid night-mare" of "war nations," which is such an abomination.

Is it necessary for us to point out to the Globe that its policy as outlined in its reply to Mr. Burnham is a policy of imitation of the war nations whose extravagence it rightly condemns!

If Canada as a whole wants a navy then Canada must have one, but for our part we think there are navies sufficient already, and if it is naval defence we are after and not jingoism, we have the finest navy that ever ploughed the seas at our command. By the concentration, or, if you will, centralization, in the British Navy for the defence of Canadian world-wide interests Canada will do more to curb the hideous waste in Europe and show them a "more excellent way."

SOME HEALTHY NOVELS

The Review has received two comprehensive catalogues of new books just published, or to be published soon, by Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton. This English firm has a good foot hold in Canada, and from their offices in Toronto, they turn out some good Canadian literature. There is perhaps no other publishing house that covers such a wide range of reading and keeps up a high standard as Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton. Sir Robertson Nicol has been the guiding spirit of the firm for many years and what that omnivorous reader passes can be relied upon as wholesome.

Among the novels are "The Poison Belt" that strange and fascinating story of Professor Challenger. A. E. W. Mason has a new book, "The Witness for the Defence"; E.F. Benson has written a sequel to the "Dodo," "Dodo the Second." George A Birmingham is a writer of humorous novels and he has written another, "General John Regan." There are also a number of stories of special interest to Canadians. Those who are interested in clean, healthy and invigorating reading should see this catalogue.

LE TREMBLEMENT DE TERRE

For those who believe in signs the earthquake, or le tremblement de terre, in the neighborhood of the new Panama Canal, will be regarded as a warning to the States, that the earth does not quite belong to them because they happened to throw up a few spade-fulls of it, and let the Atlantic and Pacific shake hands—so to speak.

LATEST NEWS PARAGRAPHED

The cadets at present attending the Royal Naval College of Canada in Halifax, will be taken south this winter for sea training at Bermuda.

Forty sailors and passengers on board the Finnish steamer Westkusten were drowned when the vessel struck a reef near Vasa, in the Gulf of Bothnia.

The mangled remains of Samuel Peoples of Belleville, aged 31, unmarried, were yesterday morning at an early hour found beside a railway track in that city.

Two million dollars will be expended by the Alberta Government in telephone extension work next year, according to the statement made in the House by the Premier.

Striking copper miners in the Calumet, Mich., district attacked deputy sheriffs yesterday while workmen were going to the mines. Ed. Beaudoin, a deputy, was seriously stabbed.

The contract has been let for the construction of a Government experimental cold storage plant at Grimsby. The plant will cost $25,000 and will have a capacity of 50,000 cubic feet.

The French Minister to Mexico was instructed yesterday to protest energetically against the augmentation of fifty per cent. in the duties on foreign products imposed by the Mexican Government.

Premier Borden proceeded to St. Malo, Que., yesterday, where he laid the corner-stone of the new Transcontinental Railway workshops and later he laid the corner-stone of the River St. Charles' locks.

J. P. Healey, formerly general merchant of Rossport, Ont., and lately residing in Port Arthur, where he was heavily interested in real estate, jumped in front of a C.P.R. express yesterday and was ground to pieces.

WHAT DOES CANADA DESERVE ?

J. H. Burnham M.P. and the Globe

To the Editor of The Globe: Will you allow me to ask you a question? The Globe is usually strong enough and fair enough to discuss a question with candor. In your editorial of Friday you say in an article on the navy that the Liberal policy means that the Canadian navy shall be owned and controlled by the Parliament of Canada and ready at all times of peril to take part in the Empire's affairs. The difference between the Laurier policy and the Borden policy, in Parliament and out, has been and is, I am quite sure, simply the difference between a policy that pledges itself now beforehand to take part in the defence of the Empire and a policy which says we will not pledge ourselves beforehand and therefore may or may not take part in the defence of the Empire. Manifestly at those times when Canada is out of it, when she is not taking part in the defence of the Empire, she is no longer a part of the Empire. It is not only foolish but cowardly to pretend that we are part of an Empire when it suits us and not part of it when it does not suit us. I am a Canadian of the Canadians, but I would renounce without compunction my allegiance to a country or party which has so low a sense of pride as to take advantage of Great Britain and the other dominions in times of our need whilst discretely refraining from pledging ourselves to do the decent thing at other times. This is too materialistic. This is too much like the artful dodger.

Whether the policy adopted is that of Mr. Borden's or Sir Wilfrid Laurier's, let it be, at least, a policy that has got some manliness and pluck about it. In your news column to-day we see that Britain's ally, France, is to undertake the defence of the Mediterranean. Where, may I ask, is Canada? She has kicked out, through her Senate, the only policy that meant anything, leaving us to preach peace without honor to all the other nations of the world, which, preparing for eventualities, will be ready to give us some day what we deserve if we don't mend our ways. Why does The Globe defend this non-commital policy? Why does it not take the manly stand stand it is accustomed to take in many other but less important matters? Are we to reject all history as a horrid nightmare—something that has not taken place? Are we to assume in the face of the most relentless facts that the lion and the lamb are ready to lay down together? Is it not better to keep our strength up to the proper standard, since I have yet to learn that either a man or a nation to be peaceful must be a physical degenerate?

J. H. BURNHAM,

Peterboro.

THE MARKET

Latest Quotation in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—After undergoing considerable depression today, wheat rallied when increased receipts at Minneapolis and Duluth were explained as due to a temporary cause, the clearing out of many railway sidetracks. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ARE WE BARBARIANS ?

To the Editor of The Review.

Sir— Yong paper, which seems to be pretty widely quoted by Canadian journals just now, has the following reference to it in this week's Catholic Register:

The Peterborough Review says: "Or own experience of boys, and of men, is that most of them are naturally barbarians, and it is only discipline of some kind that has kept them from periodically slaying and eating each other." This is a rather strange way to boost the home town. We did not know Peterborough had such lawless citizens. We do not believe it has. It is the J. H. B. type he has in view.

"CITIZEN."

The Catholic Register is forgetting its orthodoxy. Does not the Church teach that man is by nature utterly depraved and most "desperately wicked?" There is no church which knows the value of discipline like the Catholic Church, and none that teaches so definitely the doctrine of original sin.

RENTING ROOMS

The total amount of rent money paid for furnished rooms in this city each week is enormous! Nobody knows how much. It goes to thrifty people, who like to lessen their own rent or living expense by sub-letting one or more spare rooms to an agreeable person. If YOU have a desirable extra room you can become a receiver of rent by ordering a "Furnished Room to Let" ad. in the Review. The cost is nominal—one cent a word for first insertion and half a cent a word for subsequent insertions, run consecutively.

Snatched From The Burning

An Old Time Romance

By F. A. MITCHEL

Carrie, my niece, has asked me to put the story of my life in writing. She says that it may save many a girl who is disposed to turn aside warnings of those who are older than she from yielding to a love which they can see is not for her good and may be for her ruin.

It is an old fashioned story, for it occurred in an old fashioned time and in an old fashioned country. The state where I was born—Georgia—was then a slave state, and conditions were adapted to that institution. There were three distinct classes—the planters, the poor whites and the negroes. My parents sprang from the poor white class, but my father was a very industrious man for one living in an enervating climate and accumulated enough means to buy a small plantation and a few negroes. Consequently I grew up between two classes. We were above the poor whites, but were not received by the planters.

It was said that at seventeen I was a beauty. Alas, no one would think it to see me now, a shriveled old woman with thin snow white hair. They did not tell me so, and I was unconscious of my good looks. Social life in those days was very different from what it is now. I suppose human nature is always the same, but it seems to me now that good persons—I refer to the higher classes—were better than now and the bad were worse. This was especially so with our young men. Many of them—most of them, I should say—were imbued with noble sentiments. With them to be a gentleman was to be honorable. But there were bad ones, who were especially unscrupulous in their dealings with women—men who regarded it the part of a gentleman to make a conquest even to the ruin of the object of his attentions. The atmosphere of that period has completely passed away, the good and the bad having been fused between the two. There are now few, if any, young men with the noble impulses of the typical gentleman of that day, nor are there any such evil characters as were portrayed by the novelists of that period.

It fell to my lot to be caught between two men who were representatives of these two classes. They were both gentlemen, the one of a kindly nature, who would consider that a mean or dishonorable act would not only disgrace him, but his family even back to generations long dead; the other without any conscience whatever.

When I was fifteen years old my father one day sent me with a note to Colonel Carroll, one of the wealthiest and most respected planters of our region. On the veranda sat a youth of about twenty at a table with books before him. He was Courtney Carroll, a recent graduate of the University of Virginia. As I ascended the steps he looked up at me and I saw admiration in his eyes. He rose and advanced to meet me, and I handed him the note. He called a negro, told him to take it to his father, and selecting a comfortable chair handed it to me. He refrained from his books while I waited, seeming to consider it incumbent upon him to entertain me while I waited for an answer to the note. Colonel Carroll brought it out to me himself and apologized for not sending one of his negroes with it, courteously thanking me for consenting to be its bearer.

Naturally I, a girl still in short dresses, was much impressed with so much consideration from such high grade persons. How remarkable that one whose father had but recently emerged from the poor white class should be an object of attention from those who owned a thousand slaves.

When I was seventeen years old I met another of the aristocrats of that day, who turned out to be the reverse of a Carroll. I was leaning on the fence of my father's plantation one day when a gay party of hunters came galloping by. They disappeared down the road, and presently a young man, also in the scarlet coat of a huntsman, came along and, reining up before me, asked me if I had seen the others. I told him they had just passed and if he rode on he would soon overtake them. But it was evident from the way his eyes were fixed on me that he was disposed to turn from the game he was pursuing to a different kind. I remember that my eyes dropped before his gaze and I felt a warmth in my cheeks.

This young man was Harry Du Bois, who had by the death of his father just come into possession of a large plantation. He asked me a number of questions, evidently for excuses to talk with me instead of riding on, and presently, on pretense of tightening his saddle girth, he dismounted and stood near me on the other side of the fence chatting glibly and paying me compliments. This was the first time any one had told me that I was beautiful, and it gave me a thrill I shall never forget. It was the second time I had noticed admiration in a young gentleman's eyes, but young Carroll had not paid me a single compliment.

Since my visit to the Carroll plantation Courtney had dominated my thoughts, but now he was superseded by Harry Du Bois. The former seemed cold beside the latter. Besides, Carroll did not seek me, while Du Bois rode by our little plantation frequently and, if I was within hearing, would always stop to chat. These meetings were at once noticed by my dear parents, and I remember with pain their troubled looks whenever I had been talking with Du Bois. Then mother spoke to me about the matter, telling me that when a gentleman became devoted to a girl beneath him in station only trouble would come of it. But I turned a deaf ear to what she said, so infatuated was I with the man who was charming me as a snake will charm a bird.

I can only refer without particularizing to the courtship. I have wondered since that at so tender an age I should have resisted one so persuasive. Perhaps this was due to the influence of my mother, who, if she could not induce me to break with my lover, at least convinced me that if he was sincere he would ask me to be his wife. So at last he did, but said that his mother, who was living, would not consent to the alliance. She was very feeble and could last but a short time. So Harry persuaded me to marry him clandestinely.

When I remember that I was to be made the victim of a mock marriage I realize how far I am now removed from that age. Such weddings were then a common method of victimizing innocent girls. Now they are unheard of. The little church where I met Du Bois is still standing, though the persons who worship in it are much changed. The ceremony was to take place at night, for I was pledged to keep it a secret from my parents. I remember that I passed through a severe mental struggle before I could bring myself to deceive them, but I tried to think of how proud they would be when I was acknowledged as the wife of a wealthy and aristocratic planter. Yet in my heart I knew that I did not confide in them, for they would surely prevent the marriage if they knew it was to take place.

It was near midnight when I got out of my window on to the veranda and descended by the limb of a magnolia tree that overhung it. I can see now in the moonlight the manor house, the negroes' white cabins flanking it, the double row of moss covered trees leading to the gate. I had scarcely reached it when Harry clasped me in his arms. My legs seemed about to give way beneath me, and he carried me to a two wheeled cart, placed me in it and drove me to the church. It was dark, the reflected light of the moon only shining from a pane of glass.

Some one opened a side door and I was led in, the moonlight streaming through gothic windows, to the chancel. There stood a clergyman in his vestments. A lamp such as is used to throw a light on a sermon alone was burning low. He turned it up, its light falling on a prayer book. Then he began to read the marriage service. He seemed to be unfamiliar with it and constantly stumbled. But so far as I was able to take cognizance of this I attributed it to haste. He came to the part where an opportunity is given to enter a protest against the marriage when a voice from behind said:

"Don't make a noise, gentlemen. I got word of your scheme this afternoon. You talked too loud at the St Leger tavern. On the young lady's account this affair must be kept quiet. Du Bois, you are a villain of the deepest dye. As for you, Markham, you are beneath contempt."

These words sounded in my ears as if they came from a distance. Others were spoken, but I don't remember them. Then the same voice spoke to me, the light fell for a moment on the speaker's features, and I saw Courtney Carroll.

"Will you permit me to get you home? I will try to do so without your return being known."

I knew now that I had been tricked and that I had been saved. I put my trembling hand on Carroll's arm and left the church with him. When I got home I was too weak to ascend to my room as I had come down from it, and Carroll climbed the magnolia, went into my room, stepped downstairs and opened the door for me. I reached my chamber without arousing any one.

The next morning I deferred going downstairs till all had breakfasted. When I entered the dining room, pale and trembling, Susan, the servant, said to me:

"Laws a-massy, Missy Alice, hab yo hearn de awful news?"

"No. For heaven's sake, what is it?"

"Dis mawnin' about sun up Marse Courtney Carroll and Marse Harry Du Bois fit a duel, and Marse Carroll done got pretty nigh killed."

How I bore this second blow I can not conceive. It took Susan but a moment to hurl the shaft, but the pain I suffered is with me today, an old woman.

Courtney Carroll lingered for several days, then died. Shortly before his death he sent for me to come to him. I was carried there in a benumbed state of feeling and received by his father. I can see to this day on his face the look of loving sympathy and distress at his approaching loss. He led, or rather supported, me to his son's chamber and left me there, all others having gone out at my arrival.

"Pardon my interference in your affair," he said. "Had I not known you were to be made a victim I would have left you to do as you liked. I have sent for you not only to apologize for my interference, but to confess to you that ever since your coming here two years ago I have been battling with a desire to become a suitor for your hand. Why I was deterred from doing so need not be mentioned. I was about to yield when I learned that Du Bois had stepped in before me. That is all. I preferred that you should know that I had more than an ordinary reason for becoming your champion."

When a slice or two of bread is left from a meal, do not put into the bread box to be forgotten, but cover over in a dish and use for toast at the next meal.

One half of the average man's life consists of owing money he can't pay and the other half in having money owed to him that he can't collect.

For the Children

An Enigma.

The players should be provided with paper and pencil. Then the leader chooses a long word, which he does not tell the others. Suppose, for example, he chooses ichthyosaurus. He numbers on his own paper each letter of the word. I is No. 1, c is No. 2, h is No. 3, and so on through the word. Then the leader says to the players: "I am a word of thirteen letters. My 2-3-9-1-11 is something to sit on," and the players write the numbers down and try to think of a word of five letters that means a seat. Then the leader says, "My 4-5-6 is the biblical form of 'your.'" And the players try to guess what that word is. The leader goes on to say, "My 8-7 is the correlative of 'as.'" And the players immediately put s and o in their proper places in the larger word. The leader then describes 12-13 as a plural personal pronoun and says 10-13 is the same as 12-13. Then he has given meanings to words that comprise all the letters in ichthyosaurus, and he says, "My whole is a prehistoric reptile." The one who first finds out that the word is ichthyosaurus is the winner and receives the prize. It is better for the leader to have the word all arranged beforehand so as not to cause delay. For younger children easier words should be chosen.

About Birds.

A chicken or a partridge a day after it is hatched will run about and pick up seeds, separating them from the gravel among which they lie, while the young of the tree birds remain often a month in the nest, receiving without discrimination what is given by their parents.

A curlew two days old goes forth with all his faculties awake and almost ready to make his way in the world, while the barn owl which has reached the comparative old age of a month, though it may possess something of the serious and knowing aspect of the bird of wisdom, seems still sadly puzzled to know which foot he ought to put first.

Riddles.

When does a boatman resemble an Indian? When he feathers his scull.

When do we first read of a walking stick? When Eve presented Adam with a little Cain (cane).

Greater than Panama's Bridge of Water

The Panama Canal is the logical outcome of the trend of modern commerce—it is monumental evidence of the present-day need for shortening distance—for lessening time and for reducing cost of distribution between maker and consumer.

In point of distance, the Panama will bring the Pacific nearer to the Atlantic by 1,000 miles. In point of time, the sea voyage between Halifax and Vancouver will be shortened by 24 days. In point of cost, the canal will very materially lessen the expense of carrying freight between these places. But there is a stronger factor than even the Panama in shortening distances, lessening cost and saving time between manufacturer and user.

It is Advertising—

It is the quickest—
It is the most direct—
And it is the cheapest—means of communication between the maker and user of goods.

For instance, Advertising enabled a manufacturer in Nova Scotia to carry a demand for his product from his factory to the Pacific Coast

—in a few days
—at an insignificant cost compared with slower and more laborious selling methods.

In one week, thousands learned of his product where it would have taken years for the news to get around without advertising.

To the Manufacturers of Canada:

You will be alert to take advantage of the Panama route for the physical transportation of your goods. Have you considered how quickly, how far, and at what small cost the Advertising Trade Route will carry demand for those goods?

If you are doing a local business talk over your advertising problems with the Advertising Department of this newspaper.

If you are doing a provincial or national business it would be well for you to have the counsel and assistance of a good advertising agency. A list of these will be furnished, without cost or obligation, by the Secretary of Canadian Press Association, Room 503, Lumsden Building, Toronto.

CITY TEACHERS IN CONVENTION

The Value of Flays, Songs anb Story Telling

To-day's session of the City and County Teachers' Convention opened at 9 o'clock with Mr. W. H. Walkey presiding. Mr Walkey briefly reviewed the great Educational work during the past school year. After Mr Walkey's short address, Mrs. H. B. Miller, of the Agricultural College, Guelph, delivered an interesting and very instructive address on "Plays, Songs and Story Telling," which proved to be of value to the many teachers, especially the rural teachers. "Games will teach team play, and consideration for others," said the speaker. In connection with the subject of songs, Mrs. Miller claimed that we do not sing as we ought and gave three instances where the students of the school could not sing a song. There is no more powerful factor in Education than the value of stories and the speaker gave several illustrations which caused considerable enthusiasm among the delegates.

After an intermission of ten minutes, Mr. D. White, of the Normal School of Toronto, commenced the discussion on "Modern Methods in Geography." Mr White gave some outlines of the different lines. The session then adjourned for dinner, after which the discussion was continued at this afternoon's session.

Mr R. G. Lawler, B.A., Principal of the Norwood High School was the speaker at this afternoon's session.

The election of the city officers will take place to-morrow.

PRACTICAL EDUCATION.

Dr. Morrison ably filled the chair at the evening session in the Collegiate Institute, at which the audience were given a rare musical treat in listening to a piano solo by Miss Jean Hill, and vocal solos by Mr. Park. Another treat followed in the address of Dr. Goggin on "Practical Education." Dr. Goggin shows great personality and careful study in his lectures, which he so ably delivers.

In the course of so able an address he said the school had to do for the children whatever home and everything else failed to do. He mentioned the poor manners of the majority of the growing boys and girls. Can the teachers better them?

Dr. Morrison, Chairman of the Board of Education, introduced the speaker, and also presided in the chair. Dr. Goggin dealt thoroughly with the numerous modes of practical education, and gave several detailed reports on the work being carried on in foreign countries.

"There is a forward movement in this city that bodes well for the Educational Department," said the speaker in opening his lecture. "What do we mean by practical education? Some believe it to be a matter of making a living, others living a worthy life. Education is the natural resource of our country. The speaker gave a detailed outline of the educational work carried on in Germany.

Dr. Goggin also spoke of the wonderful success that Dr. Merchant was meeting with in connection with the Industrial schools, and also of the great success at Ottawa, where in the neighborhood of 250 teachers engaged in the work.

At the conclusion of Dr. Goggin's lecture Inspector Lees moved a vote of thanks to the speaker, which was seconded by Mr. Vincent Eastwood chairman of the Industrial Committee

A VACATION AT CENTRAL

For David Henry Should He Appear Again

David Henry pleaded not guilty on his re-arrangement before Magistrate Dumble this morning on a charge of vagrancy. He was told to get out of the city at once, and that if he ever appeared in the local court again there was a big chance of his spending a vacation in the Central Prison.

One of Henry's pet tricks, the police say, was to buy a cheap ring, and to sell it for several times its value. On one occasion, according to the Police Department, he sold 15 cent ring for the sum of $2.

"There is no use sending me to jail, for it will only make my wife suffer," remarked the prisoner, whereupon the Magistrate told him what to do.

MUST REPORT.

Norman Hearl, the local youth charged with vagrancy, was let go on suspended sentence, with orders to report once a month to the Chief.

IS COMMITTED

Garnet Innis to be Tried by County Judge

After much deliberation on the part of Magistrate Dumble, Crown Attorney Wood and the prisoner's counsel, G. N. Gordon, Garnet Innis was committed for trial, this morning at Police Court.

His Worship was for reserving judgment as he had not yet read the evidence of the last session of Police Court, but Crown Attorney Wood contended that the Magistrate had intimated at the last session that the prisoner would be committed for trial at this session and that the case had been enlarged until to-day merely for the convenience of the defendant.

Mr. Gordon, counsel for the defendant, was satisfied to have his client committed for trial.

"There was no evidence of the drugs being used for that purpose," remarked His Worship.

"The directions show what they were fo.," remarked the Crown Attorney.

The matter was ended by His Worship reading the evidence and as a result, Innis was committed for trial.

JEALOUSY MOTIVE OF MRS. EATON, SAYS PROSECUTOR.

MRS. JENNIE MAY EATON

The State's case against Mrs. Jennie May Eaton, on trial for the murder by poison of her husband, Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton, was outlined at Plymouth, Mass., by Assistant District Attorney Fred G. Katzman, who said that jealousy furnished the motive for the crime. He admitted that the case against the prisoner was mostly circumstantial, but declared that the government had evidence strong enough to show that Admiral Eaton received at his wife's hand the poison that caused his death. He said that analysis revealed fifteen grains in the stomach, and two were enough to kill.

"Never Mind."

One of the sweetest missions of womanhood is to say, some time or several times, to some big, strong man bowed under discouragement, "Dear, never mind," says Edna Worley.

There doesn't seem to be much sense in those two words, "never mind," but, oh, how soothing they can be and how much they mean when the woman says them to the man!

They take the sting out of defeat. They calm wrath and hate. They blunt disaster. They lighten the weight of disappointment.

The man may be strong. He may be a power in the world. And he may be one of those who can never quite catch up with the ones who are forging ahead. But the man with power and the man who is behind the procession both come to the time when the only thing that helps is one woman's "Never mind."

Perhaps mother says it. You remember, don't you, when you took your childish woes to mother and she listened and sympathized, and then—"Never mind, dearie. It'll soon be over."

And when you went out into the world—the hurts that came to you; you took them to mother. And again mother listened and sympathized and perhaps advised. Then, "Never mind. You'll overcome it all."

Didn't it help a heap? You went forth again in new armor.

And a man never knows what a wife can mean to him until that time comes when his troubles seem too great to bear; when he and his wife have that inevitable talk over affairs and when, whether it's his own fault or the fault of others, the one woman looks into his eyes and gently pats his cheek and, "Dear, never mind.—We'll manage somehow."

It's only love that can say it. Perhaps that's why the commonplace little words are so healing. And it's an empty life indeed where there's nobody to say to you some time, when the kicks of the world are hardest:

"Dear, never mind."

"PUNCTUALLY THE POLITENESS OF PRINCESS"

Some one has called punctuality "the politeness of princes." It also belongs to all who would pride themselves on an adherence to rules that have the consideration of others for their basis. That is the important thing—there must be a guiding star of unselfishness if your conduct is to be of the highest type.

At a formal dinner party at which a certain hour has been mentioned the guests should arrange to arrive ten or fifteen minutes beforehand, to remove wraps, be introduced to others and to have a short talk with the host and hostess. The dinner should be announced on the minute, and guests who are late should join the party at the table after being greeted by the hostess and extending an excuse that, of course, must be a very strong one. Usually lateness at any formal affair of this kind is inexcusable.

If an invitation be extended to you by a gentleman to take you to a dance or to the theater you should arrange to be ready when he arrives. He, of course, should plan his time to arrive conveniently early. He should certainly not be kept waiting very long while a woman sees how late she can be.

Punctuality in letter writing is also an important thing. When a letter is received asking you for information answer it immediately. When a question is asked, give a polite, punctual reply. It is a sign of consideration. Stay out of bed a few minutes later in order to do this or rise a little earlier in the morning. Do not let delinquency be one of your bad habits.

It is never too late to begin to form a good habit. Is punctuality one of your habits? If not, make it one.

Something Extra in Bath Towels

We have a number of Towels in the Wash Goods Section that were samples.

There are various kinds here, from the roughest of unbleached linen, that the athlete enjoys, to the soft Turkish Towel which would not injure a baby's tender skin.

And they are all excellent quality, while the sample prices, 11½c to 69c pair are all out of proportion to the value one receives. —Main Floor North

White Wool Blankets $2.89 Pair

Nothing could be better, in a blanket of medium weight, than these that we offer for Saturday, because they are woven of wool in close texture, are not finished with too much nap, and are in size 60 by 80 inches.

Moreover for the price, we assure you the value is excellent. Either pink or blue bordered, per pair.............. .. $2.89

Some Fine $3.50 and $4.00 Women's Boots Being Cleared at $2.49

Some very smart and serviceable boots are embraced in this clearance. There are "J. & K." patents, and a kid boot with Cravenette cloth top, also some well fitting, stylish street boots in the new lasts having the long narrow toe. Others there are, made upon the broader style, comprising in all a very select and ample choice in correct footwear. Particular emphasis should be placed on the fact that some of these lines were originally twice the sale price. Saturday $2.49

High Grade American and Canadian Boots $3.89 $4.50 to $5.00 Lines

Looking over the assortment one will be struck with the fine quality and finish of these boots. The little model in all Suede, is most neat and elegant, while the patent button with cloth top is certainly very comfortable, yet of smart appearance. There are a number of other different styles, each boot expressing good taste, and containing the leather and workmanship that usually demands a selling price of $4.50 to $5.00. Until the sale ends these are $3.89

Dongola Kid and Box Calf Bluchers $1.59

Here are two good lines that make very acceptable boots for the miss attending school. The Dongola Kid has a patent toe and is made with double extension sole and medium heel. 48 Sample Coats for Women

The very word "sample" is in itself sufficient evidence that these coats are the best of their kind, because a manufacturer sees to it that his samples are right.

In the whole 48 there is mostly only one of a kind; fashioned in warm, appropriate materials such as Boucles, Diagonals, Chinchillas, etc., while the cut leaves nothing to be desired as far as a stylish appearance is concerned.

In them is combined the smartly rounded corners and convertible collar, while by no means least in importance is the fact, that being samples, these Coats are to be obtained on Saturday for considerably less than ordinary prices.

Let us emphasize this advantage to all who need a Fall and Winter Coat, for there is a very fine choice, and values could hardly be beaten.

Dresses, Blouses and Suits

The Newest the Markets Have to Offer

It seems that every available space in the Ready-to-wear Section is taken up with some new article of women's attire.

It may be the Fall Dresses that catch one's first glance, or perhaps the natty new Suits, with their smart and beautiful cloths, compel one's attention.

Or likely enough it's the blouses. For in these pretty garments there certainly was never shown such diversity of design, material or color. One would think it hardly possible, not to find the particular one that meets one's own need and fancy.

And whether it be Blouse, Dress or Suit that attracts one's attention, one may rest assured, that upon inquiring into the price, such value in material, workmanship and design could not be bought cheaper.

Velvet Rugs of Rich Durable Pile $18.98

It is small wonder that these handsome Rugs have become the most popular floor covering at the present time, for no other Rug posses the soft rich pile and splendid wearing qualities, at anything like the price of the Velvets.

And this particular price $18.98 pertains to the size 9 feet by 10 feet 6 inches and is a few dollars less than the regular figure.

There is a beautiful and varied choice in color and design. Rugs of this description being suitable for any room in the house. Saturday...... $18.98

Pretty Hats That are not Expensive

The extensive array of handsome Autumn and Winter headgear in our Millinery showrooms proves the statement in the headline that a smart hat is not necessarily expensive, because these are marked at figures around $5.00. And elegance and good taste is quietly expressed in their design, some being of felt, others of plush, velour or velvet with appropriate trimmings. We had them made in our own workrooms, and say with confidence, that the popular price of $5.00 for a hat, could not be more wisely spent than upon one of these models, made ready for immediate wear.

TEACHERS IN CONVENTION; NEW OFFICERS ELECTED

Various Subjects and General Business Before the County Teachers

Judging from the large attendance, the interest taken by those present and the excellent addresses and discussions at the City and County Teachers' convention, which opened in the Normal School Thursday morning, the convention should be the most successful and helpful yet held. Following some routine business a Committee on Resolutions were appointed, consisting of Inspectors Broderick and Lees, Mr. Andrews, Miss Waters, Miss Duff and Miss MacNaughton.

The President, Mr. Trenouth, of Norwood, was in the chair and gave an inspiring address on "Education." An interesting discussion on "The Strathcona Trust," led by Mr. Andrews, of Havelock, resulted in a committee being appointed to look after the matter. Mr. Andrews was made convener of this committee.

The President then led in a discussion on "The Teachers' Alliance," and Mr. Lees made some valuable explanations on the Manuals and Bulletins.

The report of the O.E.A., Toronto, given by Miss Hamilton, and Miss McCullough could not have been better. It made the teachers feel as though they were listening to the original.

Mrs. H. B. Miller, of Guelph, gave an enthusiastic, practical and helpful address on "School Gardening," etc. Mrs. Miller knows how to hold the attention of her audience and impart useful knowledge at the same time.

Inspector Broderick gave the teachers some original ideas in composition and gave his hearers food for thought and study, which should bear testing. Every teacher should have heard Mr. Broderick.

The officers for the following year were appointed by the committee as follows:

President—Mr. Broderick.

Vice-President—Mr. H. Andrews.

Sec.-Treas.—Miss Waters.

Executive Committee—Miss Duff, Miss Weir, Mr. Trenouth.

Delegates to O.E.A.—Miss Edgar, Miss R. Carter.

Delegates to Agriculture Conference—Miss Hubble, Miss Fusee.

Auditors—Miss MacLaughlin, Miss MacNaughton.

After a profitable day's work the meeting adjourned.

SIX MONTHS IN CENTRAL PRISON FOR O'CONNOR

Pleaded Guilty to Stealing Horse — Says He Was Connected With The Pink Lady Company—

William O'Connor, charged with the theft of a horse and rig from a Port Hope livery, was sentenced to six months in the Central Prison at this morning's session of police court. O'Connor pleaded guilty to the charge, but was remanded for a week in order that the Crown could enquire into his past history, and as result it was found that the prisoner had served a fifteen months' term at North Bay for breaking custody. The prisoner asked for leniency as he claimed that he was under the influence of liquor at the time the theft was committed.

O'Connor in conversation with a Review reporter this morning, said, that he was an old lacrosse player and had often played against Constable Meagher of the local police force. He had also played hockey against the local O. H. A. teams, claimed that he was connected with The Pink Lady Opera Company which played here a few weeks ago. His wife, who was also with the show, had been residing in Toronto, but at the present was in the city in connection with his trial. Asked how he came to get mixed up in the horse theft case, he claimed that the other man that was with him had stolen the horse and that both were rather under the influence of liquor at the time. On the way from Port Hope to Peterborough the other man had in some manner fallen out of the rig.

The prisoner takes his sentence easy, as he says he pleaded guilty so as to protect the other man.

BIG INCREASE IN MINERALS OF CANADA

The statistics of Canada's mineral productions for 1912, recently announced, prove highly satisfactory. These figures have been published since 1886 and it is worth while comparing the two years.

In 1886 the production was a little in excess of ten millions of dollars, or $2.23 per head of population. In 1912 the productiveness had increased to $135,048,296, or nearly $19 per head.

While the results have not shown an increase each year, the general advance has been steady and there is every reason for believing that much larger figures will record Canada's mineral output in future years. All authorities agree that so far only the surface has been scratched.

FLAG OF DISTRESS

How a Defiant Daring Young Man Ended Long Standing Deadly Feud.

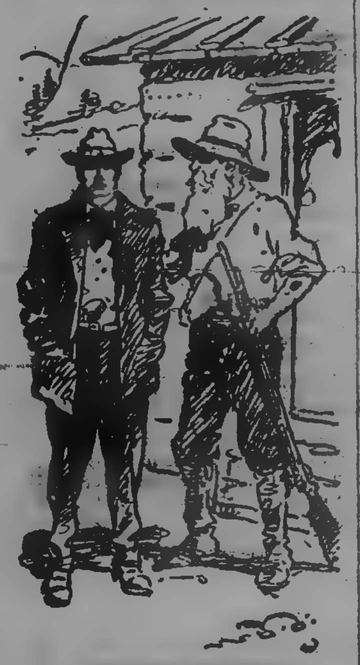
By GERTRUDE MARY SHERIDAN.

"It's in the blood, I tell you, Floyd Darrell. Get rid of it, fly from it, avoid it as you would a pestilence, or it will destroy you! I bid you go, and at once—anywhere, away from here, where you will meet your fate if you remain."

It was a solemn, eventful moment in the life of young Darrell, returned after many years to the wild, barren district where he had been born. He stood just outside a rude log structure that had once been a storage shed. Near by were the cindered ruins of an old-time mansion; all about the little dip in the landscape reared the grim, rugged Tennessee mountains.

A grand old man with whitened hair, once a powerful giant, and still having a mighty frame and firmness and decision apparent in every lineament of his bronzed, scarred face, had addressed him—Ogden Blair, mountaineer, judge and political leader, the sole survivor of the great Blair-Logan feud that had entered many a bloody page in the record of Dawson county.

"Come here," he said, and he forcibly dragged his visitor by the arm to the open doorway, and pointed an impressive finger at its rude interior. "You see that table, set for six? Always so, and the four vacant chairs we join, my niece, Eugenia, and I, at each meal, remind us of the stalwart noble sons who fought and died sustaining the Blair family honor. I am the last of my line. A month ago Hank Logan and his raiders burned down the house. Later he sent word that if I did not move he would end the vendetta with me. Move!" cried the old man till his voice echoed ringingly to the nearest towering hill. "Why, my sons would arise from their graves to curse me. If I gave up the fight of fifty years, in which never a Blair turned his back to a foe. Here I live and die. But you—lad, I knew and loved your father. He was a 'gun man,' and his father before him. It was born in them. Now, why have you come back, to be tempted with the same wild fever of strife that went singing through the veins of the Darrells for well nigh a century?"



"You Must Not Stay!"

"Why?" cried young Darrell, and indeed his glowing eye told of intrepid daring and courage. "For the sake of Eugenia, whom I love, and next, to share the perils of the man who was my father's best friend—yourself. They have threatened you? Then I face the danger, too. It is the man quickest with his weapon! Then I stay at your side."

"You must not stay!" remonstrated the old man in a troubled tone. "Eugenia, too, must go."

"But she says she will not leave you, and I would not leave her. The old family estate is here. Do you deem me a craven, to abandon it at the will of a man like Hank Logan!"

"Promise to think it over," pleaded the old man. "Go back to the town. Eugenia, tell him so, too," added Blair, as a girl with a wild rose face and a form like a rare mountain sylph came around the corner of the house, and blushed and then smiled as she went up to her loyal lover.

"I shall seek Hank Logan in the morning," pronounced Darrell firmly. "If I can buy my happiness and your safety from him with money, he is welcome to the paltry dollars. If not—then it must be the best and swiftest man,"—and the hand of the speaker stole mechanically to the belt containing the familiar weapon of the district.

The girl listened with downcast eyes, but silent. She knew only a harsh, rugged duty in her filial devotion to her sole relative in the world. She would have been false to every family tradition, if she interfered in a decision tinged with the usage and ethics of that rash, reckless mountaineer community. She simply lifted her lips to meet those of her lover as he turned away, and stood waving her handkerchief at him until distance and tears blurred the landscape and a sight of the man she might never see in life again.

On the twig of a straggling veteran oak tree a bird had built its nest. As the morn broke, its twitterings gave place to soft, plaintive cooings, and then, as the sun arose it burst into all the full melody of rich, harmonious sound. A solitary figure toiled up the steep side of a wild mountain, passed the tree, and crossed the dividing line of the bad lands. It was Floyd Darrell.

What was behind him caused a wistful, longing sadness he tried to shake off. What faced him he did not know, but the first warning menace greeted him as he leaped a narrow ravine and a shot told that the jealous do minions of Hank Logan were under vigilant patrol. A stranger had no business there. Any district man might avoid being mistaken for a revenue officer in disguise if he showed his colors—a flag of truce. A somber foreboding prevented this with Darrell. He felt that money would not avail. Then it was face to face, and the quickest man would win.

Twice during that morning a bullet sped dangerously close to the head of the persistent adventurer. Darrell kept on his way until afternoon, when he saw coming down a narrow gorge path some horsemen. Swinging himself down a network of vines to a ledge, he crouched there.

The horsemen dashed by. About to attempt to regain the cliff surface, Darrell started as he heard a moan beyond a light screen of greenery. Upon a narrow shelf of stone lay a little child. It had apparently stumbled over the edge of the cliff. Its face was bruised and bleeding, and, half-conscious, it was moaning. In a second it would have rolled into fathomless depths below. Just in time Darrell reached the little girl.

He climbed back to the higher ground, carrying the dazed child in his arms tenderly. Two hours later a body of horsemen came dashing towards him. He held the child aloft as a signal of distress, a living flag of truce.

The moment the leader of the band neared him, Darrell knew that it was bad Hank Logan. With a glad cry he seized the child. He made Darrell tell how he had come across the little one. He grasped the hand of the rescuer in a fervent grip.

"And who are you?" he asked.

"I am Floyd Darrell," came the quiet reply. "I have come to see you about Ogden Blair," and Darrell told why. Lower and lower went the head of the listener. The daring, defiant face softened.

Hank Logan lifted his gun. Across its stock were four nicks.

"The count's done!" he said, and gave the deadly chronicle of doom for the Blairs a fling into the nearest gully. "You've won. Tell Ogden Blair I'll do the moving, and the feud is squared. Me and my men will be over in Kentuck before another week—all because you risked your life for my little girl."

MAKE AN IDOL OF "CULTURE"

Writer Claims That Man Is More Fastidious Than Woman—Have Proofs Come Under Your Observation?

Have you ever asked yourself the question? I have come to the conclusion that in many things they are, and more particularly about food and table appointments.

Perhaps this is because women are habituated to the seamy side of cookery, to the sight of uncooked articles.

Men only see the results of all these processes, some of them disagreeable enough, whereas even the most fastidious mistress sometimes, however reluctantly, comes upon the basement operators in the midst of a far from aesthetic task.

The gilded youth of today is a most terribly fastidious person. His chief cult is himself, and anything that jars upon his sensitive nerves and his "culture" seems a heinous offense.

I was made to think about these things the other day when a man speaking about a girl whose acquaintance he had lately made agreed that she was very pretty, very attractive, etc., "but," he added, "I don't like looking at her. Her hair is never tidy: pieces of it stream down at the back, and there is something about the back of her waist that is disorderly." I give you his own masculine expressions. Neatness appeals immensely to men. Soiled gloves, crushed handkerchiefs, untidy footgear, have done more to disillusion the masculine creature than the culprits who permit themselves these disorders can ever imagine.—Exchange.

Oil for Battleships.

The last American battleship that will burn coal has been built. The big ones now building have no coal bunkers and no arrangement for burning coal. They are oil burners.

"What is the advantage?" I asked a United States naval officer.

"There are many advantages in oil," he replied. "First, we can steam further with a given number of tons of oil than with the same number of tons of coal. We can also store the oil more advantageously, for it will fill corners in a ship where coal could not be placed.

"A very big advantage, however, is in the reduced number of men required to handle the boilers. One man with oil can take the place of four men shoveling coal. Usually the oil is sprayed into the furnace, but there are several methods of applying the oil."

Boy's Mistake.

P. F. Fogarty of the Northern Pacific railroad was talking in Portland about the $10,000,000 order for new equipment that he has just placed.

"The cause of this order, the largest of its kind on record," he said, "is prosperity. Real prosperity. Not the kind young Husk encountered.

"Young Cornelius Husk was about to try his fortune in New York.

"'Now, Corny,' his old grandmother said, 'don't desert the narrow path of righteousness when you get to that rich city where money is so plentiful that they say the streets are even paved with gold.'

"Husk promised his grandmother to behave himself, and in due course he reached New York. He got out at the station and started down Seventh avenue, when he saw, glittering in the gutter a bright ten-dollar gold piece.

"He picked up the coin joyfully, and was about to place it in his purse, when a blind beggar caught his eye. A wave of genuine sympathy surged through him and he handed the beggar his rich find.

"'Here, take it,' he said. 'I can see 'em, you can't.'"—New York Times.

Owed Recognition to Emperor.

Bell had little success at the Philadelphia exhibition, and his invention would have passed unnoticed, even, had it not been for Dom Pedro, the emperor of Brazil. For the story we are indebted to the Revue Scientifique. Dom Pedro was inspecting the exhibition, attended by his suite, when he came across Graham Bell, whom he remembered as a teacher in a school of deaf mutes. Dom Pedro came to his stand and asked him to "set his machine going."

A wire crossed the room from wall to wall. Dom Pedro stood at the receiver and Bell at the transmitter. No one understood exactly what was happening, when suddenly the emperor lifted his head dramatically and shouted, in absolute amazement: "He's talking." The scientists in Dom Pedro's suite rushed to verify this extraordinary announcement, and "the more they knew of electricity, the less they would believe their ears." The next day the newspapers were filled with the news, and the telephone became famous immediately.

There are many persons who have reputation for mannerliness and charm who would shock even their closest friends at 7 in the morning. They regularly "get up on the wrong side of the bed," and until breakfast and exercise have put them right they are too unmannerly and disagreeable to deserve anybody's friendship. This sort of unmannerliness is the result of habit, of laziness. It is simply too much trouble to be agreeable early in the morning, think these early morning crosspatches. And they sulk and fume to their heart's content, blaming their bad spirits on the morning air.

The morning, of course, ought to be the time of day when we all feel freshest and in the best possible humor. To be sure, some of us awaken so hungry for breakfast that we have little thought for anything else. Little children are sometimes uncomfortable until they have something to eat, and therefore they are cross. But as soon as we graduate from the little children class we should remember—or learn—that the effort to be courteous should take precedence of the effort to satisfy our appetites for toast and coffee.

The girl who thought she was in love until she thought of sitting opposite the object of her affections at three meals a day was the sort of girl who forgets about everyday courtesy. To her the idea that a man should be as agreeable to his wife during each meal of the day's three or the year's thousand odd was absurd. She knew that at home, in the privacy of her own family, she put the cloak of courtesy aside and "acted just as she felt." If she did not like the weather she grumbled about it.

If she wanted more clothes than her allowance would buy she said so. If the food did not come up to her standards or the service struck her as inadequate she complained about these things. She neglected to say "Thank you" to servants and family. When there were guests at her home or when she was a guest in some one else's home she was the model of mannerly deportment. Her honeyed smiles and soft words were famous. But she simply ignored the demands of every day, homely courtesy.

Children should be taught to be just as thoughtful for their brothers and sisters, their mothers and fathers and uncles and aunts and grandparents and their family's servants as they are for strangers. Sometimes, when much prodding and reminding fail to elicit a "Thank you" from a small child, the inference is strong that the small child is not in the habit of saying "Thank you" at home for the small everyday courtesies which its elders shower upon it. More than that, it seems likely that it seldom hears its elders use these two simple but meaning words.

For children are imitative to a surprising extent, so far as manners are concerned. The small son of a father who treats his wife with unfailing consideration is almost always courteous to his mother, and so the small daughter of a woman who is courteous to her husband is not the small daughter who says carelessly, "Oh, that's just father," when she hears her name called.

Women have a big opportunity for being courteous in their dress. A woman's family is really just as deserving of neatness and careful dressing on her part as is the public or her friends. She sometimes forgets this when she dons ragged or soiled finery at home because it is "just home" and saves her neat and orderly clothes to wear in the street and in the houses of her friends.

Last night the Employed Boys' class physical examinations were held, Drs. Hammond and Mann being the examiners, and the results were very gratifying indeed. The parents of the boys may feel assured that the Y.M.C.A. is doing everything in its power to look after the physical well-being of its members. It is the aim of the Association to cover the entire membership with physical examinations by competent physicians.

A series of "Health Talks" is also being arranged. These will be given on the gymnasium floor. Special announcement will be made regarding the date. The first of these series will be given by Dr. J. E. Middleton on "The Care of the Teeth," Monday, Nov. 3rd, at 8.15 p.m. The gallery will be reserved for those not in the gym. class.

SENIOR LEADERS

The Senior Leaders' Corps will meet at 6 p.m. Saturday for floor work. Supper will be served at 7 p.m. Every member is expected to be present.

$4500 FOR THE CLUB OWNERS

Canadian League Clubs Profit by Drafts

LONDON, Oct. 24 — President J. Fitzgerald, of the Canadian League, forwarded the draft check for Outfielder Neale, sent to Toronto by the London Baseball Club last week, but President Stevely was compelled to return it on account of it not being properly countersigned by Fitzgerald to the London Club, which Secretary Farrell, of the National board had made out to head off the Canadian League.

The drafts and sales to clubs higher up in this past season has brought $4,500 to the owners of Canadian League franchises in London, St. Thomas, Berlin and Peterboro. Of that amount London received $2000 for Dunlap and Neale, who went to Cleveland and Toledo, respectively; $1000 to Peterboro fro Brant and Hilliard, who went to Chatanooga and Toledo, respectively; $1000 to the Berlin Club for Bradshaw, who goes to Toronto, and McAvoy, who played with Philadelphia Atheltics, and upon his showing was drafted to Buffalo. St. Thomas gets $500 for Eddie Wright, who was drafted by the Detroit farm at Providence, R.I.

SPORT TALK

Fred Doherty, formerly of the Galt Pros., who played with Moncton in the Maritime League last winter, will be playing manager of the Halifax Crescents this season in that league.

Plot and Counterplot

A Story of the Russian Revolution.

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Peter Polizoff and Alexis Alexandrovich were students at the university at St. Petersburg, Russia. They were bosom friends and both members of a revolutionary circle; indeed, Alexandrovich was its president and the conductor of its secret movements in behalf of the revolution. Polizoff was two years younger than his friend and of a far less rugged nature. His confidence in Alexis was absolute, and his affection for him was supreme.

This was at a time when the revolution was brewing and when those instigating it were straining every nerve, taking every risk, to bring it about. On the other hand, the government was aware of what was going on, the police were hunting them down, and, when caught in their work or informed upon, they were hurried off to Siberia without even the semblance of a trial.

One night at a meeting of the circle to which the two friends belonged Alexandrovich addressed the members:

"We are like men in a frail boat passing down fierce rapids. At any moment the hand of the government may fall upon any one of us or all of us. We cannot even trust one another. I would not be surprised to see that door broken in by the police, they having been directed here by some one looking at me at this very moment. For there is one thing we cannot guard against, that is, emissaries of the government joining our circle under pretense of being revolutionists for the purpose of betraying us.

"There is another matter to which I desire to call your attention. It may be necessary for some one or more of us to be sacrificed to save the others. For the work of the circle may go on without a part, whereas if the whole is crushed, so far as this organization is concerned, its efforts will cease. Be prepared, then, for that which you will not understand. If any one of you is betrayed suspend judgment as to the guilt or innocence of the betrayer, for you cannot know, may never know, whether you are betrayed to serve the purposes of the government or the circle."

Alexandrovich spoke the words with evident feeling, for he had got wind of the fact that they had a government spy among their number. He had formed a counter plan by which to save the main body of the circle by betraying to the government two or three of its members, including the spy, it being necessary to betray real revolutionists in order to make good his assertion that the spy, though pretending to work for the government, was really working for the revolutionists.

The plotting and counterplotting lasted longer than was expected, and Alexandrovich's scheme was delayed. Most of the members who had heard his warning either forgot it in the constant dangers to which they were exposed or looked upon it as a remote possibility. He never referred to it again, considering once enough. His whole being was enlisted in the cause. He had an iron will and was able to suffer any evil himself or inflict any evil on another in the service of civil liberty.

Alexandrovich had a younger sister, Katia. The Polizoff and Alexandrovich families had been friends for years, and Peter Polizoff and Katia had grown up together. From playmates they had become lovers. Katia lived in terror for her lover and her brother, knowing that they were both revolutionists and liable to suffer what she considered worse than death—that is, being sent in chains to work in the mines in Siberia.

One day Katia ran breathlessly into the home of her lover and found him at his studies. She was as white as ashes.

"What is it?" exclaimed Peter, starting up.

She tried to speak, but failed. He clasped her in his arms and caressed her till she found her voice and said in broken sentences:

"Go away from here, for heaven's sake—for my sake! Go at once!"

"Why?"

"You have been betrayed!"

"By whom?"

"I cannot tell."

"I must know."

"True; if you remain in ignorance that you have been betrayed by a friend you are likely to fall into his hands."

"I? Betrayed by a friend?"

"Yes."

"What friend?"

Her head fell on his breast. She tried to speak the name, but could not. At last, barely audible, it came:

"My brother."

"Alexis?"

"Alexis."

"Katia, you can never make me believe that."

"Then you are lost."

"I would rather go to the mines, a slave, than lose my faith in my friend."

"I know that he has betrayed you."

"How?"

"A man is now with him whose appearance I did not like from the moment I saw him. Dreading always some trouble for Alexis, I feared the visitor intended no good. Alexis took him up to his room. There is a door between it and the adjoining chamber. I went into this apartment, lay on the floor and put my ear to the interval between the door and the lintel. I heard Alexis tell the man that you and several others were members of a revolutionary circle."

This information coming from his betrayer's sister and his own betrothed stunned Polizoff. Katia was now obliged to sustain him instead of being sustained by him. When he had regained something of his composure he asked:

"Do you know your brother did this?"

"I do. I heard his voice, which I know only too well."

"Was anything said about my arrest?"

"No, but the blow is liable to fall at any moment. Go at once. A minute's delay may be fatal."

"No; I will remain. There has been some mistake. I cannot believe Alexis is base. He is all that is noble."

"Will you go for my sake?"

He looked into her eyes and consented. He was holding her in a parting embrace when there was a knock at the door. Katia pushed her lover through an opening; he entered a rear garden, crawled through a fence and gained a street.

Katia remained where she was, taking up a book and pretending to read. A servant went to the door, opened it, and a police officer, attended by several assistants, stepped into the hall. He did not ask any questions, but, sending a man through to the garden in the rear to shut off escape in that direction, with the others proceeded to go through the house. After a thorough search, not finding the object of it, he withdrew.

Alexandrovich had informed on three other persons, including the spy. His testimony was weakened by the escape of Peter Polizoff, who was known to be his friend, but since he was kept under surveillance by the government from the time he gave the information to the attempted arrest it was not believed that he had warned the man be accused. Indeed, as soon as the accusation was made a party was sent to arrest Polizoff.

As soon as the officials who had failed to find Peter retired, Katia, who was not known to them as Alexandrovich's sister, left the house and later in the day went home. She found her brother there, but the man to whom he had betrayed his friends had gone. Alexis looked at his sister eagerly and asked where she had been. Between a brother and a lover a woman will stand against the one and for the other. Katia, with fire in her eye, accused him of his treachery and showered imprecations upon him. Then, remembering that her brother had degraded himself, she burst into a passion of tears.

"You warned him?" asked Alexis.

"Yes."

"And he escaped?"

"He did."

"Thank heaven! I did not intend that he should; it was not in the plan. But I doubt if I shall be believed to have warned him."

"What do you mean?" asked Katia.

Her brother told her that a spy had got into the circle and was ready to betray every member. Playing government spy, Alexis had gained the confidence of the government by denouncing his best friend and two others besides the spy, who, with the rest, would be sent at once to Siberia.

"And now," he concluded, "comes the second part of my plan. I must rescue the innocent members of our circle on their way to Siberia."

The record of the attempt to rescue the revolutionists on their way to Siberia, an attempt that was participated in by Peter Polizoff and in which Katia played the part of an arch deceiver, forms a story by itself.

The spy went on to the mines. Whether he ever succeeded in convincing the government that they had made a mistake in his case is not known. But one fact is certain—not one of those concerned in the plot that sent him to Siberia ever afterward dared live in Russia. Every one of them today is living in the United States.

Intelligence of Japanese Monkey.

A man wending his way up a mountain side in Japan sat down to rest. He was surprised by the approach of a young monkey, which, instead of showing fear, came to him and began to pluck at his garments. The expression of solicitude on the animal's face indicated something unusual. The wayfarer arose and followed the monkey to the valley below. Soon he came upon the exciting scene of a battlefield, with hundreds of monkeys engaged in a fierce encounter with a big black bear. The simians were rushing in and assaulting bruin on all sides, and every now and then the bear succeeded in laying one low. The man counted some thirty monkeys lying dead. Upon returning with companions bearing guns the first report from the rifle caused bruin and all the monkeys to take fright and disappear into the forest.
